EW Books are so perfect, in their first Editions, as to need no Improvement or Addition afterwards.

But it would be Injustice to the Publick to suppress all future Improvement, rather than offend the first Buyers. Our Customers therefore, we hope, will pardon Us, if the many Additions in this Edition do depreciate the former. The Quantity of this is more, but the Quality of that is the same: For tho' the Author found it necessary to add Paragraphs very frequently, and whole Chapters sometimes, he did not write at first with so little Thought as to need to alter it, some few Amendments excepted. And therefore the Possessors of the former Edition cannot think themselves abused.

The Author was very desirous of having the Additions printed by themselves; but the Number of 'em, and their being interspers'd in every Page, render'd that impracticable. He has now set the last Hand to it, and we hope it is so compleat as to need no more Improvement.

A Word more in Relation to the Latin Edition of this Work printed in Holland, the Publisher of which pretends it was corrected by the Author; but that being quite otherwise, we must take this Opportunity to let the World know, that the Author never saw it till it was all printed; and therefore the many Errors found in it must not be imputed to Him.

C H A P I.

Of the State of Athens till Cecrops.

L L Ages have had a great Esteem and Veneration for Antiquity ; and not only of Men, but of Families, Cities, and Countries, the most Ancient have always been accounted the most Honourable. Hence arose one of the first and most universal Disputes that ever troubled Mankind ; almost every Nation, whose first Original was not very manifest, pretending to have been of an equal Duration with the Earth itself. Thus the Egyptians, Scythians, and Phrygians phansied themselves to be the first Race of Mankind, and the Arcadians boasted that they were προσέλωσι, or before the Moon. The want of Letters did not a little contribute to these Opinions ; for almost every Colony and Plantation, wanting Means whereby to preserve the Memory of their Ancestors, and deliver them down to Posterity, in a few Generations forgot their Mother-Nation, and thought they had inhabited their own Country from the Beginning of the World.

Our Athenians had too their Share in this Vanity, and made as great and loud Pretensions to Antiquity, as the best of their Neighbours; they gave out that they were produced at the same time with the Sun (a), and assumed to themselves the honourable Name (for so they thought it) of Αυλόχθονες, which Word signifies Persons produc'd out of the same Soil that they inhabit: For it was an old Opinion, and almost every where received among the Vulgar, that in the Beginning of the World, Men, like Plants, were by some strange prolifick Virtue produced out of the fertile Womb of one common Mother, Earth; and therefore the Ancients generally called themselves Γηγενῆς, Sons of the Earth, as Hesychius informs us (b); alluding to the same Original, the Athenians sometimes stil'd themselves τίρσις, Grasshoppers; and some of them wore Grasshoppers of Gold, binding them in their Hair, as Badges of Honour, and Marks to distinguish them from others of later Duration, and less noble Extraction, because those Insects were believed to be generated out of the Ground (c); Virgil has mention'd this Custom in his Poem entituled Ciris.

Aurea solemnī comptum quem fibula ritu
Cecropiæ tereti necēbat dente cicada.*

Wherefore she did, as was her constant Care;
With Grasshoppers adorn her comely Hair,
Brac'd with a golden Buckle Attick wife.

Mr. Jo. Abell, of Linc. Coll.

Without doubt the Athenians were a very ancient Nation, and it may be, the first that ever inhabited that Country; for when Thessaly, and Peloponnesus, and almost all the fertile Regions of Greece chang'd their old Masters every Year, the Barrenness of their Soil secur'd them from foreign Invasions. Greece at that time had no constant and settled Inhabitants, but there were continual Removes, the stronger always dispossessing the weaker; and therefore they liv'd, as we say, from Hand to Mouth, and provided no more than what was necessary for present Sustainance, expecting every Day when some powerful Nation should come and displace them, as they had lately done their Predecessors (d). Amidst all these Troubles and Tumults, Attica lay secure and unmolested, being protected from foreign Enemies by means of a craggy and unfruitful Soil, that could not afford Fuel for Contention, and secur'd from intestine and civil Broils, by the quiet and peaceable Dispositions of its Inhabitants; for in those Golden Days no Affectation of Supremacy, nor any Sparks of Ambition had fired Mens Minds, but every one liv'd full of Content and Satisfaction in the Enjoyment of an equal Share of Land, and other Necessaries, with the rest of his Neighbours.

The usual Attendance of a long and uninterrupted Peace are Riches and Plenty; but in those Days, when Men lived upon the Products of their own Soil, and had not found out the Way of supplying their Wants by Traffick, the Case was quite contrary, and Peace was only the Mother of Poverty and Scarceness, producing a great many new Mouths to consume, but affording no new Supplies to satisfy them. This was soon experienced by the Athenians; for in a few Ages they were increased to such a Number, that their Country being not only unfruitful, but confined within very narrow Bounds, was no longer able to furnish them with necessary Provisions. This forced them to contrive some Means to disburthen it; and therefore they sent out Colonies to provide new Habitations, which spread themselves in the several Parts of Greece.

This sending forth of Colonies was very frequent in the first Ages of the World, and several Instances there are of it in later Times, especially amongst the Gauls and Scythians, who often left their Native Countries in vast Bodies, and, like general Inundations, overturn'd all before them. Meursius reckons to the Number of forty Plantations peopled by Athenians; but amongst them all, there was none so remarkable as that in Asia the Lefs, which they call'd by the Name of their native Country Ionia. For the primitive Athenians were nam'd Iones, and Jaones (e); and hence it came to pass, that there was a very near Affinity between the Attick and old Ionick Dialect, as Eustathius observes (f). And though the Athenians thought fit to lay aside their ancient Name, yet it was not altogether out of Use in Theseus's Reign, as appears from the Pillar erected by him in the Isthmus, to shew the Bounds of the Athenians on the one Side, and the Peloponnesians on the other; on the East-side of which was this Inscription (g),

This is not Peloponnesus, but Ionia.

And on the South-side this,

This is not Ionia, but Peloponnesus.

This Name is thought to have been given them from Javan, which bears a near Resemblance to Ιάωv; and much nearer if, as Grammarians tell us, the ancient Greeks pronounc'd the Letter α broad like the Diphthong αυ, as in our English Word All, and so Sir George Wheeler reports the modern Greeks do at this Day. This Javan was the fourth Son of Japheth, and is said to have come into Greece after the Confusion of Babel, and seated himself in Attica; and this Report receiveth no small Confirmation from the divine Writings, where the Name of Javan is in several Places put for Greece. Two Instances we have in Daniel (h); And when I am gone forth, behold the Prince of Græcia shall come. And again (i) He shall stir up all against the Realm of Græcia. Where though the vulgar Translations render it not Javan, yet that is the Word in the Original. And again in Isaiab, And I will send those that escape of them to the Nations in the Sea, in Italy, and in Greece. Where the Ti- gurgine Version, with that of Geneva, retains the Hebrew Words, and useth the Names of Tubal and Javan, instead of Italy and Greece. But the Grecians themselves, having no Knowledge of their true Ancestor, make this Name to be of much later Date, and derive it from Ion, the Son of Xuthus. This Xuthus (as Pausanias reports) having robb'd his Father Deucalion of his Treasure, convey'd himself, together with his ill-gotten Wealth into Attica, which was at that Time govern'd by Erethbeus, who courteously entertain'd him, and gave him his Daughter in Marriage, by whom he had two Sons, Ion and Achaëus; the former of which gave his Name to the Ionians, the latter to the Achæans. It is not improbable that Ion himself might receive his Name from Javan; it being a Custom observable in the Histories of all Times, to keep up the ancient Name of a Fore-Father, especially such as had been eminent in the Times he lived in, by reviving it in some of the Principal of his Posterity.

From the first peopling of Attica till the Time of King Ogyges, we have no Account of any Thing that pass'd there; only Plato (k) reports, they had a Tradition, that the Athenian Power and Glory were very great in those Days; that they were excellently skill'd both in Civil and Military Affairs, were govern'd by the justest and most equitable Laws, and lived in far greater Splendor than they had arrived to in his Time. But of the Transactions of these, and the following Ages till Theseus, or the Trojan War, little or nothing of Certainty must be expected; partly, because of the Want of Records, in rude and illiterate Ages; partly, by reason of the vast Distance of Time, wherein those Records they had (if they had any) were lost and destroy'd; and partly, through the Pride and Vain-glory of the ancient Greeks, who, out of an Affectation of being thought to have been descended from some divine Original, industriously conceal'd their Pedigrees, and obscured their ancient Histories with idle Tales, and poetical Fictions. And to use the Words of Plutarch (l): "As Historians, in their Geographical Descriptions of Countries, croud into the farthest Part of their Maps those Things they have no Knowledge of, with some such Remarks in the Margin as these; all beyond is nothing but dry and desert Sands, or Scythian Cold, or a frozen Sea; so it may very well be said of those Things that are so far removed from our Age; all beyond is nothing but monstrous and tragical Fictions; there the Poets, and there the Inventors of Fables dwell; nor is there to be expected any Thing that deserves Credit, or that carries in it any Appearance of Truth."

However I must not omit what is reported concerning Ogyges, or Ogygus, whom some will have to have been King of Thebes, some of Aegypt, some of Arcadia, but others of Attica, which is said to have been called after his Name, Ogygia (m). He is reported to have been a very potent Prince, and the Founder of several Cities, particularly of Eleufis; and Pausanias tells us farther, that he was Father to the Hero Eleufis, from whom that Town received its Name. He is said to have been contemporary with the Patriarch Jacob; about the sixty-seventh Year of whose Age he is supposed to have been born (n), others bring him as low as Moses (o). His Reign is the utmost Period the Athenian Stories or Traditions ever pretended to reach to; and therefore when they would express the great Antiquity of any thing, they call it $\Omega\gamma\upsilon\sigma\iota\Theta$, of which we have a great many Instances in several of the ancient Writers, but I shall only give you one out of Nicander's Theriaca,

(k) Timæo, (l) Theseo, (m) Stephanus Byzantin, de Urb. & Pop.

And in Allusion to the great Power he is supposed to have been possess'd of they call any thing great or potent, $\Omega\gamma\upsilon\gamma\iota\Theta$, as two learned Grammarians inform us. Hesychius, $\Omega\gamma\upsilon\gamma\iota\Theta$, παλαιῶ, ἀρχαίε, μεγάλη πᾶν. Suidas, $\Omega\gamma\upsilon\sigma\iota\Theta$, παλαιόν, ἢ ὑπερμεσεθεῖς. And therefore $\omega\gamma\upsilon\sigma\iota\Theta$ κακὰ are great and insupportable Evils; and $\omega\gamma\upsilon\sigma\iota\Theta$ εὐήθεια in Philo, extreme Folly and Stupidity. He reign'd two and thirty Years (for so Cedrenus computes them) in full Power and Prosperity, and bless'd with the Affluence of all Things that Fortune can bestow upon her greatest Favourites; but the Conclusion of his Life was no less deplorable than the former Part of it had been prosperous, for in the midst of all his Enjoyments he was surpriz'd with a sudden and terrible Inundation, which overwhelm'd not Attica only, but all Achaia too, in one common Destruction.

There is frequent Mention made in ancient Authors of several Kings that reign'd in Attica; between the Ogygian Flood and Cecrops the First. As of Porphyrion, concerning whom the Athmonians, a People in Attica, have a Tradition, that he erected a Temple to Venus Οὐρανία in their Borough (p). Also of Colænus (q); and of Periphas, who is describ'd by Antonius Liberalis (r), to have been a very virtuous Prince, and at last metamorphos'd into an Eagle. Isaac Tzetzes, in his Comment upon Lycophron, speaks of one Draco, out of whose Teeth he tells us, it was reported that Cecrops sprung; and this Reason some give for his being call'd $\Delta\iota\tau\upsilon\sigma$. Lastly, to mention no more, Pausanias and Stephanus speak of Aëæus, or Aëæon, from whom some will have Attica to have been call'd Aëæ; and this Name frequently occurs in the Poets, particularly in Lycophron, a studious Affecter of antiquated Names, and obsolete Words:

Ἀκτῆς δὲ μέρου γυφενῶς σκῆπτρῶχίας.

But small Credit is to be given to these Reports, for we are assured by Philochorus, an Author of no less Credit than Antiquity, as he is quoted by Africanus, that Attica was so much wasted by the Ogygian Deluge, and its Inhabitants reduced to so small a Number, that they lived an hundred and ninety Years, from the Time of Ogyges to Cecrops, without any King at all; and Eusebius concurs with him in this Opinion (s).

C H A P. II.

Of the State of Athens from Cecrops to Theseus.

IT is agreed almost on all Hands, that Cecrops was the first that gather'd together the poor Peasants that lay dispersed here and there in Attica, and having united them into one Body, (tho' not into one City, for that was not effected till many Ages after) constituted among them one Form of Government, and took upon himself the Title of King.

Most Nations at the first were governed by Kings, who were usually Persons of great Worth and Renown, and for their Courage, Prudence, and other Virtues, promoted to that Dignity by the general Consent and Election of the People; who yielded them Obedience out of Willingness, rather than Necessity; out of Advice, rather than by Compulsion: And Kings rather chose to be obey'd out of Love, and Esteem of their Virtues, and Fitness to govern, than by the Force of their Arms, and out of a slavish Fear of their Power. They affected no uncontrollable Dominion, or absolute Sway, but preferr'd the Good of their People, for whose Protection they knew and acknowledged themselves to have been advanced, before any covetous or ambitious Designs of their own. They expected no bended Knees, no prostrate Faces, but would condescend to converse familiarly, even with the meaner sort of their Subjects, as oft as they stood in need of their Assistance. In short, they endeavoured to observe such a just Medium in their Behaviour, and all their Actions, as might neither expose their Authority to Contempt, nor render them formidable to those, whom they chose rather to win by Kindness into a voluntary Compliance, than to awe by Severity into a forced Subjection. They proposed to themselves no other Advantage, than the Good and Welfare of their People, and made use of their Authority no farther, than as it was conducive and necessary to that End. This Dignity and Office consisted chiefly in three Things.

First, In doing Justice, in hearing Causes, in composing the Divisions, and deciding the Differences that happen'd among their Subjects, in constituting new Laws, and regulating the old (t), where they had any; but the People generally reposed such Trust and Confidence in the Justice and Equity of their Prince, that his sole Will and Pleasure pass'd for Law amongst them (u).

Secondly, In leading them to the Wars; where they did not only assist them by their good Conduct and Management of Affairs, but exposed their own Persons for the Safety and Honour of their Country, pressing forward into the thickest of their Enemies, and often encountering the most valiant of them in single Combat. And this they thought a principal Part of their Duty, judging it but reasonable, that they, who excell'd others in Honour, should surpass them too in

(u) Justin. Hist. lib. I.

Valour, and they that had the first Places at all Feasts, and publick Assemblies, should be the first also in undertaking Dangers, and exposing themselves in the Defence of their Country; and thus the Hero in Homer argues the Case with one of his Fellow-Princes,

Γλαῦκε, τίν δὴ νῶϊ τέτιμῆμέεδα μάλιςα
 Ἐδρη τε, κρέασίν τε ἰδὲ πλείοις δευάεσσιν
 Ἐν Λυκίῃ, πάντες ἧ, θεὸς ὤς, εἰσορίωσι,
 Καὶ τέμνον νεμόμεεδα μέγα Ξανθοῖο παρ' ὄχθαις,
 Καλὸν φυλακίης ἢ ἀρέρης πυροφόροιο;
 Τῶ νυν χρὴ Λυκίοισι μετὰ πρώτοισιν ἔοίηας
 Ἐσάμωρ, ἢ δὲ μάχης καυσερῆς ἀνλιγολλῆσαι. (w).

Glaucus, since us the Lycian Realms obey,
 Like Gods, and all united Homage pay,
 Since we first seated have our Goblets crown'd
 Enjoy large Farms, near Xanthus' Streams, whose Ground
 Is fertile, and beset with shady Trees around?
 Ought we not in the Battle's Front t'engage,
 And quell our furious Foes with doubled Rage?

J. A.

Thirdly, The Performance of the solemn Sacrifices, and the Care of Divine Worship was Part of the King's Business. The Lacedæmonian Kings at their Coronation were consecrated Priests of Jupiter, Ουδέ-νι, and executed that Office in their own Persons. No Man can be ignorant of Virgil's Anius, who was both King and Priest.

Rex Anius, Rex idem hominum, Phœbique sacerdos.

We seldom meet with a Sacrifice in Homer, but some of the Heroes, and those the Chief of all then present, are concern'd in the Performance of the holy Ceremonies; and so far was it from being thought an Act of Condescension, or any way below their Dignity and Grandeur, that they thought it an Accession to the rest of their Honours; and the inferior Worshipers were no less careful to reserve this Piece of Service for them, than they were to give them the most honourable Places in the Banquets; which they refresh'd themselves with, after the Sacrifices were ended.

Let us now return to Cecrops, whom, as soon as he had establish'd himself in his new rais'd Kingdom, we shall find employ'd in laying the Model of a City, which he design'd for the Seat of his Government, and Place of his constant Residence. And as the most commodious Place in his Dominions for this Purpose, he pitch'd upon a Rock, strongly fortify'd by Nature against any Assaults, and situated in a large Plain near the Middle of Attica, calling both the City, and the Territory round it, after his own Name, Cecropia. Afterwards, when the Athenians increased in Power and Number, and fill'd the adjacent Plains with Buildings, this was the Acropolis or Citadel.

Then for the better Administration of Justice, and the Promotion of mutual Intercourse among his Subjects, he divided them into four Tribes, the Names of which were,

1. Κεκροπίς.
2. Αὐτόχθων.
3. Ακταία.
4. Παραλία.

And finding his Country pretty well flock'd with Inhabitants, partly by the Coming in of Foreigners, partly by the Concourfe of People from every Corner and Lurking-hole in Attica, where they had before lain, as it were, buried in Privacy, he instituted a Poll, causing every one of the Men to cast a Stone into a Place appointed by him for that Purpose, and upon Computation, he found them to be in Number twenty thousand, as the Scholiast upon Pindar reports out of Philochorus (x).

But the Soil being in its own Nature unfruitful, and the People unskill'd in tilling and improving it to the best Advantage, such Multitudes could not have fail'd of being reduc'd in a short Time to the greatest Extremities, had not Cecrops taught them the Art of Navigation, and thereby supply'd them with Corn from Sicily and Africa (y).

Besides this, he was the Author of many excellent Laws and Constitutions, especially touching Marriage, which, according to his Appointment, was only to be celebrated betwixt one Man and one Woman, whereas before promiscuous Mixtures had been allow'd of amongst them, as the Poet intimates,

Κάδμῳ ἐν γλάσσοιο διδάσκεται ὄργανα φωνῆς,
Θεσμιὰ Σόλων ἀχραντα, καὶ ἔννομον Ἀτθίδι πύκνη,
Συζυγίης ἀλύτοιο σωπείδα δίζυγα Κέκροϋ (z).

With curious Art Cadmus did Letters frame,
The Law's Invention from wise Solon came,
But Cecrops glories in the Marriage Tie
Of the united Pair.

J. A.

Nor did he only prescribe Rules for the Conduct of their Lives, with respect to one another, but was the first that introduced a Form of Religion, crected Altars in Honour of the Gods, and instructed his People in what Manner they were to worship them.

In the Reign of Pandion, the fifth King of Athens, Triptolemus is said to have taught the Athenians how to sow and manure the Ground, and to have enacted several useful and necessary Laws, three of which we find quoted by Porphry out of Xenocrates (a);

1. Honour your Parents.
2. Make Oblations of your Fruits to the Gods,
3. Hurt not living Creatures.

Cecrops, the second of that Name, and the seventh King of Athens, divided his Dominions into twelve Cities, or large Boroughs, compelling his Subjects to leave their separate Habitations, and unite together for the replenishing of them (b). Their Names were these, as they are deliver'd by Strabo in his Description of Attica (c): Cecropia, Tetrapolis, Exacria, Declea, Elufis, Aphidnæ, Thoriccus, Brauron, Cytheris, Sphettus, Cepbiffia, and Phalerus. But Cecropia still continued the chief Seat of the Empire, though each of these Cities (they are the Words of Sir George Wheeler, who refers this Division to Cecrops the First, led thereunto by the Authority of Eusebius, and some others) had distinct Courts of Judicature, and Magistrates of their own; and were so little subject to their Princes, the Successors of Cecrops, that they seldom or never had recourse to them, save only in Cases of imminent and publick Danger; and did so absolutely order their own Concerns, that sometimes they waged War against each other without the Advice or Consent of their Kings.

In this State continued Attica, till the Reign of Pandion, the second of that Name, and eighth King of the Athenians, who was deprived of his Kingdom by the Sons of his Uncle Metion; who themselves did not long possess what they had thus unjustly gotten, being driven out of it by the more powerful Arms of Pandion's four Sons, viz. Ægeus, Lycus, Pallas, and Nisus. These, having expell'd the Metionidæ, divided the Kingdom amongst themselves, as Apollodorus reports. But others are of Opinion, that Pandion himself, being restored to the quiet Possession of his Kingdom by the joint Assistance of them all, by his last Will and Testament divided it into four Parts, bequeathing to each of them his Proportion. And though it is not agreed amongst ancient Writers, which Part fell to every Man's Lot; yet thus much is consented to on all Hands, that the Sovereignty of Athens was assign'd to Ægeus, for which he was extremely envy'd by his Brethren; and so much the more, for that, as most think, he was not the begotten, but only adopted Son of Pandion; and for this Reason it was (saith Plutarch) that Ægeus commanded Æthra, the Mother of Theseus, to send her Son, when arrived at Man's Estate, from Træzen, the Place where he was born, to Athens with all Secrecy, and to enjoin him to conceal, as much as possible, his Journey from all Men, because he fear'd extremely the Pallantidæ, who, did continually mutiny against him, and despis'd him for his want of Children, they themselves being fifty Brothers, all the Sons of Pallas. However, as the same Author tells us, they were with-held from breaking out into open Rebellion, by the Hopes and Expectation of recovering the Kingdom, at least after Ægeus's Death, because he was without Issue; but as soon as Theseus appear'd, and was acknowledged rightful Successor to the Crown, highly resenting, that first Ægeus, Pandion's Son only by Adoption, and not at all related to the Family of Eriatheus, and then Theseus, one of another Country, and a perfect Stranger to their Nation, should obtain the Kingdom of their Ancestors, they broke out into open Acts of Hostility ; but were soon overcome and dispersed by the Courage and Conduct of Theseus.

Theseus, having deliver'd the Country from intestine Seditions, proceeded in the next Place to free it from foreign Slavery. The Athenians having barbarously murder'd Androgeus, the Son of Minos, King of Crete, were obliged by his Father to send a novennial, or septennial, or, as others, an annual Tribute of seven young Men, and as many Virgins into Crete, where they were shut up within the Labyrinth, and there wandered about, till finding no possible Means of making their Escape, they perished with Hunger, or else were devour'd by the Minotaur, a terrible Monster, compounded of the different Shapes of Man and Bull. The Time of sending this Tribute being come, Theseus put himself amongst the Youths that were doom'd to go to Crete, where having arrived, he received of Ariadne, the Daughter of King Minos, who had fallen in Love with him, a Clew of Thread, and being instructed by her in the Use of it, which was to conduct him thro' all the Windings of the Labyrinth, escap'd out of it, having first slain the Minotaur, and so return'd with his Fellow Captives in Triumph to Athens.

In his Return, thro' an Excess of Joy for the happy Success of his Voyage, he forgot to hang out the white Sail, which should have been the Token of their Safety to Aegeus, who sat expecting them upon the Top of a Rock ; and as soon as their Ship came in View with a black, and, as it were, mourning Sail, knowing nothing of their Success, he threw himself headlong into the Sea, and so made way to Theseus's more early Succession to the Crown, than could otherwise have been expected. And to this Time, from the Reign of Cecrops the First, the Government and State of Athens continued with little Alteration.

C H A P. III.

Of the State of Athens, from Theseus to the Decennial Archons.

THESSEUS, being by the fore-mention'd Accident advanced to the Regal Scepter, soon found the Inconvenience of having his People dispersed in Villages, and canton'd up and down the Country. " Therefore for the Remedy of this Evil, he framed in his Mind (saith " Plutarch) a vast and wonderful Design of gathering together all the " Inhabitants of Attica into one Town, and making them one People " of one City, that were before dispersed, and very difficult to be as- " sembled upon any Affair, tho' relating to the common Benefit of " them all. Nay, often such Differences and Quarrels happen'd among " them, as occasion'd Blood-shed and War ; these he, by his Per- " suasions, appeas'd, and going from People to People, and from " Tribe to Tribe, propos'd his Design of a common Agreement be- " tween them. Those of a more private and mean Condition readily " embracing so good Advice ; to those of greater Power and Interest, " he

“ he promised a Common-wealth, wherein Monarchy being laid aside,
 “ the Power should be in the People ; and that, reserving to himself
 “ only to be continued the Commander of their Arms, and the Pre“ server of their Laws, there should be an equal Distribution of all “ things else among them, and by this Means he brought most of them “ over to his Proposal. The rest fearing his Power, which was already “ grown very formidable, and knowing his Courage and Resolution, “ chose rather to be persuaded, than forced into a Compliance.
 “ He then dissolved all the distinct Courts of Justice, and Council-“ Halls, and Corporations, and built one common Prytaneum, and “ Council-Hall, where it stands to this Day. And out of the old and “ new City he made one, which he named Athens, ordaining a com“ mon Feast and Sacrifice to be for ever observed, which he called “ Panathenæa, or the Sacrifice of all the United Athenians. He institu“ ted also another Sacrifice, for the Sake of Strangers that would come
 “ to fix at Athens, call'd Μετρίαια, which is yet celebrated on the 16th “ Day of Hecatombæon. Then, as he had promised, he laid down his “ Kingly Power, and settled a Common-wealth, having entred upon “ this great Change, not without Advice from the Gods. For sending “ to consult the Delphian Oracle, concerning the Fortune of his new “ Government and City, he received this Answer :

Αἰγείδη Θησεῦ, Πιθηίδῳ ἐκγονο κέρης,
 Πολλαῖς τι πολίεσσι Πατὴρ ἐμὸς ἐσκαίεθηκε.
 Τέρμασι δ' κλωστήρας ἐν ὑμείεσσι πολιέβρω.
 Ἄλλα σὺ μήτε λίην πεπονημένῳ ἐνδοθὶ θυμῷ
 Βελεύειν, ἀσκὸς γὰρ ἐν αἰδέματι ποσλοποσεύσῃ.

Hear, Theseus, Pittheus Daughter's Son,
 Hear what Jove for thee has done,
 In the great City thou hast made ;
 He has, as in a Store-house, laid,
 The settled Periods and fix'd Fates
 Of many Cities, mighty States.
 But know thou neither Fear nor Pain,
 Sollicit not thyself in vain :
 For like a Bladder that does bide
 The Fury of the angry Tide,
 Thou from high Waves unhurt shalt bound,
 Always tost, but never drown'd.

(Mr. Duke.)

“ Which Oracle, they say, one of the Sibyls, a long time after, did in a “ manner repeat to the Athenians in this Verse,

Ἀσκὸς βαπτιζῆ, δύναι δὲ τοι θέμις ἐστὶ.

Thou, like a Bladder, may'st be wet, but never drown'd.

“ Farther yet designing to enlarge his City, he invited all Strangers “ to come and enjoy equal Privileges with the Natives ; and some are “ of Opinion, that the common Form of Proclamation in Athens, “ Δεῦρ ἴτε πάντες λῶ, Come hither all ye People, were the Words that “ Theseus

“ Theseus caused to be proclaim'd, when he thus set up a Commonwealth, consisting in a Manner of all Nations.

“ For all this, he suffer'd not his State by the promiscuous Multitude that flow'd in, to be turn'd into Confusion and Anarchy, and left without any Order or Degrees, but was the first that divided the Commonwealth into three distinct Ranks, Εὐπατρίδαι, Γεωμήστοι, Δημιουργοὶ, i. e. Noblemen, Husbandmen, and Artificers. To the Nobility he committed the Choice of Magistrates, the Teaching and Dispensing of the Laws, and the Interpretation of all holy and religious Things; the whole City, as to all other Matters, being as it were reduced to an Equality, the Nobles excelling the rest in Honour, the Husbandmen in Profit, and the Artificers in Number. And Theseus was the first, who, as Aristotle says, out of an Inclination to popular Government, parted with the Regal Power; which Homer also seems to intimate in his Catalogue of the Ships, where he gives the Name of Δῆμος, or People, to the Athenians only.

In this Manner Theseus settled the Athenian Government, and it continued in the same State till the Death of Codrus the seventeenth and last King, a Prince more renown'd for his Bravery, than Fortune. For Attica (d) being invaded by the Dorians, or Spartans, or Peloponnesians, or, as some will have it, by the Thracians, the Oracle was consulted about it, and answer made, that the Invaders should have Success, if they did not kill the Athenian King; whereupon Codrus, preferring his Country's Safety before his own Life, disguised himself in the Habit of a Peasant, and went to a Place not far from the Enemy's Camp, where picking a Quarrel with some of them, he obtained the Death which he so much desired. The Athenians, being advertis'd of what had happened, sent an Herald to the Enemy to demand the Body of their King, who were so much dishearten'd by this unexpected Accident, that they immediately broke up their Camp, and left off their Enterprize without striking another Blow.

The Athenians, out of Reverence to Codrus's Memory, would never more have any Governor by the Name or Title of King, but were govern'd by Archontes, whom they allowed indeed to continue in their Dignity as long as they lived, and when they died, to leave it to their Children; and therefore most Writers reckon them rather amongst the Kings, than the Archontes that succeeded them, who were permitted to rule only for a certain Time; yet they differ'd from the Kings in this, that they were in a manner subject to the People, being obliged to render an Account of their Management, when it should be demanded. The first of these was Medon, the eldest Son of Codrus, from whom the thirteen following Archontes were surnam'd Medontidæ, as being descended from him. During their Government the Athenian State suffer'd no considerable Alteration, but was carried on with so great Ease and Quietness, that scarce any Mention is made of any memorable Action done by any of them, and the very Names of some of them are almost quite forgotten.

(d) Tull. Tuscul. Quæst. Justin. I. II. Vel. Patere. lib. II. Eusebius.

Thus I have endeavour'd to give you a short Account of the Athenian State, whilst it was govern'd by Kings, who were in all thirty, and ruled Athens by the Space of seven hundred ninety-four Years, as the learned Meursius has computed them; to which, if you add the two and thirty Years of Ogyges, and the Interval of an hundred and ninety Years, in which no Footsteps of any Government are to be found, the Number will amount to one thousand and twelve Years.

C H A P. IV.

Of the State of Athens, from the Decennial Archons to Philip of Macedon.

THE People of Athens continually got Ground of their Superiors, gaining something by every Alteration that was made in the State till at length, by little and little, the whole Government came into the Hands of the Commonalty. Theseus and Medon made considerable Abatements in their Power, but what remain'd of it, they kept in their own Hands as long as they lived, and preserved the Succession entire to their Posterity. But in the first Year of the seventh Olympiad, both the Power and Succession devolved upon the People; who, the better to curb the Pride, and restrain the Power of their Archons, continued them in their Government only for ten Years; and the first that was created in this Manner, was Charops, the Son of Æschylus. But they would not rest contented here, for about seventy Years after, that the Archons might be wholly dependent on the Citizens Favour, it was agreed that their Authority should last but for one Year, at the End of which they were to give an Account of their Administration; stration; and the first of these was Cleon, who entred upon his Charge in the third Year of the twenty-fourth Olympiad (e).

In the thirty-ninth Olympiad Draco was Archon, and was the Author of many new Laws, in which there is very little worth our Notice, only that they were cruel and inhuman, punishing almost every trivial Offence with Death. Infomuch that those that were convicted of Idleness were to die, and those that stole a Cabbage, or an Apple, to suffer as the Villains that committed Sacrilege or Murder; and therefore Demades is remark'd for saying, that Draco's Laws were not written with Ink but Blood: And he himself being ask'd, why he made Death the Punishment of most Offences? Reply'd, small Crimes deserve that, and I have no higher for the greatest.

But all these, that only excepted which concern'd Murder, were repeal'd in the third Year of the forty-sixth Olympiad, in which Solon, being Archon, was intrusted with the Power of new-modelling the Commonwealth, and making Laws for it. They gave him Power over all their Magistrates, (says Plutarch) their Assemblies, Courts, Senates; that he should appoint the Number, Times of Meeting, and what Estate they should have that could be capable of being admitted to them, and to dissolve or continue any of the present Constitutions, according to his Judgment and Discretion (f).

Solon finding the People variously affected, some inclined to a Monarchy, others to an Oligarchy, others to a Democracy, the rich Men powerful and haughty, the Poor groaning under the Burden of their Oppression, endeavour'd as far as was possible to compose all their Differences, to ease their Grievances, and give all reasonable Persons Satisfaction. In the Prosecution of this Design he divided the Athenians into four Ranks, according to every Man's Estate; those who were worth five hundred Medimns of liquid and dry Commodities he placed in the first Rank, calling them πεντακοσιομέδιμνοι. The next were the Horsemen, call'd ἑπτάδα τελέωνες, being such as were of Ability to furnish out a Horse, or were worth three hundred Medimns. The third Class consisted of those that had two hundred Medimns, who were call'd δωκι. In the last he placed all the rest, calling them ἑτέροις, and allow'd them not to be capable of bearing any Office in the Government, only gave them Liberty to give their Votes in all publick Assemblies; which, tho' at the first it appear'd inconsiderable, was afterwards found to be a very important Privilege; for it being permitted any Man after the Determination of the Magistrates to make an Appeal to the People assembled in Convocation, hereby it came to pass, that Causes of the greatest Weight and Moment were brought before them. And thus he continued the Power and Magistracy in the Hands of the rich Men, and yet neither expos'd the inferior People to their Cruelty and Oppression, nor wholly deprived them of having a Share in the Government. And of this Equality he himself makes mention in this Manner,

(e) Clement Stromat, I.(f) Plutarch, in Solone.

Δῆμῳ μὲν γὰρ ἔδωκα πόσον κέρδιον ὅσον ἐπαρκεί,
 Τιμῆς ἔτ' ἀρετῶν ἔτ' ἐπορεξάμην.
 Οἳ δ' ἔχον δύναμιν, καὶ χρήμασιν ἦσαν ἀγνοῖ,
 Καὶ τοῖς ἐπρασάμην μηδ' ἐν ἀεικίᾳ ἔχεν.
 Ἔβην δ' ἀμφιβαλὼν κράτερὸν σάκεον ἀμφοτέροισι,
 Νικᾶν δ' ἐκ εἴας ἀμφοτέρους ἀδίκως.

What Power was fit, I did on all bestow,
 Nor rais'd the Poor too high, nor prefs'd too low;
 The rich that rul'd, and every Office bore,
 Confin'd by Laws they could not prefs the Poor:
 Both Parties I secur'd from lawless Might,
 So none prevail'd upon another's Right.

Mr. Creech.

Not many Years after, the City being divided into Factions, Pisistratus, by a Stratagem, seized upon the Government: For having, on set Purpose, wounded himself, he was brought into the Market-place in a Chair, where he expos'd his Wounds to the People, assuring them that he had been so dealt with by the adverse Party for his Affection to their Government. The unthinking Multitude were easily drawn by so specious a Pretence into a Compassion of his Misfortunes, and Rage against his Enemies; and upon the Motion of one Ariston, granted him fifty Men arm'd with Clubs to guard his Person. The Decree being pass'd, Pisistratus list'd the Number of Men that were allow'd him, and besides them as many more as he pleas'd, no Man observing what he was a doing, till at length, in Requital of the City's Kindness and Care of him, he seized the Citadel, and deprived them of their Liberty. After this Pisistratus lived thirty Years, seventeen of which he was in Possession of the Government of Athens; but the State continued all that Time unsettled, and in continual Motions, the City-Party sometimes prevailing against him and expelling him, sometimes again being worsted by him, and forced to let him return in Triumph.

He was succeeded by his Sons Hipparchus and Hippias, whom Heraclides calls Thessalus; the former of which was slain by Aristogiton, and the latter about three or four Years after compelled by Cleisthenes, who called to his Assistance the banish'd Alcæonidæ and the Lacedæmonians, to relinquish his Government, and secure himself by a dishonourable Flight. Being thus banish'd his Country, he fled into Persea, where he lived many Years, persuading Darius to the Enterprize upon Athens, which at length, to his eternal Shame and Dishonour he undertook. For levying a numerous Host of Men, he entred the Athenian Territories, where both he and his whole Army were totally defeated, by an inconsiderable Number of Men, under the Conduct of Miltiades, in that famous Battle of Marathon. This Victory was obtained twenty Years after Hippias's Expulsion. And thus the Athenians recover'd their Laws and Liberties, about sixty-eight Years after they had been deprived of them by Pisistratus.

After this Success, they continued in a flourishing Condition for three and thirty Years, but then the Scene changed, and reduced them almost almost to the lowest Ebb of Fortune. Xerxes, in Revenge of his Predecessor's Defeat, invaded their Territories with an Army (as some say) of seventeen hundred thousand Men, and forced them to quit their City, and leave it a Prey to the insulting Barbarians, who took it without any considerable Resistance, and laid it in Ashes; and in the Year following his Lieutenant Mardonius, in Imitation of his Master's Example, burn'd it a second Time. But these Storms were soon blown over by the Wisdom and Courage of Themistocles and Aristides, who totally defeated the Persian Fleet at Salamis, and seconded that Victory by another of no less Importance over Mardonius at Plataea, whereby the Barbarians were quite driven out of Greece, and Athens restored to her ancient Government, arising out of her Ruins more bright and glorious than ever she had been before.

But the State suffer'd some Alterations, for first, Aristides, a Person (as Plutarch assures us) of a mean Extraction, and meaner Fortune, being, in Consideration of his eminent Virtues, and signal Services to the Common-wealth, prefer'd to the Dignity of an Archon, repeal'd Solon's Law, by which the Θῆτες, or lowest Order of People, were made incapable of bearing any Office in the Government. And after him Pericles, having lessen'd the Power of the Areopagites, brought in a confused Ochlocracy, whereby the Populace, and basest of the Rabble, obtain'd as great a Share in the Government, as Persons of the highest Birth and Quality.

Notwithstanding these Alterations at Home, all Things were carried on with great Success Abroad: The Athenians by the Help of their Fleet, on which they laid out their whole Strength, when Xerxes forced them to quit their City, became sole Lords of the Sea, and made themselves Masters of the greatest Part of the Ægean Islands: And having either forced the rest of the Grecians into Subjection, or aw'd them into a Confederacy, went on Conquerors to the Borders of Ægypt, and had (as Aristophanes reports) a thousand Cities under their Dominions.

But afterwards Things succeeding ill in Sicily, under the Command of Nicias, and some other Troubles arising in the Common-wealth, the principal Men of Athens, being wearied with the People's Insolency, took this Opportunity to change the Form of Government, and bring the Sovereignty into the Hands of a few. To which Purpose conspiring with the Captains that were Abroad, they caused them to set up an Aristocracy in the Towns of their Confederates; and in the mean time, some, that were most likely to oppose this Innovation, being slain at Athens, the Commonalty were so dismay'd, that none durst open his Mouth against the Conspirators, whose Number they knew not; but every Man was afraid of his Neighbour, lest he should have a hand in the Plot. In this general Consternation, the Government of Athens was usurp'd by four hundred, who, preserving in Shew the ancient Form of Proceeding, caused all Matters to be propounded to the People, and concluded upon by the greater Part of the Voices; but the Things propounded were only such, as had been first agreed upon among themselves; neither had the Commonalty any other Liberty, than only that of approving and giving Consent; for whosoever presumed med to take upon him any farther, was quickly dispatch'd out of the Way, and no Enquiry made after the Murderers. By these Means many Decrees were made, all tending to the Establishment of this new Authority, which nevertheless endur'd not long; for the Fleet and Army, which were then at the Isle of Samos, altogether detesting these tyrannical Proceedings of the four hundred Usurpers, recall'd Alcibiades from his Banishment; and partly out of Fear of him, partly because they found the Citizens incens'd against them, the Tyrants voluntarily resign'd their Authority, and went into Banishment.

Yet was not this Alteration of Government a full Restitution of the Sovereign Command to the People, or whole Body of the City, but only to five thousand, whom the four hundred (when their Authority began) had pretended to take to them as Assistants in the Government; herein seeming to do little or no Wrong to the Commonalty, who seldom assembled in a greater Number; and therefore no Decrees were pass'd in the Name of the four hundred, but all was said to be done by the five thousand; and the Usurpers were call'd (says (g) Plato) πεντακίχλιοι, τετρακόσιοι ἢ ὄντες, five thousand, tho' they did not exceed four hundred. But now, when the Power was come indeed into the Hands of so many, it was soon agreed, that Alcibiades and his Friends should be recall'd from Exile by the Citizens, as they had before been by the Soldiers; and that the Army at Samos should be requested to undertake the Government, which was forthwith reform'd according to the Soldiers Desire.

This Establishment of Affairs at Home was immediately seconded with good Success from Abroad, for by the Help of Alcibiades they in a short Time obtain'd several very important Victories; but the giddy Multitude being soon after incens'd against him, he was banish'd a second Time (b). His Absence had always before been fatal to the Athenians, but never so much as at this Time; for their Navy at Ægospotamos, thro' the Carelessness of the Commanders, was betray'd into the Hands of Lyfander, the Lacedæmonian Admiral, who took and sunk almost the whole Fleet, so that of two or three hundred Sail of Ships, there escap'd not above eight.

After this Victory, Lyfander, joining his own Forces with those of Agis and Pausanias, Kings of Sparta, march'd directly to Athens, which was surrender'd to them upon Terms, whereby the Athenians obliged themselves to pull down the long Walls, by which the City was join'd to the Piræus, or Haven, and deliver up all their Naval Forces, only ten, or as some say, twelve Ships excepted. Nay, there was a Consultation held whether the City should be utterly destroy'd, and the Lands about it laid waste; and Agis had carried it in the Affirmative, had not Lyfander oppos'd him, urging, that one of the Eyes of Greece ought not to be pluck'd out. However, he forc'd them to alter their Form of Government, and change their Democracy into an Oligarchy, a State ever affected by the Lacedæmonians.

In Compliance therefore with the Commands of their Conquerors,

(g) Alcibiades. (b) Diodor. Sic. lib. XII. Xenophon, Hist. Græc. lib. II. Justin. lib. V.
C the

the People of Athens chose thirty Governors, commonly call'd thirty Tyrants, the Names of which you may see in Xenophon. These were chosen with a Design to compile a Body of their Laws, and make a Collection of such ancient Statutes, as were fittest to be put in Practice in that Juncture of Affairs, which were call'd καινοὶ νόμοι, or new Laws. And to this Charge was annexed the supreme Authority, and the whole Government of the City entrusted in their Hands. At first they seem'd to proceed with some Shew of Justice; and apprehending such troublesome Fellows as were odious to the City, but could not be taken hold off by the Laws, condemn'd them to Death, But having afterwards obtained a Guard from the Spartans, to secure the City. (as was pretended) to their Obedience, they soon discover'd what they had been aiming at, for they sought no more after base and detested Persons, but invaded the leading and principal Men of the City, sending arm'd Men from House to House, to dispatch such as were like to make any Head against their Government. And to add the greater Strength to their Party, and Colour to their Proceedings, they selected three thousand of such Citizens, as they thought fittest for their Purpose, and gave them some Part of the publick Authority, disarming all the rest. Being confirm'd with this Accession of Strength, they proceeded in their bloody Designs with more Heat and Vigour than before, putting to Death all that were possess'd of Estates, without any Form of Justice, or so much as any the least Pique or Grudge against them, only that their Riches might fall into their Hands. Nay, so far were they transported with Cruelty and Covetousness, that they agreed that every one of them should name his Man, upon whose Goods he should seize, by putting the Owner to Death; and when Theramenes, one of their own Number, profess'd his Detestation of so horrid a Design, they condemn'd him forthwith, and compell'd him to drink Poison. This Theramenes was at the first a mighty Stickler for the Tyrants Authority, but when they began to abuse it by defending such outrageous Practices, no Man more violently opposed it than he; and this got him the Nick-name of Κόθορον, or Jack of both Sides, ὁ δὲ κόθορον ἀρμόττειν μὴ τοῖς ποσὶν ἀμφότεροις δοκεῖ, from Cotburnus, which was a Kind of a Shoe that fitted both Feet.

At length the Athenians, to the Number of seventy, that had fled to Thebes, going voluntary into Banishment to secure themselves from the Tyrants, entred into a Conspiracy against them, and under the Conduct of Thrasylbulus seized upon Phyle, a strong Castle in the Territory of Athens, and increasing their Strength and Numbers, by little and little, so far prevail'd against them, that they were forc'd to retire to Sparta, and then all their Laws were repeal'd, and the upstart Form of Government utterly dissolved. And thus the Athenians regain'd their Liberty, and were re established in the peaceable Enjoyment of their Lands and Fortunes in the fourth Year of the ninety-fourth Olympiad. And to prevent all future Jealousies and Quarrels amongst themselves, they proclaim'd an Ἀμνησία or Act of Oblivion, whereby all, that had been concern'd in the Outrages and Barbarities committed during the Sovereignty of the Tyrants, were admitted to Pardon.

Thraſybulus having thus freed his Country from the heavy Yoke of the Lacedæmonians, Conon eſtabliſh'd it in all its ancient Privileges and Immunities, by another ſignal Victory at Cnidus, wherein he gave a total Deſeat to the Lacedæmonian Fleet. And having by this Means regain'd the Sovereignty of the Seas, they began again to take Courage, and aim'd now at nothing leſs than the Reſtauration of Athens to her ancient Glory; and Fortune was not wanting in ſome Meaſure to further their great Deſign; for they not only reduced the Iſle of Lesbos, Byzantium, Chalcedon, and other Places thereabouts to their former Obedience, but raiſed Athens once more to be the moſt potent, and the principal City in all Greece.

In this State ſhe continued for ſome Years, till the Thebans, who had been raiſed from one of the moſt inconfiderable States in Greece to great Power, by the wiſe Conduct and great Courage of Epaninondas, put a Stop to her Grandeur, and diſputed the Sovereignty with her; but this Conteſt was ſoon decided by the haſty Death of Epaninondas, at the famous Battle of Mantineæ, which put an End to the Theban Greatneſs; which as it was raiſed, and maintain'd, ſo it likewiſe perish'd with that great Man. So great Alterations are the Wiſdom and Courage of one Man able to effect in the Affairs of whole Kingdoms.

The Death of Epaninondas proved no leſs fatal to the Athenians than the Thebans; for now there being none whoſe Virtues they could emulate, or whoſe Power they could fear, they lorded it without a Rival, and, being glutted with too much Proſperity, gave themſelves over to Idleneſs and Luxury; they ſlighted the Virtue of their Anceſtors; their hard and thrifty Way of living they laugh'd at; the publick Revenues, which uſed to be employ'd in paying the Fleets and Armies, they expended upon Games and Sports, and lavishly profuſed them in ſumptuous Preparations for Feſtivals; they took greater Pleaſure in going to the Theatre, and hearing the inſpid Jeſts of a Comedian, than in manly Exercises and Feats of War; prefer'd a Mimick, or a Stage-player, before the moſt valiant and experienced Captain; nay, they were ſo beſotted with their Pleaſures, that they made it capital for any Man to propoſe the re-eſtabliſhing their Army, or converting the publick Revenues to the Maintenance of it, as Libanius obſerves (b).

This degenerate Diſpoſition of theirs, and the reſt of the Greeks, who were alſo drown'd in the ſame Security, gave Opportunity and Leiſure to Philip, who had been educated under the Diſcipline of Epaninondas and Pelopidas, to raiſe the Macedonians from a mean and obſcure Condition to the Empire of all Greece and Aſia; as Juſtin hath obſerved (i). And this Deſign was projected and begun by Philip, but atchieved and perfected by his Son Alexander the Great.

C H A P. V.

Of the State of Athens, from Philip of Macedon to its Delivery by the Romans.

THE Athenians and the rest of the Grecians made some Resistance against the victorious Arms of Philip, but were overthrown in a pitch'd Battle at Chæronea, in the third Year of the CXth Olympiad. This Defeat put an End to the Grecian Glory, and in a great Measure to their Liberty, which for so many Ages, and against the most puissant Monarchs, they had preserved entire till that time, but were never again able to recover it. However Philip, to the end he might be declared Captain-General of Greece against the Persians without any farther Trouble, and strengthen his Army by the Accession of their Forces, was content to forbear any farther Attempt upon the Athenians, and to permit them to enjoy a Shew of Liberty.

No sooner was Philip dead, than they revolted, and endeavour'd to free themselves from the Macedonian Yoke, but were easily brought into Subjection by Alexander, and as easily obtain'd Pardon of him, being then very eager of invading Persia, and unwilling to be diverted by taking Revenge upon those petty States, from a more noble and glorious Enterprize. And during his Life they continued quiet, not daring to move so much as their Tongues against him. Only towards the latter End of his Reign, when he was busied in the Wars with remote Countries, and not at Leisure to take Notice of every little Opposition, they refused to entertain the banish'd Persons, which Alexander had commanded should be restored in all the Cities of Greece. However, they durst not break out into open Rebellion; but gave secret Orders to Leosthenes, one of their Captains, to levy an Army in his own Name, and be ready whenever they should have Occasion for him: Leosthenes obey'd their Commands, and as soon as certain News was brought, that Alexander was dead in Persia, being join'd by some others of the Grecian States, proclaim'd open War against the Macedonians, in Defence of the Liberty of Greece. But being in the End totally defeated by Antipater, they were forced to entertain a Garrison in Munychiâ, and submit to what Condition the Conqueror pleased to impose upon them. He therefore changed their Form of Government, and instituted an Oligarchy, depriving all those that were not worth two thousand Drachms, of the Right of Suffrage; and the better to keep them quiet, all mutinous and disaffected Persons he transplanted into Thrace. And by this Means the supreme Power came into the Hands of about nine thousand.

About four Years after Antipater died, and the City fell into the Hands of Cassander, who succeeded in the Kingdom of Macedon. From him they made many Attempts to free themselves, and regain their beloved Democracy, but were in the End forced to submit themselves, in the third Year of the hundred and fifteenth Olympiad, and accept of a Garrison like to that which Antipater had imposed upon them, to live under the same Form of Government, and obey any Person that the Conqueror queror should nominate to the supreme Power in it. The Man appointed to be their Governor was Demetrius the Phalerean, who, as (k) Diogenes Laertius reports, was of the Family of Conon, and studied Philosophy under Theophrastus. He used them with all possible Kindness and Moderation, enlarg'd their Revenues, beautified their City with magnificent Structures, and restored it almost to its former Lustre; and they, in Requital of these Favours, bestow'd on him all the Honours, which in so poor a Condition they were able to give, erecting to him three hundred Statues, according to the Number of Days in the Attick Year, most of which were on Horseback (l). But all this was the Effect of Flattery and Dissimulation, rather than any real Respect to him; all his Moderation, all the Benefits he had conferr'd on them could not beget in them any sincere Affection for him; they still hated him, tho' they had no other Reason for it, than that he was set over them by Cassander; and tho' their Power was gone, yet their Spirits were still too high to brook any thing that favour'd of Tyranny. And this in a few Years was made manifest, for when Demetrius Poliorcetes, the Son of Antigonus, took up Arms, as was pretended, in Defence of the Liberty of Greece, they receiv'd him with loud Acclamations, and all possible Expressions of Joy, compell'd the Phalerean to secure himself by Flight, in his Absence condemn'd him to die, and lay in Wait to apprehend him, and bring him to Execution; and, when they could not compass his Person, vented their Rage and Malice upon his Statues, which they pull'd down with the greatest Detestation and Abhorrence, breaking some to Pieces, selling others, and drowning others; so that of three hundred there was none left remaining, except only one in the Citadel, as the forementioned Author has reported.

Demetrius Poliorcetes, having gotten Possession of the City, restored to the Athenians their popular Government, bestow'd upon them fifteen thousand Measures of Wheat, and such a Quantity of Timber as would enable them to build an hundred Gallies for the Defence of their City, and left them in full Possession of their Liberty, without any Garrison to keep them in Obédience. And so transported were the Athenians with this Deliverance, that, by a wild and extravagant Gratitude, they bestow'd upon Demetrius and Antigonus, not only the Title of Kings, tho' that was a Name they had hitherto declin'd, but call'd them their Tutelar Deities and Deliverers; they instituted Priests to them, enacted a Law, that the Ambassadors whom they should send to them, should have the same Stile and Character with those who were accusom'd to be sent to Delphi, to consult the Oracle of the Pythian Apollo, or to Elis to the Olympian Jupiter, to perform the Græcian Solemnities, and make Oblations for the Safety and Preservation of their City, whom they call'd Θεωροί. They appointed Lodgings for Demetrius in the Temple of Minerva, and consecrated an Altar in the Place where he first alighted from his Chariot, calling it the Altar of Demetrius the Alighter, and added infinite other Instances of the most gross and sordid Flattery, of which Plutarch (m) and others give us a large Account; for (says a learned modern Author) the Athenians, having forgotten how to employ their Hands, made up that Defect with their Tongues ; converting to base Flattery that Eloquence, which the Virtues of their Ancestors had suited unto more manly Arguments.

(k) Demetrius,(l) Plinii Hist. &c.(m) Demetrio,

But afterwards, when Demetrius's Fortune began to decline, he was no longer their God, or their Deliverer, but, in Requital of all his former Kindnesses, they basely deserted him, denied him Entrance into their City, and by a popular Edict made it Death for any Person so much as to propose a Treaty or Accommodation with him. Then the City being embroil'd in Civil Dissentions, one Lachares seiz'd the Government, but, upon the Approach of Demetrius, was forc'd to quit his new usurp'd Authority, and preserve himself by a timely Flight.

Thus they were a second Time in the Possession of Demetrius, who, notwithstanding their former shameful Ingratitude, received them again into Favour, bestow'd upon them an hundred thousand Bushels of Wheat, and, to ingratiate himself the more with them, advanced such Persons to publick Offices, as he knew to be most acceptable to the People. This unexpected Generosity transported them so far beyond themselves, that, at the Motion of Dromoelides an Orator, it was decreed by the unanimous Suffrage of the People, that the Haven of Piræus and the Castle of Munychia should be put into the Hands of Demetrius, to dispose of them as he pleased. And he, having learn'd by their former Inconstancy not to repose too much Trust in such humble Servants, put strong Garrisons into those two Places, and by his own Authority plac'd a third in the Museum, to the End (saith Plutarch) that those People, who had shew'd so much Levity in their Dispositions, might be kept in Subjection, and not by their future Perfidies be able to divert him from the Prosecution of other Enterprizes.

But all this Care was not sufficient to keep a People restless, and impatient of any thing that savour'd of Servitude, in Obedience ; for Demetrius's Power being again diminish'd by divers bad Successes, they made another Revolt, expell'd his Garrison, and proclaim'd Liberty to all Athenians ; and to do him the greater Disgrace, they displac'd Diphilius, who was that Year the Priest of the two Tutelar Deities, that is, Antigonus and Demetrius, and by an Edict of the People restor'd the Priesthood to its ancient Form. Again, Demetrius having recovered himself a little, and being justly enraged against them for their repeated Perfidies, laid close Siege to the City, but by the Persuasion of Craterus the Philosopher was wrought upon to quit it, and leave them once more in Possession of their Freedom.

Some time after this, Demetrius died, and was succeeded by Antigonus Gonatus, who again recover'd Athens, put a Garrison into it, and left it in the Hands of his Successor : But upon the Death of Demetrius the Son of Gonatus, the Athenians made another Attempt to regain their Liberty, and call'd in Aratus to their Assistance, who, tho' he had been signally affronted by them, and lain a long time Bed-rid of an Infirmary, yet, rather than fail the City in a time of Need, was carried thither in a Litter, and prevail'd with Diogenes the Governor, to deliver up the Piræus, Munychia, Salamis, and Sunium to the Athenians, in Consideration of an hundred and fifty Talents, whereof Aratus himself gave twenty to the City. Of all these Changes and Successes we have a large Account in Pausanias, Plutarch, and Diodorus. Not

Not long after this Re-establishment, they quarrel'd with Philip, King of Macedon, who reduc'd them to great Extremities, laid waste their Country, pull'd down all the Temples in the Villages around Athens, destroy'd all their stately Edifices, and caused his Soldiers to break in Pieces the very Stones, that they might not be serviceable in the Reparation of them; all which Losses, with a great many Aggravations, are elegantly set forth in an Oration of the Athenian Ambassadors to the Aetolians, in Livy (n). But the Romans coming to their Assistance, Philip was forc'd to forsake his Enterprize, and, being afterwards intirely defeated, left the Grecians in a full Possession of their Liberty, which, at least some Shew of it, they enjoy'd many Years, under the Roman Protection.

C H A P. VI.

Of the State of Athens, from its Confederacy with Rome, to Constantine the Great.

TH E Grecians, and others that put themselves under the Roman Protection, tho' they gilded their Condition with the specious Name of Liberty, yet were no farther free, than it pleased those in whose Power they were; they were govern'd indeed by their own Laws, and had the Privilege of electing their own Magistrates; yet their Laws were of small Force, if they seem'd any way to oppose the Roman Interest and good Pleasure; and in the Election of Magistrates, and ordering publick Affairs, tho' every Man might give his Voice which Way he pleased, yet if he thwarted the Roman Designs, or was cold in his Affection to them, or (which was all one) but warm in the Defence of the Liberties and Privileges of his Country, he was look'd upon with a jealous Eye, as a Favourer of Rebellion, and an Enemy to the Romans.

And for no other Reason a thousand of the most eminent Achæans, without any Charge, or so much as Suspicion of Treachery, were sent Prisoners to Rome; where, notwithstanding all the Testimonies of their Innocence, and the Solicitations of their Country, which never ceased to importune the Senate for their Liberty, they endured an Imprisonment of seventeen Years; which being expired, to the Number of thirty of them were released, amongst whom was Polybius, from whose impartial History we have an Account of all these Proceedings, which their own Historians endeavour to palliate, tho' they cannot deny them; all the rest either died in Prison, or, upon attempting to make their Escape, suffer'd as Malefactors.

And by these and such-like Means, whilst some sought by Flattery and Compliance to insinuate themselves into the Favour of the Romans, others out of Fear and Cowardice resolv'd to swim with the Stream, and those few, that had Courage and Resolution to appear for their Country, were little regarded; every thing was carried on according to the Desire of the Romans; and if any thing happen'd contrary to it, their Agents presently made an Appeal to the Senate, which reserv'd to themselves a Power of receiving such-like Complaints, and determining as they thought convenient; and they, that would not submit to this Decision, were proceeded against as Enemies, and forc'd by Power of Arms into Obedience. No War was to be begun, no Peace to be concluded, nor scarce their own Country to be defended without the Advice and Consent of the Senate; they were oblig'd to pay what Taxes the Senate thought fit to impose upon them; nay, the Roman Officers sometimes took the Liberty of raising Contributions of their own Accord: And tho' in the Macedonian War, upon several just Complaints made against them, the Senate was forced to put forth a Decree, that no Grecian should be oblig'd to pay any Contribution, besides such as was levied by their Order; yet if any Man refus'd to answer the Demands of any Roman Officer, he was look'd upon as an Encourager of Sedition, and in the End fared little better than those that broke out into open Rebellion.

In this State stood the Affairs of the Athenians under the Roman Government: And whether in Consideration of the Easiness of this Yoke, if compar'd with that which the Macedonians impos'd on them; or thro' Meanness of Spirit contract'd by being long accusom'd to Misfortunes; or for want of Power to assert their Liberty; or for all these Reasons, they patiently submitted themselves, seeming well satisfied with the Enjoyment of this slavish Freedom, which, in a few Ages before, they would have reject'd with the greatest Indignation, and endeavour'd to deliver themselves from it, tho' their Lives and the Remainder of their Fortunes should have been hazarded in the Enterprize.

And from this Time till the War with Mithridates, they continued without any remarkable Alterations; but either by the Persuasions of Ariston the Philosopher, or out of Fear of Mithridates's Army, they had the bad Fortune to take his Part, and receive Archestratus, one of his Lieutenants, within their Walls; at which Sylla being enrag'd laid Siege to the City, took it, and committed so merciless a Slaughter, that the very Channels in the Streets flow'd with Blood. At this Time the Piræus and Munychia were burnt to the Ground, their Walls demolish'd, their ancient Monuments destroy'd, and the whole City so defaced, that it was never able to recover its former Beauty, till the Time of Adrian (o).

This Storm being blown over, they lived in Peace till the Time of the Civil War between Cæsar and Pompey, in which they sided with Pompey, and were closely besieged by Q. Fufius Calenus, Cæsar's Lieutenant, who spoil'd and destroy'd all the adjacent Country, and seiz'd upon the Piræus, being at that Time unfortified, and a Place of little Strength: But News being brought that Pompey was totally routed, they yielded themselves into the Hands of the Conqueror, who, according to his wonted Generosity received them into Favour; and this he did out of Respect to the Glory and Virtue of their Ancestors, giving

but, that he pardon'd the Living for the Sake of the Dead, as Dion Cassius reports (p).

But it seems they still retain'd some Sparks, at least, of their old Love for popular Government; for when Cæsar was dead, they join'd themselves to Brutus and Cassius his Murderers, and, besides other Honours done to them, placed their Statues next those of Harmodius and Aristogiton, two famous Patriots that defended the Liberty of their Country against the Tyranny of Pisistratus's Sons.

Brutus and Cassius being defeated, they went over to Antony, who behaved himself very obligingly towards them and the rest of the Grecians, being fond (saith (q) Plutarch) of being styl'd a Lover of Greece, but above all, in being call'd a Lover of Athens, to which City he made considerable Presents; and, as others tell us, gave the Athenians the Dominion of the Islands of Tenus, Ægina, icus, Cea, Sciathus, and Peparethus.

Augustus, having overcome Antony, handled them a little more severely for their Ingratitude to his Father, and besides some other Privileges, as that of selling the Freedom of the City, took from them the Isle of Ægina (r). Towards the latter End of his Reign, they began to revolt, but were easily reduc'd to their former Obedience; and notwithstanding all the Cruelties, Ravages, and other Misfortunes they had suffer'd, Strabo, who flourish'd in the Reign of Tiberius Cæsar, tells us they enjoy'd many Privileges, retain'd their ancient Form of Government, and lived in a flourishing Condition in his Days (s). And Germanicus, the adopted Son of Tiberius, making a Journey that Way, honour'd them with the Privilege of having a Licitor, who was an Officer that attended upon the chief Magistrates at Rome, and was accounted a Mark of Sovereign Power.

In this Condition they remain'd with little Alteration till the Reign of Vespasian, who reduc'd Attica and all Achaia to be a Roman Province, exacting Tribute of them, and compelling them to be governed by the Roman Laws.

Under Nerva some Shadow, at least, of Liberty was restored them; but they were still under the Government of a Proconsul, and received most of their Laws from the Emperor, who also nominated the Professors in their publick Schools, and appointed them Archons; and hence it came to pass, that Adrian, before his Advancement to the Empire, was invest'd in that Office. In the same State they continued in Trajan's Time, as appears from an Epistle of Pliny (t) to Maximus, who was sent to govern Achaia, wherein he advised him to use his Power with Moderation, and tells him in particular of the Athenians, that it would be a barbarous Piece of Inhumanity, to deprive them of that Shadow and Name of Liberty, which was all that remain'd to them.

But notwithstanding the Peace and Privileges they enjoy'd under these and other Emperors of Rome, they were never able to repair those vast Losses they had suffer'd under Sylla, till the Reign of Adrian, who, in the Time of his being Archon, took a particular Affection to this City; and, when he was promoted to be Emperor, granted them very large Privileges, gave them just and moderate Laws, bestow'd on them a large Donative of Money, and annual Provisions of Corn, and the whole Island of Cephalenia; repair'd their old decay'd Castles, and restored them to their ancient Splendor, and added one whole Region of new Buildings at his own Charge, which he call'd Adrianopolis; and New Athens, as appears as well from other Records, as also from an Inscription upon an Aquæduct, begun by this Emperor, and finish'd by his Successor Antoninus.

IMP. CÆSAR. T. ÆLIUS. HADRIANUS. ANTONINUS.
 AUG. PIUS, COS. III. TRIB. POT. II. P. P.
 AQUÆDUCTUM. IN NOVIS. ATHENIS. COEPTUM. A DIVO.
 ADRIANO. PATRE. SUO. CONSUMMAVIT. DEDICA-
 VITQUE (u).

The Meaning of which is, that Antoninus had finish'd the Aquæduct in New Athens, that had been begun by his Father and Predecessor Hadrian. And from another of Gruter's Inscriptions, it appears that they acknowledged him to be the second Founder of their City.

ΑΙ Δ ΕΙΣ ΑΘΗΝΑΙ ΘΗΣΕΩΣ Η ΠΡΙΝ ΠΟΛΙΣ
 ΑΙ Δ ΕΙΣ ΑΔΡΙΑΝΟΥ Κ ΟΥΧΙ ΘΗΣΕΩΣ ΠΟΛΙΣ (w).

The Substance of which is, that Athens was formerly the City of Theseus, but New Athens belongs to Adrian. Many other Privileges this Emperor granted them, which were continued and enlarged by his Successors M. Antoninus Pius and M. Antoninus the Philosopher, the latter of which allowed them Stipends for the Maintenance of publick Professors in all Arts and Sciences, and was himself initiated amongst them.

But Severus having received some Affront from them, when he was a private Person, and studied in Athens, was resolv'd to pay them home, as soon as he was Emperor, and for no other Reason, as 'tis thought, deprived them of a great Part of their Privileges (x).

Valerian was more favourable to them, and permitted them to rebuild their City-Walls, which had lain in Rubbish between three and four hundred Years, from the Time that Sylla dismantled them (y).

But these Fortifications could not protect them from the Fury of the Goths, who under Gallienus, as Zosimus; or Claudius, as Cedrenus reports, made themselves Masters of it; but were soon driven out of their new Conquest by Cleodemus, who having escaped the Fury of those Barbarians, and got together a considerable Number of Men and Ships, defeated Part of them in a Sea-fight, and forced the rest to quit the City, and provide for their Safety by an early Flight (z). One Thing remarkable Cedrenus reports of the Goths, that when they had plunder'd the City, and heap'd up an infinite Number of Books, with a Design to burn them, they desisted from that Purpose for this Reason, viz. That the Greeks, by employing their Time upon them, might be diverted from martial Affairs.

C H A P. VII.

Of the State of Athens from Constantine the Great.

TOWARDS the Declination of the Roman Greatness, the chief Magistrate of Athens was call'd by the Name of Στρατηγός, i. e. Duke; but Constantine the Great, besides many other Privileges granted to the City, honour'd him with the Title of Μέγας Στρατηγός, or Grand-Duke (a). Constantius, at the Request of Proæresius, enlarged their Dominions, by a Grant of several Islands in the Archipelago.

Under Arcadius and Honorius, Alarick, King of the Goths, made an Incurfion into Greece, pillaged and destroy'd all before him; but as Zofimus reports, was diverted from his Design upon Athens, by a Vision, wherein the Tutelar Goddess of that City appear'd to him in Armour, and in the Form of those Statues which are dedicated to Minerva the Protectress, and Achilles in the same Manner that Homer represents him, when, being enraged for the Death of Patroclus, he fell with his utmost Fury upon the Trojans (b). But the Writers of those Times make no mention of any such thing; on the contrary they tell us, that Athens suffer'd the common Fate of the rest of Greece; and so Claudian reports,

Proditâ non tantas vidisset Græcia clades,
Oppida semoto Pelopœia Marte vigerent;
Starent Arcadiæ, starent Lacedæmonis arces;
Non mare flagrassent geminum flagrante Corintho;
Nec fera Cecropias traxissent vincula matres (c).*

Had thus th' embattel'd Græcians dar'd to oppose
With Rage and Pow'r Divine their barbarous Foes, Ne'er had their Land of Strength and Help bereft
The Spartan Land had ne'er such Havock seen,
Its Splendor ne'er eclips'd, or Pow'r depress'd had been.
Arcadian Flocks had graz'd untainted Food,
And free from Plunder Pelops' Isle had stood.
Corinth's proud Structures ne'er had felt the Flames,
Nor griping Chains enslav'd th' Athenian Dames.

J. A.

And Synesius, who lived in the same Age, tells us, there was nothing left in it splendid, or remarkable; nothing to be admired, besides the famous Names of ancient Ruins; and that, as in a Sacrifice, when

(a) Julian Orat. I. Nicephorus Gregoras Hist. Rom. I. VII. (b) Zofimus I. V.
(c) Claudian, in Ruffinum I. II.

the Body is consumed, there remains nothing of the Beast; but an empty Skin; so it was in Athens, where all the stately and magnificent Structures were turn'd into ruinous Heaps, and nothing but old decay'd Outfides left remaining (d).

Theodosius II. is said to have favour'd the Athenians, upon the Account of his Queen Eudocia, who was an Athenian by Birth. Justinian also is reported to have been very kind to them; but from his Reign, for the Space of about seven hundred Years, either for want of Historians in Ages so rude and barbarous, or because they lived in Peace and Obscurity, without atchieving, or suffering any Thing deserving to be transmitted to Posterity, there is no Account of any Thing that passed among them, till the thirteenth Century.

At that Time, Nicetas tells us, Athens was in the Hands of Baldwin, and was besieged by one of the Generals of Theodorus Lascares, who was then the Greek Emperor, but he was repulsed with Loss, and forced to raise the Siege. Not long after, it was besieged by the Marquess Bonifacius, who made himself Master of it (e).

It was afterwards govern'd by one Delves, of the House of Arragon, and after his Death fell into the Hands of Bajazet, Emperor of the Turks (f). Afterwards it was taken by the Spaniards of Catalonia, under the Command of Andronicus Palæologus the elder (g). And these are the same that Chalcocondylas calls κελτίβηρες, and reports they were dispossef'd of it by Reinerius Acciaioli, a Florentine, who, having no legitimate Male Issue, left it by his last Will and Testament to the State of Venice.

The Venetians were not long Masters of it, being dispossef'd by Antony, a natural Son of Reinerius, who had given him the Sovereignty of Thebes and Bœotia; and from this Time it continued some Years under the Government of the Acciaioli: For Antony was succeeded by one of his Kinsmen, call'd Nerius; Nerius was displaced by his Brother Antony for his Insufficiency, and Unfitness to govern, and after Antony's Death recover'd it again; but leaving only one Son, then an Infant, was succeeded by his Wife, who for her Folly was ejected by Mahomet, upon the Complaint of Francus, the Son of Antony the Second, who succeeded her, and, having confined her some Time in Prison, put her to Death, and was upon that Score accused by her Son to Mahomet II. who sent an Army under the Conduct of Omares to besiege him; Francus, upon this, made his Application to the Latins, but they refused to grant him any Assistance, except he would engage his Subjects in all Things to conform to the Romish Superstition, and renounce all those Articles, wherein the Greek Church differs from them; which he not being able to do, was forced to surrender it to the Turks, in the Year of our Lord CIOCCCLV (h), and in their Hands it continues to this Day.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the City of Athens, and its Walls, Gates, Streets, Buildings, &c.

TH E City of Athens, when it flourish'd in its greatest Splendor, was one of the fairest and largest Cities of all Greece, being, says Aristides, a Day's Journey in Compass (i). But according to the most exact Computation, the whole Circuit of it contain'd about CLXXVIII Stadia, that is, something above two and twenty Roman Miles.

But many were the Changes of Government and Fortune which it underwent, before it arriv'd to this Pitch of Greatness; for at the first, that, which was afterwards the Citadel, was the whole City, and was call'd Cecropia, from its first Founder Cecrops, who, they say, was the first that invented the Manner of building Cities, and therefore the Athenians, proud of every little Pretence to Antiquity, used to call it by way of Eminence ἄνω, and πόλις, as being the first City (k). Afterwards it chang'd its first Name of Cecropia, and was call'd Athens in Erichonius's Reign, for which several Reasons are given; but the most common is, that the Name was taken from Minerva, whom the Greeks call Ἀθήνη, because she was the Protectress of the City; indeed almost all Towers and Citadels were sacred to this Goddess, who is therefore by Catullus call'd, ————— Diwa tenens in summis urbibus arces.

————— Goddess that in Citadels doth dwell.

And Eustathius hath remark'd the same upon Homer's sixth Iliad, where he tells us, Minerva's Temple was in the Trojan Citadel, Νῆδον Ἀθηναίης γλαυκῶπιδος ἐν πόλει ἄκρῃ (l).

Minerva's Temple in the Citadel.

Cecropia was seated in the Midst of a large and pleasant Plain, upon the Top of a high Rock; for, as the fore-mention'd Author observes, it was usual for the first Founders of Cities in those Ages, to lay the Foundations of them upon steep Rocks and high Mountains; and this they did, partly for that such Places were a good Defence against Invaders, but more especially, because they hoped to be secured by them from Inundations (m), which the People of those Times exceedingly dreaded, having heard and experienced the sad Effects of them under Ogyges, and Deucalion. Afterwards, when the Number of Inhabitants was increased, the whole Plain was fill'd with Buildings, which were call'd from their Situation ἡ κάτω πόλις, or the lower City, and Cecropia was then nam'd ἡ ἄνω πόλις, or Ἀκρόπολις, the upper City.

The Circuit of the Citadel was three-score Stadia; it was fenced in with wooden Pales, or, as some say, was set about with Olive Trees; and therefore in Xerxes's Invasion, when the Oracle advised the Athenians to defend themselves with Walls of Wood, some were of Opinion, they were commanded to enter into the Acropolis, and there receive the Enemy, which some of them did; but, after a desperate Resistance, were overpower'd by Numbers, and forced to suffer the sad Effects of their fond Interpretation (n).

(i) Panathen. (k) Stephanus V. Ἀθήνας. (l) Pag. CCCCLXXXIII, Edit. Basil. (m) II. d. P. CCCLXXXIV,

It was fortified with a strong Wall, one Part of which was built by Cimon the Son of Miltiades, out of the Spoils taken in the Persian War, and was call'd Κιμωνίων τείχος, being on the South-side of the Citadel (o).

The North Wall was built many Ages before by Agrolas, says Pausanias; or, according to Pliny, by Euryalus and Hyperbius, two Brothers, who first taught the Athenians the Art of building Houses, whereas till that Time they lived in Caves. They were Tyrrhenians born, and by that Nation all Sorts of Building are said to have been first begun in Greece, and from them Walls and Castles were call'd Τύρσεις (p). This Wall was nam'd Πελασγικόν, or Πελαρσικόν, because the Founders of it were call'd Pelasgi, from their continual wandering, and removing from one Country to another, in the Manner of Storks, which the Greeks call Πελαρσοί (q). Thucydides tells us, there was an Execration laid upon any that should build Houses under this Wall, because the Pelasgi, whilst they dwelt there, entred into a Conspiracy against the Athenians (r). And Pollux adds, that it was unlawful to make Ditches, or sow Corn here, and if any Man was taken offending, he was apprehended by the Nomothetæ, and brought before the Archon, who was to lay a Fine of three Drachms upon him. (s). It was beautified with nine Gates, and therefore is sometimes call'd Εννεάπυλον; but though there were many lesser Gates, yet the Citadel had but one great Fore-Gate, or Entrance, to which they ascended by Steps, cover'd with white Marble, and it was built by Pericles, with such Magnificence, that the Expences of it amounted to above a thousand Drachms (t).

The Inside of the Citadel was adorn'd with innumerable Edifices, Statues and Monuments, wherein all the ancient Stories were described at large, infomuch that Aristides tells us, it look'd like one continued Ornament (u). The Description of all these would be tedious, and is already perform'd by Meursius, who hath with vast Industry collected into one Body all the Relicks of Antiquity, which lay disperfed here and there in ancient Authors. The most remarkable of them were these:

The Temple of Minerva, call'd Νίκη, or Victory, in which the Goddess was represented, having a Pomegranate in her right Hand, and an Helmet in her left, and without Wings, in Memory of Theseus's good Success in Crete, the Fame whereof had not reach'd Athens before his Arrival; but in other Places, Victory was usually represented with Wings (x). It was placed at the right Hand of the Entrance of the Citadel, and was built with white Marble.

About the Middle of the Citadel was the stately Temple of Minerva, call'd Parthenion, because that Goddess preserved her Virginity pure and inviolate, or because it was dedicated by the Daughters of Erethheus, who were peculiarly call'd Παρθένοι (y) Virgins. It was call'd also Εκατόμπεδον, because it was an hundred Feet square. It was burnt by the Persians, but restored again by Pericles, and enlarged fifty Feet on each Side (z). Sir George Wheeler reports, that it is two hundred and seventeen Feet, nine Inches long, and ninety-eight Feet, six Inches broad; that it consists altogether of admirable white Marble, and both for Matter and Art is the most beautiful Piece of Antiquity remaining in the World.

The Temple of Neptune firnamed Erechtheus, which was a double Building, and, besides other Curiosities, contain'd the Salt Spring call'd Ερεχθίνης, which was feign'd to have burst out of the Earth, from a Stroke of Neptune's Trident, in his Contention with Minerva. And this Part was consecrated to Neptune. The other Part of the Temple belong'd to Minerva, firnam'd Πολιάς, i. e. Protectors of the City; and Πένδρος, from one of Cecrops's Daughters of that Name. Here was the sacred Olive produc'd by Minerva; and the Goddess's Image, which was said to have fallen from Heaven in Erichthonius's Reign; it was kept by one or two Dragons, call'd οἰκυροὶ ὄφεις, and had a Lamp always burning with Oil, and an Owl placed before it (a). Both of them remain to this Day; and the lesser Edifice, which is an Entrance to the other, is twenty-nine Feet long, and twenty-one Feet three Inches broad; the bigger is sixty-three Feet and a half long, and thirty-six Feet broad. The Roof is supported by Ionick Pillars channelled, but the Chapiters seem to be a Mixture between that and the Dorick Order.

On the Backside of Minerva's Temple was the Publick Treasury, call'd from its Situation Οπισθόδομος, wherein, besides other Publick Money, a thousand Talents were laid in Store, against any very urgent Occasion; but if any Man expended them upon a trivial Account, he was to be put to Death. Also the Names of all that were indebted to the Common-wealth, were entred in a Register in this Place, and therefore such Persons were call'd ἐγχεσραμμένοι ἐν τῇ Ακροπόλει, as on the contrary, when they had discharged their Debt, they were named ἔξ Ακροπόλεως ἐξαλλημιμμένοι. The Tutelar Gods of this Treasury were Jupiter Saviour, or the Saviour; and Plutus, the God of Riches, whom they represented with Wings, and (which was unusual in other Places) seeing (b). Aristophanes hath taken Notice of the Statues of both these Gods, in the latter End of his Plutus, where he introduces Carion very busy in placing that God after the Recovery of his Sight, next to the Statue of Jupiter the Saviour.

Afterwards this Building was burnt to the Ground by the Treasurers, who, having embezzled the Publick Money, secured themselves by that Means, and prevented the City from calling them to Account (c.) There were also several other remarkable Edifices in the Citadel, as the Chapels of Jupiter Σωτήρ, and of Minerua Σώτεια (d). The Temple of Agraulos, the Daughter of Cecrops, or rather of Minerua, worshipp'd by that Name in the Front, and steep Side of the Rock (e). And to mention only one more, the Temple of Venus Ἰππολύτεια, consecrated by Phædra, when she was in Love with Hippolytus (f). And thus much concerning the Citadel.

The lower City containing all the Buildings which surrounded the Citadel, with the Fort Munychia, and the two Havens, Phalerum and Piræus, was encompass'd with Walls of unequal Strength, being built at different Times, and by different Hands. The chief Parts of them were, the Μακρὰ τεῖχην, which join'd the Haven of Piræus to the City, being about five Miles in Length, and therefore Plutarch calls them,

Μακρὰ σκέλη, long Legs (g), and Propertius long Arms,
Inde ubi Piræei capient me litera portūs,
Scandam ego Theseæ brachia longa viæ (b).

When I've arriv'd at the Piræan Port,
 And eas'd the shatter'd Vessel of its Load,
 I'll scale the Walls of the Thesean Road. J. A.

They consisted of two Sides, one of which lay towards the North, and was built by Pericles (i), with vast Expence, containing XL Stadia; the other lay to the South, and was call'd Νότιον τεῖχον, or παρὰ μέσου τεῖχην, or Νότιον παρὰ μέσου τεῖχον, to distinguish it from the South Wall of the Citadel; sometimes τεῖχον Φαληρικόν, because it took in the Port Phalerum. It was built by Themistocles, of huge square Stones, not cemented together by Mortar, but fasten'd by Iron and Lead. The Height of it was forty Cubits, and yet was but the Half of what The- mistocles design'd; the Length of it was thirty-five Stadia. Upon both of them was erected a great Number of Turrets, which were turn'd into Dwelling-houses when the Athenians became so numerous, that the City was not large enough to contain them (k). The Μενύχιον, or Wall that encompass'd the Munychia, and join'd it to the Piræus, contain'd LX Stadia; and the exterior Wall on the other Side of the City was in Length XLIII Stadia; so that the whole Circuit of the City contain'd CLXXVIII Stadia, which are something above two and twenty Roman Miles.

1. The principal Gates of the City were the Πύλαι Θριάσιαι, afterwards call'd Δίπυλον, because they were larger than any of the rest. They were plac'd at the Entrance of Ceramicus, and therefore seem to have been the same with the πύλαι Κεραμεικῆ, in Philostratus (l).

2. Πύλαι Πειραιϊκῆ, leading to the Piræus; near which was the Temple of the Hero Chalcodoon, and the Tombs of those that died in the Defence of their Country, when the Amazons invaded Attica under Theseus (m).

3. Ιππιδῆες, near which Hyperides the Orator, and his Family, were buried (n).

4. Ἠεΐαι, where they carried forth dead Persons to their Graves, so call'd from ἡεΐον, a Grave (o).

5. Ιεραὶ, the Gate leading to Eleusis, thro' which they, that celebrated the Festival of Ceres Eleusinia, made a solemn Procession, from which Custom the Gate received its Name, it being usual to call every Thing that was any way concern'd in those Mysteries, ἱερόν, sacred.

6. Αἰγέως πύλαι, the Gate of Ægeus, the Father of Theseus, whose House stood in the Place where afterwards the Delphinium was built, and therefore the Statue of Mercury at the East End of that Temple was call'd Ερμῆς ἐπ' Αἰγέως πύλαις, by which it is evident that this Gate was near the Delphinium (p).

7. Διοχαρῆς πύλαι, the Gate of Diochares.

8. Πύλαι Αχαρνικαὶ, the Gate that look'd towards Acharna, a Borough in Attica.

9. Διόλμεια, that lay towards the Borough of the Diolmians.

10. Πύλαι Θεράκιαι, the Thracian Gate.

11. Πύλαι Ιτωνίαι, the Itonian Gate, near which was the Pillar erected in Memory of the Amazons (q).

12. Πύλαι Σκαϊαὶ, the Scæan Gate (r).

13. Ἀδριανῆ πύλαι, the Gate of Adrian, by which they entred into that Part of the City which that Emperor rebuilt, and call'd Ἀδριανούπολις.

As to the Streets in Athens, thus much is said of them in general, that they were not very uniform, or beautiful (f); and tho' Homer calls it εὐρύστυαν, Ἰκέτο δ' εἰς Μαρμαθῶνα, καὶ εὐρύστυαν Αθίνων (t).

Yet that seems only to imply the Bigness, and not the Beauty of 'em; for so that Poet has used the same Epithet in other Places. The Number of 'em without Question was very great, but most of their Names are quite lost; and few, if any, besides those that follow, are to be met with in Authors. Ἰερεὶ Σόκῃ, or the Way to Eleusis. Ὀδὸς Θησαία, betwixt the long Walls, leading to the Piræus; which seems to be the same with that which was call'd Ἡ εἰς Πειραιᾶ. Ἡ τῷ πολεμίων, near the Academy. Ἡ τῷ Ἐρμοφύλων. Ἡ τῷ Κίβιστοποσιῶν. Ἡ Ἐσία. Ἡ Ξενικῇ. Μυρμύκων ὁδὸς. Ρύμη τρίτη.

Τεῖποδες, a Way near the Prytaneum, wherein were Places largely flock'd with Tripods of Brass curiously wrought; amongst which was the famous Satyr, call'd by the Greeks Παριβόσιθ, being one of the Master-pieces of Praxiteles. And concerning these Heliodorus is said to have written an entire Treatise (u).

It remains in the next Place, that I give you an Account of the Buildings of the lower City; in doing which I shall only mention such as were most remarkable, or had some History, or Custom depending upon them, for the rest referring the Reader to Pausanias and Meursius's larger Treatises.

Πομπεῖον, a stately Edifice, in which were kept the Sacred Utenfils, made use of at Festivals, and all Things necessary for the solemn Processions prepared. It was placed at the Entrance of the old City, which looks towards Phalarum, and adorn'd with many Statues of the Athenian Heroes. Indeed there was scarce any Place in the City that was not fill'd with such like Representations.

The Temple of Vulcan, or of Vulcan and Minerva, not far from Ceramicus within the City, seems to have been a publick Prison, frequent Mention being made of Persons being tortur'd there.

Near this Place was the Temple of the heavenly Venus, for they had a two-fold Venus, one of which was call'd Ὀυρανία, and the other Πάγνημιθ; the former presid'd over chaste and pure Love; the latter was the Patroness of Lust and Debauchery. And as their Natures and Characters were different, so were also the Ceremonies used in their Worship. They, that worship'd the former, behaved themselves with all Modesty and Gravity; but the latter was pleas'd only with Lewdness and Wantonness. Whence Solon permitted publick Strumpets to prostitute themselves in her Temple. Besides these, Venus had several other Temples, as those which were erected upon the Account of Demetrius Poliorcetes, to Venus Lamia, and Læna, in Honour of two of his Mistresses, call'd by those Names. Nay, so gross Flattery did the Athenians degenerate into, that they enroll'd several of his Parasites in the Number of their Deities, and honour'd them with Temples and Altars (v).

The Temple of Theseus was erected by Conon, in the Middle of the City, near the Place where the Youth perform'd their Wrestling, and other Exercises of Body, and was allow'd the Privilege of being a Sanctuary for Slaves, and all those of mean Condition that fled from the Persecution of Men in Power, in Memory that Theseus, while he lived, was an Assister and Protector of the Distressed. And a great many other Temples were consecrated to him in his Life-time, as grateful Acknowledgments of the Benefits he had confer'd upon the City; all which, four only excepted, he dedicated to Hercules, and changed their Names from Θήσεια, to Ηράκλεια, after he had been rescued by him from the King of the Molossians, as Plutarch reports out of Philochorus (y). One of these was put to divers other Uses, for certain Magistrates were created in it by the Theſmothetæ (z). Causes were also heard there, and it was a publick Priſon (a), and therefore a Gaol-bird is wittily call'd Θησείστρις, in Aristophanes, such an one Plautus, with no less Elegancy, names Colonus Carceris.

The Temple of Theſeus is to be seen at this Day, and is built, as Sir George Wheeler reports, in all Respects like the Temple of Minerva in the Citadel, as to its Matter, Form, and Order of Architecture, but not so large. It is dedicated to St George, and still remains a Master-piece of Architecture, not easy to be parallel'd; much less exceeded, by any other.

Ανάκειον, or the Temple of Castor and Pollux, call'd Ανακτες. In this Place Slaves were expos'd to Sale.

Ολύμπιον, or Ολυμπιεῖον, a Temple erected in Honour of Jupiter the Olympian; it was the most magnificent Structure in Athens, being in Circuit no less than four Stadia, which was the Reason they were forced to support it with Pillars, a Thing unknown in Athens before that Time (b). The Foundations were laid by Pisistratus, and many succeeding Governors contributed to the Building of it, but it was never compleatly finish'd till Adrian's Time, which was seven hundred Years after the Tyranny of Pisistratus.

The Temple of Apollo and Pan; at the Bottom of the Citadel on the North Side, in a Cave or Grotto, call'd Μακραι πέτραι, or Κεχροπίαι πέτραι, where Apollo was feign'd to have deflower'd Crenſa, the Daughter of Erichtheus, we find it mention'd in Euripides:

οἶδα Κεχροπίαις πέτρας
Πρόσορρον ἄντρον, ἃς Μακρῶς κικλήσκουμι;
Οἶδ', ἐνθα Πανὸς ἄδύλον ἢ βωμοὶ πέλαις (c).

The Temple of Diana, surnam'd Λυσίζων (d), because in it Women, after their first Child, us'd to dedicate their Girdles to her (d).

Πάνθεον was a Temple dedicated to all the Gods, who, as they were united in one Temple, so were they honour'd with one common Festival, call'd Θεοζένια. This was a very magnificent Structure, and supported by a hundred and twenty marble Pillars; on the Outside were all the Histories of the Gods, curiously engraven, and upon the great Gate stood two Horses, excellently carv'd by Praxiteles. It is to be seen at this Day, as Theodorus Zymogalus reports, in an Epistle to Martin Crucius, written A. D. CIOCLXXV, wherein he describes the then present State of Athens.

The Temple of the eight Winds, omitted by Pausanias, but mention'd and describ'd by Sir George Wheeler out of Vitruvius, who reports, that such, as had made exact Observations about the Winds, divided them into eight; as namely, Andronicus Cyrrhastes, who gave this Model to the Athenians, for he built a Tower of eight Square of Marble, on every Side of which he carv'd the Figure of a Wind, according to the Quarter it blew from. On the Top of the Tower, he erected a little Pyramid of Marble, on the Point of which was placed a Brazen Triton, holding a Switch in his right Hand, wherewith turning about, he pointed to the Wind that then blew. All the Winds answer'd exactly to the Compass, and were represented by Figures answerable to their Natures, above which were written their Names in large Greek Letters, which are these that follow. ΕΥΡΟΣ, Eurus, South-East. ΑΠΗΛΙΩΤΗΣ, Subsolanus, East. ΚΑΙΚΙΑΣ, Cæcias, North-East. ΒΟΡΕΑΣ, Boreas, North. ΣΚΙΠΟΝ, Corus, North-West. ΖΕΦΥΡΟΣ, Occidens, West. ΝΟΤΟΣ, Notus, South. ΛΙΨ, Libs, Africus, South-West. This Tower remains yet entire, the Weather-cock only excepted.

Στοῶν, or Portico's, they had a great many, but the most remarkable was that, which was call'd Περσιανότι, and afterwards Ποικίλη, from the Variety it contain'd of curious Pictures, drawn by the greatest Masters in Greece, such were Polygnotus, Micon, and Pandæus, the Brother of Phidias. Here it was that Zeno taught Philosophy, and instituted that Sect, which received their Names from this Place, being call'd Στοικοὶ from σοῶ. And the Portico itself is usually put for that Sect of Philosophers, as when Athenæus calls Zeno τῆς Στοῶς κτιστὴν, the Founder of the Stoicks (e).

Μυσεῖον was a Fort near the Citadel, so call'd from the old Poet Musæus, the Scholar of Orpheus, that used to repeat his Verses in this Place, where also he was buried. This Fort was forced by Antigonus to entertain a Garrison, and his Son Demetrius, to make it the more secure, surrounded it with a Wall.

Ωδῆον was a Musick Theatre, built by Pericles, and, for the Contrivance of it on the Inside, was full of Seats and Ranges of Pillars; and on the Outside, in the Roof or Covering of it, was made from one Point at the Top with a great many Bendings, all shelving downward; and it is reported, (saith Plutarch) that it was so framed in Imitation of the King of Persia's Pavilion (f). Here was also a Tribunal, as we learn from Aristophanes.

Οἱ μὲν ἡμῶν ἕπερ Ἀρχῶν οἱ παρὰ τὸς Ἐνδέκα.

Οἱ δ' ἐν Ωδῆῳ Δικάζουσ' (g).

It was very much beautified by Lycurgus (b), but, being demolish'd in the Mithridatick War (i), was re-edified by Herodes Atticus, with such Splendor and Magnificence, that, as Pausanias tells us, it surpass'd all the famous Buildings in Greece. It stood in the Ceramicus, of which Name there were two Places, so call'd from Ceramus the Son of Bacebus and Ariadne (k); or ἀπὸ τῆς κεραμικῆς τέχνης, from the Potter's Art, which was first invented in one of these Places by Coræbus. One of them was within the City, and contain'd innumerable Buildings, as Temples, Theatres, Portico's, &c. The other was in the Suburbs, and was a publick Burying-place, and contain'd the Academy, and many other Edifices.

The Athenian Αγοαί, or Fora, were very numerous, but the most noted of them were two; the old Forum, and the new. The new Forum was in a Place call'd Ερετρία by Strabo (l). Which it is probable was not far from Zeno's Portico, because, Pausanias tells us, that in his Time the Forum was near that Place. The old Forum was in the Ceramicus within the City, call'd ἀρχαία Αγορά. In it were held the publick Assemblies of the People; but the chief Design of it was for the Meeting of People to buy and sell, and therefore it was divided into different Parts, according to the Wares expos'd to Sale, for every Trade had a different Place assign'd to make their Markets in; and hence we read of Κύκλος, where Slaves and Vassals were sold (m); Αλοπίπωλις ἀγορά, ιχθυόπωλις ἀγορά, and Γυναικεία ἀγορά, where Women's Clothes and Ornaments were expos'd; and others without Number. Sometimes they call'd the Fora by the single Names of Things sold in them, as Οἶνος, the Wine-market, Ελαιον, the Oil-market, &c. (n). An Instance of this we have in these Verses of Eupolis,

Πειρήθον εἰς τὰ σκόροδα, καὶ τὰ κρόμμυα, καὶ τὸν λιθωνῶδον, κ' εὐθὺ ἴων ἀρωμάων;
καὶ περὶ τὰ γέλυγχ.

The Time in which Things were expos'd to Sale, was call'd πλήθυσσα Αγορά, full Market, from the Multitudes of People that assembled at such Times; and there seems to have been different Hours appointed for particular Wares, which I suppose is the Reason that Suidas in some Places tells us, the full Market was at the third Hour, in others that it was at the fourth, fifth, and sixth.

And besides these Places, the Tradesmen had their Βασιλείαι, or publick Halls, wherein each Company met, and consulted about their Affairs: For Trades were very much encouraged at Athens; and if any Man objected the living by such Gain to another, as a Matter of Reproach, the Person affronted might have an Action of Slander against him (o). “Nay, Trades were so far from being accounted a mean and ignoble Way of living, that Persons of the greatest Quality did not disdain to betake themselves to such Employments, and especially to Merchandize, as Plutarch informs us; Solon (says he) apply'd himself to Merchandize, tho' some there are that report, that he travell'd rather to get Learning and Experience, than to raise an Estate. In the Time of Hesiod, a Trade was not dishonourable; nor did it debase its Followers; but Merchandize was a worthy Calling, which brought Home the good Things that barbarous Nations enjoy'd, was the Occasion of Friendship with their Kings, and Mother of Experience. Some Merchants have built great Cities, as the Founder of Maffilia, that Man so much esteem'd by the Gauls, that lived about the Rhine; some also report, that Thales and Hippocrates the Mathematician traded; and that Plato defray'd the Charges of his Travels by selling Oil in Aegypt.” Thus Plutarch (p).

Aquæducts were not common at Athens before the Roman Times; and the Want of them was supply'd by Wells; some of which were dug by private Persons, others at the publick Expence; but because the Country having but few potable Rivers, (for Eridanus, Strabo (q) telleth us was muddy, and not fit for Use) Lakes or large Springs, was but poorly furnish'd with Water, which gave Occasion to continual Quarrel, amongst the Citizens. Solon enacted a Law, that where there was a publick Well within an Hippicon, (that is, four Furlongs) all should have the Privilege of drawing at that; but those, that lived at a greater Distance, should be obliged to provide a private Well; and if they had dug ten Fathom deep, and could find no Water, they had Liberty to fetch ten Gallons a Day from their Neighbours; for he thought it prudent (saith my Author) to make Provision against Want, but not to encourage Laziness (r). Adrian, besides other magnificent Structures, laid the Foundations of a stately Aquæduct, which was finish'd by his Successor Antoninus. And one Part of it remains to this Day, sustain'd by Ionick Pillars; which, Sir George Wheeler is of Opinion, was the Frontispiece of the Repository, or Receiver of the Water.

Gymnasia are said to have been first in Use at Lacedæmon, but were afterwards very common in all the Parts of Greece, and imitated, very much augmented, and improved at Rome. They were not single Edifices, but a Knot of Buildings united, being so capacious as to hold many thousands of People at once, and having Room enough for Philosophers, Rhetoricians, and the Professors of all other Sciences to read their Lectures; and Wrestlers, Dancers, and all others that would, to exercise at the same Time without the least Disturbance, or Interruption. They consisted of a great many Parts, the chief of which were these:

1. Σῆλαι, the Porticos, which were full of ἕξεδραι, and Side Buildings furnish'd with Seats, and fit for Study or Discourse; and here it is probable the Scholars used to meet.

2. Ερῆβαιον, the Place where the Ephēbi, or Youths exercised; or as some say, where those that design'd to exercise met, and agreed what Kind of Exercise they should contend in, and what should be the Victor's Reward.

3. Καρίκειον, ἀποδυτήριον, γυμναστήριον, the Undressing-room.

4. Ελαιθέσιον, ἀλειπήριον, the Place where those that were to wrestle, or had bathed, were anointed.

5. Κονιστήριον, κονίστρα, the Place where the Dust, with which they besprinkled those that had been anointed, was kept.

6. Παλαίστρα, which sometimes is taken for the whole Gymnasium, in its proper Acceptation signifies the Place, wherein all the Exercises of the Πέπλοιστον, or (say others) only Wrestling, and the Παύκράτιον, were perform'd; and lest the Combatants should slip, or hurt themselves by falling, the Bottom of it was cover'd with Duit, or Gravel. Also there was another Room in the Gymnasium, fill'd with Gravel, much deeper than that in the Palæstra.

7. Σφαίρις ἕριον, a Place appointed for divers Sorts of Exercises, but more especially for the Ball.

8. The Spaces between the Porticos and the Wall, left void to admit the Light, and the Area of the Περυσύλιον, or Piazza, which was a large Place square, or sometimes oblong in the Middle of the Gymnasium, design'd for Walking, and the Performance of those Exercises, which were not practis'd in the Palæstra, or the deeper Sand, or any other Place of the Gymnasium, such were (as some are of Opinion) Leaping, and the Discus.

9. Ζύσοι, and Ζύσα, which were distinct Places both in Greece, and Rome. Xysi were Places cover'd at the Top, design'd for the Exercise of Wrestlers, when the Weather did not permit them to contend in the open Air. Xysta, sometimes call'd Περειδρομίδες, were Walks open at the Top, design'd for Exercises, or Recreation in the Heat of Summer, and milder Seasons of the Winter.

10. The Baths, in which were Waters hot and cold in different Degrees, and in these they refresh'd themselves, when they were wearied with Exercise, and at other Times. Amongst the ancient Greeks, Baths were not much frequented, being rarely us'd but after the Accomplishment of some very great Work, which required Abundance of Labour and Toil, as the Ending of a War, or atchieving any great and painful Enterprize (f) And thus Agamemnon, after the Trojan War, at his Return Home, went into the Bath, there to wash away the Remembrance of all his past Labours, and was slain by the Treachery of his Wife Clytemnestra (t). In latter Ages they became more common, and were frequently us'd for Health or Recreation by both Sexes, who at Sparta wash'd in one common Bath, but in other Cities had distinct Places appointed them.

11. The Stadium was a large Semicircle, in which Exercises were perform'd; and for the better Convenience of Spectators, which flock'd thither in vast Multitudes, was built with Steps one above another, that the higher Ranks might look over the Heads of those that were placed below them. Several of these there were at Athens in their Gymnasia, and other Places; but the most remarkable was that which was built near the River Ilissus by Lycurgus, and afterwards enlarged by Herodes Atticus, one of the richest Citizens Athens ever had; it was built of Pentelick Marble, with so great Magnificence, that, when Pausanias comes to speak of it, he tells his Readers that they would hardly believe what he was about to tell them, it being a Wonder to all that beheld it, and of that stupenduous Bigness, that one would judge it a Mountain of white Marble upon the Banks of Ilissus. Sir George Wheeler reports, that at this Day there remains some of the Stone-Work at the End towards the River, but the rest is only a Stadium of Earth above Ground. However, its Figure and Bigness continue, tho' the Degrees be all taken away. It is a long Place with two parallel Sides, clos'd up circularly to the East End, and open towards the other End; and is about one hundred twenty-five Geometrical Paces long, and twenty-six or twenty-seven broad, which gave it the Name of a Stadium, which was a Measure ordinarily us'd among the Greeks, being the eighth Part of a Roman Mile.

(f) Artemidorus Onecrocrit. lib. I.(t) Lycophon.

Athens had several Gymnasia, of which these three are of most Note, Lyceum, Academia, and Cynosarges. Λυκῆον, Lyceum was situated upon the Banks of Ilissus, it received its Name from Apollo, Λυκονόμος, or Λύκιος, to whom it was dedicated; nor was it without Reason (saith Plutarch) that this Place was sacred to Apollo, but upon a good and rational Account, since from the same Deity that cures our Diseases, and restores our Health, we may reasonably expect Strength and Ability, to contend in the Exercises (u). The Building of this Structure is by some ascribed to Pisistratus, by others to Pericles, and by others to Lycurgus; which makes it probable that all of them might contribute something towards it; and perhaps Pisistratus laid the Foundations of it, Pericles raised it, Lycurgus enlarged and beautified it.

This was the Place where Aristotle taught Philosophy, and discoursed with such as resorted to him for Instructions, walking constantly every Day till the Hour of anointing; for the Greeks usually anointed before Meals; whence he and his Followers were call'd Περίπατητικοὶ ἀπὸ τῆ παειπατῆν, Peripateticks, from walking (w). Tho' others report, that his walking and discoursing Philosophy with Alexander was the Occasion of that Name.

Ακαδημία was Part of the Ceramicus without the City, from which it was distant about six Stadia, so call'd from Academos an old Hero, who when Helena was stolen by Theseus, and conceal'd at Aphidnae, discover'd her to Castor and Pollux, for which Reason he was extremely honour'd by them during his Life; and the Lacedaemonians, when in After-ages they made several Incurfions into Attica, and destroy'd all the Country round about, always spared this Place for his Sake. But Dicaearchus writes, that there were two Arcadians in the Army of Castor and Pollux, the one call'd Echedemus, and the other Marathus; from the former, that which was afterwards called the Academy, was then nam'd Echedemia, and the Borough of Marathon had its Name from the latter. Thus Plutarch (x). It was beset with shady Woods, and solitary Walks fit for Study and Meditation, as the Poets and others witness. This Verse is cited out of Eupolis (y).

Ἐν εὐσκιόις δρόμοισιν Ἀκαδήμης δῆν.

In Academos's shady Walks.

And Horace speaks to the same Purpose,

Atque inter sylvas Hecademi quærere verum (z).

In Hecademos's Groves to search for Truth.

At the first it was a desert Place, and uninhabited by Reason of the Fens and Marshes that were in it, and rendred it very unhealthful; but they being drain'd by Cimon, it became pleasant and delightful, and was much frequented by all Sorts of People, especially such as applied themselves to the Study of Philosophy, for they resorted thither in great Numbers to Plato's Lectures, who read constantly in this Place; whence having contracted a Distemper through the Unwholesomness of the Air, which was not yet wholly rectified, and, being advised by his Physicians to remove his School to the Lyceum, made Answer, that he chose the Academy to keep his Body under, lest by too much Health it should become wanton, and more difficult to be govern'd by the Dictates of Reason; as Men prune Vines, when they spread too far, and lop off the Branches that grow too luxuriant (a). I must not forget to add, that it was surrounded with a Wall by Hipparchus the Son of Pisistratus, who, to defray the Charges of it, laid so heavy a Tax upon the People, that ever after any chargeable and expensive Business was call'd Ἰππάρχου τεύχιον.

Κυνόσαρπες was a Place in the Suburbs near the Lyceum, so call'd from a white or swift Dog, in Greek κύνος ἀργός, that, when Diomus was sacrificing to Hercules, snatch'd away Part of the Victim (b). It was adorn'd with several Temples, dedicated to Hebe, Alcmena, and Iolauus, all which bore some Relation to Hercules, the chief Deity of the Place, and he also was here honour'd with a magnificent Temple. But there was nothing in it so remarkable as the Gymnasium, in which Strangers, and those that were but of the Half-Blood, or had but one Parent an Athenian, were to perform their Exercises, because Hercules, to whom it was consecrated, was under some Illegitimacy, and was not one of the immortal Gods, but had a mortal Woman for his Mother: And therefore Themistocles, being but of the Half-Blood, persuaded divers of the young Noblemen to accompany him to anoint and exercise themselves at Cynosarges; in doing which, he seem'd with some Ingenuity to take away the Distinction between the truly Noble and the Stranger: And between those of the whole, and those of the Half-Blood of Athens (c). There was also a Court of Judicature in this Place, wherein Causes about Illegitimacy were heard, and Examination made concerning Persons that lay under a Suspicion of having falsely inserted their Names among the true born Athenians (d). In this Gymnasium, Antisthenes instituted a Sect of Philosophers call'd Κυνικοί, Cynicks, from the Name of the Place (e), as some are of Opinion.

All Theatres were dedicated to Bacchus and Venus (f), the Deities of Sports and Pleasure; to the former of which they are said to owe their Original (g), and therefore Plays acted in them were call'd Διονυσιακά, and the Artificers that labour'd in the Building of them Διονυσιακοί, τεχνίται, as belonging to Διόνυσος, or Bacchus.

The most ancient Theatres were temporary, being composed of nothing but Boards placed gradually above each other, for the Convenience of Spectators, and therefore they were call'd Ἰκρία (b). But those slight Buildings had well nigh proved fatal to the Commonwealth, for almost the whole City, as well the Magistracy and Nobility, as those of inferior Ranks, being assembled, as their Manner was, to hear Pratinas act a Tragedy; the Theatre, too weak to support the vast Weight of thronging Multitudes, on a sudden tumbled down, and wanted not much of burying them in its Ruins (i). This narrow Escape made them more cautious, and was the Occasion of erecting a Theatre of Stone, for their better Security. And from this Time the Athenians, whose Example the rest of the Grecians follow'd not long after, erected fix'd and durable Theatres of Stone, commonly of Marble, which by Degrees were encreas'd to that Magnitude, that they exceeded almost all other Buildings in Greece.

The Figure of Theatres was semicircular, tho' they were not exact Semicircles, but contain'd the bigger Half of the Circle, and therefore Amphitheatres, which were made in the same Figure, as if two Theatres should be join'd together, were not nicely orbicular, but oval. They consist'd of two Parts, $\Sigma\kappa\lambda\omega\eta$, Scena, and Κοῖλον , Cavea. Scena was a Partition assign'd for the Actors, reaching quite cross the Theatre, which at the first, agreeable to the antient Simplicity, was dress'd with Boughs and Leaves, but in more expensive Ages was adorn'd with rich and costly Hangings, to hide the Management of Machines, and other Actions of the Players from the Spectators. It was either so framed as that it might be turn'd round, and then it was call'd Versatilis, or drawn up, and then it was Ductilis, and this Way is usually practis'd in our Theatres, in changing the Prospect. It had three principal Gates, one upon the right Hand, another upon the left, by which were presented meaner and smaller Edifices; and a third in the Middle, by which more magnificent Structures, as Temples of the Gods, or Palaces of Kings, were brought in View; and on each Side of the Gate was a lesser Entrance, thro' which the Persons either of Gods, or Men, were introduced by various Machines and Instruments, the Names whereof you may find explain'd in Julius Pollux (k). The whole Scene was divided into several Parts, the most remarkable whereof are these:

Βροντηεῖον , a Place underneath the Floor, wherein were kept brazen Vessels, full of Stones and other Materials, with which they imitated the Noise of Thunder.

Ἐπισκήμιον , a Place upon the Top of the Scene, in which all the Machines, whereby they presented the various Figures and Prospects, were moved.

Παράσκημιον , the Tiring Room, a Place behind the Scenes, wherein the Actors dress'd and adorn'd themselves.

Προσκήμιον , the Stage, a Place before the Scenes, in which the Players acted. And Ὀρχήστρα was that Part in which the Chorus used to dance and sing, in the Middle of which was placed the Pulpit, in Greek Λογέιον , or Θυμέλη .

ὑποσκήμιον , a Partition under the Pulpit, appointed for the Musick.

The Κοῖλον , or Cavea, was appointed for the Spectators, and consist'd of three Parts placed in equal Degrees one above another; the lowest of which belonged to Persons of Quality, and Magistrates; the Middle to the Commonalty; the Uppermost to the Women.

And because Theatres were open at the Top, they erected Porticos behind the Cavea, whither they retired for Shelter in rainy Weather.

Athens had three Harbours for Ships.

1. Πειραιεύς, Piræus, which belong'd to the Tribe of Hippobontis, and was thirty-five or forty Stadia distant from the City, before the Buildings of the long Walls, which have been already mention'd. From which Time the Athenians, by the Direction of Themistocles, made this their chief Harbour. It contain'd three ἔργα, or Docks; the first call'd Κάνθαρος, from an Hero of that Name. The second Ἀρροδίσιον, from Ἀρροδίτη, or Venus, who had there two Temples, one of which was consecrated by Themistocles, the other by Conon. The third Ζέα, from Bread Corn, which is call'd by the Grecians Ζέα. There were likewise in this Harbour five Porticos, which, being join'd together, compos'd one very large Portico, which was on that Account commonly term'd Μαρξέσος. The Piræus had farther two Forums; one near the long Portico, and the Sea; the other farther distant from the Sea; and for that Reason chiefly frequented by those who lived nearest the City. One of these seems to have been call'd Ἰπποδάμειον, from the Architect Hippodamus, who built the long Wall, whereby this Harbour was join'd to the City. Here was a most celebrated Mart, to which Merchants resorted from almost every Part of Greece. Whence came the proverbial Saying, Τὸν Πειραιεῖα κενάγγιαν μὴ φέρεν, That Famine and Emptyness do not come from Piræus. This Harbour, tho' once very populous and well inhabited, was reduced to a very few Houses in the Time of Strabo, who flourish'd under the Emperors Augustus and Tiberius; having been burnt by Sylla in the Mithridatick War.

2. Μουνυχία, Munychia, which was a Promontory not far distant from Piræus, extended not unlike to a Peninsula, and well fortified both by Nature, and afterwards, at the Instance of Thrasylbulus, by Art. The Name was derived from one Munychus, who dedicated in this Place a Temple to Diana, firnam'd Μουνυχία, which yet others report to have been founded by Embarus.

3. Φαληρὸν, Phalerum, which belong'd to the Tribe Antiochis, and was distant from the City thirty-five Stadia, according to Thucydides; but in Pausanias's Account (l) only twenty. This was the most ancient of the three Harbours: And from hence Theseus is reported to have set Sail for Crete; and afterwards Mnestheus for Troy.

C H A P. IX.

Of the Citizens, Tribes, &c. of Athens.

THE Inhabitants of Attica were of three Sorts, 1. Πολῖται, or Freemen. 2. Μέτοικοι, or Sojourners. 3. Δούλοι, or Servants. The Citizens surpass'd the others in Dignity and Power, as having the Government in their Hands, but were far exceeded by the Slaves in Number, many Slaves being often subject to one Citizen. The Number of Citizens in Cecrops's Time, I have already said, was twenty thousand; in Pericles's there were not so many, as appears from Plutarch (m); and when Demetrius the Phalerean was the Governor, they exceeded their first Number under Cecrops only by one thousand; at the same Time Foreigners were ten thousand, and the Slaves four hundred thousand, as appears from a Poll instituted at the Command of Demetrius, and mention'd in Athenæus (n).

Whence it is evident, that the Increase of the Athenians themselves was very inconsiderable, but those growing Numbers of Inhabitants, that swell'd the City to that Bigness, to which it was extended in After-Ages, were either of Slaves, or Strangers, who for the Advantage of Study, or Trade, or for other Conveniencies, settled themselves at Athens; and of these two Sorts, in the Time of Cecrops, it is probable there were few or none, because, through the Scarcity of Men, in his new-form'd Government, for the Encouragement of Foreigners to settle there, he was forc'd to allow them the same Privileges that were enjoy'd by the Natives. And there is a very ancient Law mention'd by the Scholiast of Aristophanes (o), whereby all Foreigners, who intended to live at Athens, were obliged, after a short Stay in that City, to be enroll'd amongst the free Citizens.

And for several Ages after, it was no difficult Matter to obtain the Freedom of the City; but when the Athensian Power grew great, and their glorious Actions rendred them famous thro' all Greece, this Privilege was accounted a very great Favour, and granted to none but Men of the greatest Birth, or Reputation, or such as had perform'd some notable Piece of Service for the Common-wealth. Nor was it without much Difficulty to be obtain'd even by them; Menon the Pharsalian, who had sent the Athenians a Supply of two hundred Horse, in the War against Eon near Amphipolis, desired it, and was rejected. And Perdiccas, King of Macedonia, after having assisted them against the Persians, could obtain no more than a bare ἀτέλεια, or Immunity from Tribute, paid by those that sojourned amongst them, but no Right of Suffrage, or other Privileges common to the Freemen.

And after Mardonius and the Persians were defeated at Platææ, it was decreed by an express Law, that none but Men eminent for Merit should be admitted into the Number of Citizens (p).

But this peremptory Stiffness, which Success and Victory had put into them, did not always make them so obstinate, nor hinder, but that many Worthies, tho' neither equal in Birth, nor Fortune, to the former, were enroll'd amongst the Citizens; such were Hippocrates the Physician, Euryfaces the Son of Ajax, with many others, beside the whole City of the Platæans, to which they granted Freedom, for their signal Services in the Persian War. But by these Grants, though the Number of the Citizens may be said to have been increased, yet nothing was added to the Number of Inhabitants, which remain'd still the same, because the Persons, thus admitted, seldom made Use of their Privilege, and sued for it rather as a Title of Honour, than with a Design to be any ways advantaged by it.

This Privilege could not be conferr'd by any besides the popular Assembly, whence the Citizens thus admitted were call'd Δημοκρατοῖσι, in Opposition to the Freeborn. Neither was the first Gift of the People to take Effect, unless they thought fit to ratify it in a second Assembly, wherein six thousand Citizens were required to be present. And for Fear the Authority or Interest of any Person should sway them to comply with such Requests against their Inclinations, they gave their Votes privately, by casting little Stones into Urns, placed on Purpose in their Assemblies by the Prytanes, who were also obliged to provide a sufficient Number of Stones for the Suffragants; nay, farther, till all had done voting, the Strangers that petition'd for Freedom were not permitted to come into the Place of the Assembly. And after all this, if any one appear'd to be undeserving of the Honour they had conferr'd upon him, an Appeal might be made to a certain Court, which had Power to enquire into the Lives and Conditions of these Persons, and deprive such as they found unworthy, by recalling the Freedom which had been granted thro' the Ignorance and Inconsideration of the Multitude; and this Disgrace befel Pytholaus, the Thessalian, and Apollonides the Olynthian (q). It was further provided by Solon, that none should live at Athens as free Citizens, except such as were banish'd from their own Country, or voluntarily came to reside at Athens with their whole Families. Whereby he, no doubt, intended to prevent all such from enjoying the Privileges of Athens, who had greater Alliances and Interests in other Places (r).

The Manner of Admission was by declaring that such an one was incorporated amongst the Denizens of Athens, and invested with all the Honours, Privileges, and Immunities belonging to them; and had a Right to partake of, and assist at the Performance of all their Holy Rites and Mysteries, except such as were appropriated to certain noble Families, such as were the Eumolpidæ, Ceryces, Cynidæ, which had certain Priesthoods, and holy Offices peculiar to themselves; or (as others are of Opinion) they were excluded from all the Offices of Priesthood of whatever Denomination: Which is the more probable, because the freeborn Athenians were themselves excluded from those Offices which were appropriated to the sacred Families. Except also the Offices of the nine Archons, which none but freeborn Athenians were allow'd to execute; that neither the Religion, nor the Management of Publick Affairs might be entrusted in foreign Hands. Yet this extended not to the Children of Citizens thus adopted, who were allow'd all the Privileges of Natives. Lastly, they were admitted into a certain Tribe, and Hundred, and so the Ceremony ended (s).

Freeborn Athenians were those that had both, or one of their Parents an Athenian. Aristotle tells us, that in several Common-wealths, at the first, those were accounted free, that were born of a Free-woman; but when the Number of Inhabitants increased, such only were esteem'd free, as were descended from Parents that were both free (t). And so it came to pass in Athens; where it was decreed by Solon, that none begotten out of lawful Marriage, which could then be celebrated only between Free-Citizens, should have Right to inherit their Father's Estate. This appears from the following Words of Aristophanes :

Ἐρῶ ὃ δὴ καὶ τὸν Σολῶνος σοὶ νόμον·

Νόθῳ ὃ μὴ εἶναι ἀσχιεΐαν (u).

But this Law was afterwards abrogated by the tacit Consent of the Common-wealth, till the Time of Pericles, who when he flourish'd in the State, and had Sons lawfully begotten, propos'd a Law, that those only should be reputed true Citizens of Athens, who were born of Parents that were both Athenians; and having prevail'd with the People to give their Consent to it, little less than five thousand were deprived of their Freedom, and sold for Slaves; and those, who enduring the Test, remain'd in the Government, and pass Muster for true-born Athenians, were found in the Poll to be fourteen thousand and forty Persons in Number. But Pericles himself afterwards, having lost all his legitimate Sons, so far persuad'd the Athenians, that they cancel'd the Law, and granted that he should enroll his Bastard Sons in the Register of his own Ward, by his paternal Name; thinking that by those Losses he had been sufficiently punished for his former Arrogance; and therefore being of Opinion, that he had been shrewdly handled by the Divine Vengeance, of which he had run so severe a Gantlope, and that his Request was such as became a Man to ask, and Men to grant. Thus Plutarch (w). But this Law was again repealed by Aristophan the Orator, after the Expulsion of the thirty Tyrants, Euclides being Archon; at which Time the ancient Law was revived, That all, whose Mothers were not Citizens, should be nothi; illegitimate (x). For legitimate Children, are those who are born of lawful Wives, who must be Free-Citizens, others being only reputed Concubines. And thus Grammarians commonly explain Nothus. Νόθῳ ὁ ἐκ ξένου, ἢ παλλακίδῳ. Nothus; a Bastard is one born of a Stranger, or an Harlot. But γνήσιῳ, a legitimate Son, is interpreted by the same Persons, ὁ ἐκ γυναικὸς ἀσπῆς καὶ γαμετῆς, ἢ ἐκ νομίμων γάμων, One born of a Citizen, and a Wife, or one born in lawful Matrimony (y).

And those that were only of the Half-Blood, when they were invested with Freedom, were always reputed inferior, and less honourable than those that were of the whole; and several Marks and Customs they had to distinguish them from the others, as particularly, that those, who had but one Parent an Athenian, were not allow'd to exercise themselves in any of the Gymnasia, that were frequented by those who had both; but only at the Cynosarges, a Place without the City; and that this was esteem'd a Mark of Disgrace, is evident from the Practice of Themistocles, who was but of the Half-Blood of Athens, and to take away, or at least lessen this Distinction, used to engage the noble Athenians to go and perform their Exercises with him (z). In the same Place there was a Court of Judicature, where Persons suspected of having fraudulently insinuated themselves into the Number and Privileges of Citizens were arraign'd. This was reputed a very great Offence; insomuch that whoever had δίχνη τ' ξενίας (so this Action was term'd) preferr'd against him, was immediately made a close Prisoner, and put in Chains, before he could be brought before the Judges (a). Neither was it a sufficient Vindication to have been once acquitted by his proper Judges. But it was customary to bring the Cause to a second Hearing, before the Thesmothetæ, if there was any just Cause to suspect, that he had been too favourably treated.

And in order to clear the City of pretended and false Members, it was decreed in the second Year of the ninetieth Olympiad, Archias being then Archon, that a strict Inquisition should be made into Causes of this Nature by Men of the same Borough with the Criminal. This Inquisition was term'd Διαψήφισις, and perform'd in the following Method (b). When any Person was accused, the Δήμαρχος, or Prefect of the Borough (Δῆμος) to whose Custody was committed the ληξιαρχικὸν γραμματεῖον, or Publick Register of the Citizens, convened together the Members of his Borough (δημόται.) Then the Names of all the Citizens of that Borough being recited out of the Register, the Criminal was obliged to signify the particular φρατρία, or Ward, whereof he pretended himself a Member, and to prove his Right of Succession by sufficient Witneses. Or in Case he claim'd his Freedom from the Gift of the People, and not by Inheritance, the publick Decree of the popular Assembly, whereby his Privilege had been conferr'd, was to be produced. Then the δημόται, having first taken an Oath to determine according to the Rules of Justice, and maturely deliberated upon the Evidence, privately gave their Opinions, in doing which they commonly used Leaves or Beans. If the white Beans were found superior in Number, the Prisoner was acquitted: But if the Black appear'd to be most numerous, then he was deprived of his Freedom, and after that call'd ἀποψήφιστός, as the Action of condemning him was term'd ἀποψήφισις (c). And this Verdict was to be given in before Sun-set; the Consequence whereof was this, that the Person deprived of his Freedom should be reckon'd amongst the Μέτοικοι, Sojourners. But if he would not acquiesce in the Determination of his own Borough, an Appeal was granted to the Thesmothetæ, who having assign'd proper Judges to hear his Appeal, he was either restored to his Family; or, if the former Sentence appear'd to be just and well grounded, he was sold for a Slave.

Farther, to prevent all Frauds and Contentions of this Nature, all Fathers were obliged to enroll their Sons in the Register of their particular φρατρία, term'd κοινὸν γραμματεῖον. At which Time they made Oath, that every Son so registered was either born to them in lawful Matrimony, or lawfully adopted (d). Notwithstanding which, the φράτορες, or Members of that Ward, had the Liberty of rejecting any Person, against whom sufficient Evidence appear'd, concerning which they voted by private Suffrages (e). Yet if any Person was unjustly rejected by the Men of his own Ward, he was allow'd to appeal to the Magistrates (f); by whom, if he was declared to be lawfully born or adopted, he was then register'd by his own and his Father's Name, in this Form, Θρασύλλου & Απολλοδώρου, Thrasylus the Son of Apollodorus (g). The adopted Sons were register'd upon the Festival Thargelia, in the Month Thargelion; the natural, upon the third Day of the Festival Apaturia, call'd Κρεεῶτες, in the Month Pyanerpsion. At what Age Children were thus register'd, is not agreed. Some are of Opinion, that at every Return of the Apaturia, it was customary to register all the Children, who had been born that Year (h). Others affirm, that they were commonly three or four Years old before they were register'd (i). Cnemion in Heliodorus (k) is enrolled after he has learn'd the Letters of the Alphabet. And the Chorus, in the Ranæ of Aristophanes (l), reflects upon Archedemus, as not having been admitted into the Number of the φεάτορες, till he was ἐπίετης, seven Years old.

Βέλεθε δὴ ἴσα κοινῇ
 ὅς ἐπίετης ὢν ἔκ' ἔρυσσε φεάτορας.

Whereby they seem to intimate, that he had fraudulently insinuated himself into the Number of the Citizens, it being usual for those, who were freeborn, to be register'd before that Age, as we are there informed by the Greek Scholiast; tho' the Time of doing it appears from the foremention'd Instances to have been unfix'd and arbitrary.

There were two other Seasons when young Athenians were enroll'd in a publick Register, which, being by some learned Men confounded with the Time of registering already mention'd, may not unfitly be explain'd in this Place. The second Time therefore, wherein they were register'd, was when they arrived at the Age of eighteen Years, when (as we are expressly told by Julius (m) Pollux) they were admitted into the Number of the Εφηβοί. And this Registering seems to have been mistaken for the former, because both were done on the same Day, viz. the third Day of the Festival Apaturia, which, as some think, was call'd Κρεεῶτες, ἀπὸ τῆ κείρειν τὴν κόμην, because they, who were enroll'd amongst the Ephēbi, used then to shave their Hair, which it was customary to consecrate to some of the Gods; which Ceremony was never perform'd till a long Time after the Age, at which they were admitted amongst the φεάτορες, and therefore must belong to the other Time of Registering.

The third Time of registering young Athenians, was before the Festival Panathenæa (n), when those who were twenty Years old were introduced at a publick Meeting of the Δημόβουλοι, Men of the same (δημόθεν) Borough, and entred in a Register call'd λεξισαρχικὸν γραμματεῖον, where, in the Names of all Persons of that Borough, who were of Age to succeed in the ἀνζήεις, or Inheritance of their Fathers, were enter'd (o).

This was term'd εἰς ἀνδρας ἐγγραφεσθαι, to be registred amongst the Men; the Persons, thus enroll'd, being henceforwards their own Masters, and free from the Government of their Guardians.

After Cecrops had settled a Form of Government amongst the Athenians, for the better Administration of Justice, and the Prevention of Deceit, and over-reaching one another in Commerce, he divided 'em into four Φυλαὶ, or Tribes; each Tribe he subdivided into three Parts, call'd Τριτῆυς, Εθνη, or Φρασεῖα; and each of these into thirty Γένη, or Families; which, because they consisted of thirty Men, were call'd Τεσσαράδεις; and they that were Members of these were call'd Ομοσάλακτοι, and Γεννηῆται, not from any Relation to one another, but only because they lived in the same Borough, and were educated together, and join'd in one Body or Society; the same Persons were call'd Ορσεῶνες, because they participated of the same Sacrifices, and worshipped the same Gods together, from Οργια, which, tho' it properly signifies only the Mysteries of Bacchus, yet is often taken for the Ceremonies used in the Worship of any other Deity (p).

The Names of the Tribes were these, 1. Κεκεροπίς, from Cecrops, for it was usual with the Ancients, out of an earnest Desire of continuing their Memories to Posterity, to call Cities, or Countries, or any Monuments that seem'd likely to remain to succeeding Ages, by their own Names. 2. Αὐτόχθων, from a King of that Name, reported by some to have reign'd in some Part of Attica before Cecrops; or rather from the Name of Αὐτόχθονες, in which the Athenians gloried not a little. 3. Ακταία, from Αἴταιος, or Αἴαον, another of the Kings before Cecrops; or from ἀκτῆ, which signifies a Shore, because a great Part of Attica, and that in particular, where this Tribe inhabited, lay towards the Sea: And this was the Reason why the whole Country was sometimes call'd Αἴε. And the same Cause is given for the Name of the fourth Tribe, which they call'd Παραλία, from its Nearness to the Sea.

In the Reign of Cranæus, new Names were impos'd upon them, and they were call'd, 1. Κραναϊς, from the King's Name. 2. Αθηῖς, from a young Lady, the Daughter of Cranæus. 3. Μεσόσαια. 4. Διακρίς. And both these, I suppose, were nam'd from their Situation; the latter being seated upon a craggy Shore, and the former in the inland Part of the Country.

Erechthonius, being advanced to the Kingdom, call'd them after the Names of Jupiter, Minerva, Neptune, and Vulcan, 1. Διάς. 2. Αθλιώης. 3. Ποσειδωνιάς. 4. Ηρακιδιάς (q).

Afterwards, under Erechtheus, they received new Names from the Sons of Ion, a Man of great Repute amongst the Athenians, and General of their Armies, as Herodotus reports (r). The Names were, 1. Γελέοις. 2. Οπλίται. 3. Αιγικώεις. 4. Αρσίδες. And of these Names Euripides is to be understood, when he introduces Minerva speaking thus of Ion (s).

 With how much Prowess, Policy, and Art

 Shall bless him with four Sons, by whom, in Tribes,

 And bear her sev'ral Names deriv'd from them.

J. A.

And Herodotus (t) and Pollux are of the same Opinion, tho' they are herein contradicted by others, as we find in Plutarch, who hath likewise made some Alteration in the Names; his Words are these, "Some affirm that the Tribes did not take their Names from the Sons of Ion, but from the different Sorts of Occupations, which they followed; the Soldiers were call'd Οπαλίται; the Craftsmen, Εργάται; and of the remaining three, the Farmers, Γεωργοὶ; the Shepherds and Graiers, Αιγικῆραι (u).

Afterwards, when the Number of Inhabitants was increased, Clisthenes, having first advised with Apollo's Oracle, as it was usual to do in every Concern of Moment, alter'd the Number of the Tribes, increasing them from four to ten, and gave them new Names, taken from certain ancient Heroes, all born in Attica, except Ajax the Son of Telamon, to whom he gave a Place amongst the rest, as being a Neighbour, Friend, and Companion in the Wars (w); for, as Homer reports, Ajax's Forces were join'd to those of Meneſtheus, the Athenian General,

Αἴας δ' ἐν Σαλαμῖνι ἄγειν δ' ὕοκαίδεκα νῆας,
 Στῆσέ δ' ἄγων ἰν' Ἀθιναίων ἱσανθο φάλαγξες.

Twelve Ships from Salamis stout Ajax brought,
 And rank'd his Men, where the Athenians fought.

Mr. Creech.

And Plutarch reports, that when the Athenians and Megarensians both made Pretensions to Salamis, and chose the Spartans to decide the Controversy, these Lines of Homer, being produced by Solon, did the Athenians a considerable Kindness, serving very much to strengthen their Title to that Island. To return, these Heroes, from the Names they gave to the Tribes, were call'd ἐπαύνημοί, and honour'd with Statues erected near the Senate-house. Their Names, as recorded by Pausanias, are these, Erechtheus, Cecrops, Ægeus, Pandion, Acamas, Antiochus, Leo, Oeneus, Hippothoon, Ajax. And the Names of the Tribes are these, Ἐρεχθίδης, Κεκροπίς, Αἰγυῖς, Πανδίωνης, Ἀκαμαντίς, Ἀντιόχου, Λεωσίδης, Οἰνίς, Ἰαποδωανίς, Αἰανίς.

Afterwards, when Antigonus and Demetrius freed the Athenians from the Macedonian Slavery, they augmented their Tribes, adding two to their former Number, which, in Honour of their Deliverers, they call'd from their Names, Αντιγονίς, and Δημητρίδης (x). But the Gratitude of the Athenians being no longer liv'd, than the good Fortune and Successes of those two Princes, the Tribes soon chang'd their first Names, for those of Ἀτταλίδης and Πτολεμαίς, the former of which was derived from Attalus, King of Pergamus; the latter from Ptolomy, King of Ægypt, from both of which the Athenians had receiv'd signal Favours (y).

This was the constant Number of the Athenian Tribes, which lasted as long as the City maintained its Liberty and Form of Government. Each of these was at the first divided into several Parts, which have been already mentioned. And the better to maintain a mutual Correspondence, and for the Promotion of good Fellowship, and Kindness amongst them, they had publick Feasts, first instituted by Solon, where they all met together, and made merry (z). These Meetings were nam'd from the Persons assembled at them; if the whole Tribe came together, then they call'd it δ᾿ἑσπρον φυλετικὸν; if only one φρατρία, then it was δ᾿ἑσπρον φρατρικὸν, or of a δῆμος, it was δ᾿ἑσπρον δημοτικὸν.

These δῆμοι were little Boroughs in Attica, several of which belonged to every Tribe, and though they were reckoned together in the Business of the Commonwealth, yet had separate Habitations, distinct Rites and Ceremonies in the Performance of Holy Worship; nay, and different Gods too, for each of them ador'd peculiar Deities, and yet all unanimously agreed in worshipping Minerva, who was the Tutelar Goddess of the whole Country, whereas the other Deities had only certain Parts assign'd them, and in those they were inferior to Minerva, the supreme Governess. And this Difference in Religion was very ancient, being of no less Duration than the Commonwealth itself; for when Theseus had prevail'd upon them to leave their Country Seats, and unite themselves in one City, they thought it would be impious and unpardonable to desert the Gods of their Ancestors, and therefore judg'd it agreeable to the Respect due from them to their Tutelar Deities, to pay them the same Honours, and frequent the same Places of Worship they had formerly done (a).

The greatest Use of these δῆμοι was in their Forms of Law and Contracts, whereby sufficient Provision was made against all Fraud, Deceit, and Mistakes. Hence we read of such punctual Clauses in their Writs, as these, N. the Son of N. of the Tribe of Æantus, of the Borough of Rhannus, &c.

(x) Plutarch. Demetrio. (y) Stephan. V. Ἀτταλίδης & Βερενικίδας. (z) Athen. Dip. l. XV. (a) Livius, Pausan. Atticis.

The Number of them was an hundred seventy four (b), some of which, having the same Names, were distinguished by their Situation, being call'd καθύπερθεν, and ὑπένερθεν, Upper and Lower. All of them were divided into Greater and Less; the μικροί, or Less, were these (c). Alimustians, Zoster, Prospaltians, Anagyrastians, Cephale, Praseis, Lampreis, Phyleis, Myrrhinustians, Athmonians, Acharnæ, Marathon, Brauron, Rhanus. The rest were Greater, and may not unfitly be thus divided according to their Tribes.

Of the Sojourners, and Servants, in Athens.

THE second Sort of the Inhabitants of Attica were call'd Μέτοικοι, by which Word were signified Persons that came from a foreign Country, and settled in Attica, being admitted by the Council of Areopagus, and enter'd in a publick Register (d). They differ'd from the Πολίται, or Citizens, because they were not free Citizens of Athens, but either came from another City themselves, or were descended from such as did; and from the Ξένοι, or Strangers, because they took up their Lodgings only for a short Time; whereas the Μέτοικοι had fix'd Habitations, and constantly resided upon the Place, whither they had transplanted themselves.

They were permitted to dwell in the City, and follow their own Business without Disturbance, but could not be intrusted with any publick Office, give their Votes in the Assemblies, or have any Share in the Government; being obliged to sit still, as Spectators in a Theatre, without intermeddling, or any Way concerning themselves with State Affairs, and patiently submit to the Decrees enacted by the Citizens, and observe all the Laws and Customs of the Country. And therefore Aristophanes in Suidas compares them to Chaff, as being an unprofitable and useles Part of the Commonwealth.

Τὸς γὰρ Μέτοικους ἄχυσα ἴων ἀσῶν λέγω.

The Sojourners (if I may speak my Mind)

Are, as it were, the City's Chaff and Scum:

J. A.

They were not allowed to act any Thing, or manage any Business in their own Names, but were obliged to chuse out of the Citizens one, to whose Care and Protection they would commit themselves, and whose Duty it was to defend them from all Violence and Oppression. This is intimated in Terence's Eunuchus, where Thais puts herself into the Hands of Phædria's Family,

(d) Aristophanis Scholiastes in Aves,

————— *CH. Tum autem Phædriæ, Meo fratri, gaudeo amorem esse omnem in tranquillo, una est domus,

Nobis dedit se*————— (e).

Doth glad my Soul, for Thais now's his own,
Since the Protection of herself she leaves
To my old Father's Care and Management.

J. A.

The Person to whom they committed themselves was call'd Πεσάρης, and was allow'd to demand several Services of them, in which, if they fail'd, or if they neglected to choose a Patron, an Action was commenced against them before the Polemarchus, call'd Απεργασίης Δικη, whereupon their Goods were confiscated.

In Consideration of the Privileges allow'd them, the Commonwealth required them to perform several Duties; for Instance, in the Panathenæa, a Festival celebrated in Honour of Minerva; the Men were oblig'd to carry certain Vessels call'd Σκάφαι, whereby are meant not Spades, as Meursius and the Translator of Harpocration have explain'd this Word, but Navicula, little Ships, which were Signs of their foreign Extraction; which few have hitherto rightly understood. Hence they were term'd σκαφεῖς, or σκαφοφοροί, by the ancient Writers of Comedy. The Women carried ὑδρεῖαι, Vessels of Water, or σκιαδέια, Umbrellas, to defend the free Women from the Weather, and are thence nam'd ὑδριαφοροί, and σκιαδοφοροί. This last Custom was begun after Xerxes and the Persians had been driven out of Greece, when the Athenians, becoming insolent with Success, set a greater Value upon the Freedom of their City, than they had formerly done (f).

Beside this, the Men paid an annual Tribute of twelve Drachms, tho' Hesychius mentioneth ten only, and the Women, that had no Sons, were liable to be taxed six; but such, as had Sons that paid, were excused. This Tribute was call'd Μετοίκιον, and was exacted not only of those that dwelt in Athens, but of all such as settled themselves in any Town of Attica, as appears from the Instance given us by Lyfias (g) in Oropus, which was an Athenian Town, situated upon the Confines of Bœotia. About the Time of Xerxes's Invasion upon Greece, Themistocles having, by his eminent Service, raised himself to great Power in the Commonwealth, prevail'd so far upon the Athenians, that they remitted this Exaction, and continued the Sojourners in the Enjoyment of their Privileges, without requiring any such Acknowledgment from them (h). How long they enjoy'd this Immunity, I cannot tell; but it is certain they kept it not long, and probably it might be taken from them, and the Act repeal'd, as soon as Themis-

(e) Act. ult. Scen. ult. (f) Æliani variz Historiz, Lib. VI. c. 1. (g) Orat. in Philonem. (h) Diodor. Sicul. l. XI.

Socrates fell into Disgrace. Upon Non-payment of this Imposition, the Delinquent was immediately seized by the Tax-masters, and carried away to the Market set apart for that Purpose, (call'd by Plutarch Μετοίκιον (i), and by Demosthenes (k) Πωλητήριον τῶ Μετοίκις, where they were expos'd to Sale by the Πωληταί, who were Officers concern'd in the publick Revenues. And this Fate had the famous Philosopher Xenocrates undergone, had not Lycurgus rescued him out of the Hands of the Officers, as Plutarch reports (l); Diogenes Laertius (m) tells us, he was actually sold, because he had not wherewithal to pay the Tribute, but was redeem'd by Demetrius the Phalerian, who, because he would not violate the Laws of the City, nor yet could endure to see so great and useful a Man reduced to so miserable a Condition, restored him his Liberty, and paid for him what the Tax-master demanded.

But tho' these Men were incapable of having any Preferment, or bearing any Office in the Commonwealth, yet they were not wholly destitute of Encouragements to the Practice of Virtue, and the Undertaking of noble Actions; and being serviceable to the Publick. For such, as signalized themselves by any notable Exploit, were seldom pass'd by neglected; or unrewarded; but were taken into publick Consideration, and, by a special Edict of the People, honour'd with an Immunity from all Impositions, Taxes, and other Duties, except such as were required of the freeborn Citizens, and therefore they call'd this Honour ἰσοτέλεια, and the Persons that enjoy'd it ἰσοτελεῖς, because they did ἴσα τελέειν τοῖς ἀσείοις, pay only an equal Proportion with the Citizens. This was a Sort of an Half-freedom, being the same with what we sometimes find call'd Ατέλεια, of which I have spoken already, and was granted to Foreigners that had deserved well of the Publick, but not merited enough to be enroll'd amongst the true Citizens; an Instance of which we have in Perdiccas King of Macedon, and sometimes in whole Cities and Commonwealths, that had by some special Service demonstrated the Kindness and good Affection they bore to Athens; two Examples of this we have in the Thebans and Olynthians in Theophrastus, as he is cited by Suidas, to whom, with Harpocration and Hesychius, we are chiefly obliged for these Accounts.

I proceed, in the next Place, to speak of the third, and most numerous Part of the Inhabitants of Attica, I mean the Servants, of which there were two Sorts; the first was of those, that thro' Poverty were forced to serve for Wages, being otherwise freeborn Citizens, but not having any Suffrage in publick Affairs, by Reason of their Indigence, it being forbidden at some Times (for this Prohibition was not perpetual) that Persons, not having such an Estate as was mention'd in the Law, should have the Privilege of giving their Voices. These were properly call'd Θῆτες, and Πελάδοι (n), and were the most genteel Sort of Servants, being only in that State during their own Pleasure and Necessities; and having Power either to change their Masters, or (if they became able to subsist by themselves) wholly to release themselves from Servitude.

(i) Flaminio. (k) Orat, I, in Aristogit. (l) Loc. cit. (m) Xenocrate. (n) Pollux. lib. III. c. 8.

The second Sorts of Servants were such as were wholly in the Power, and at the Disposal of their Lords, who had as good a Title to them, as to their Land and Estates, a considerable Part of which they were esteem'd. They were wholly at their Command, to be employ'd as they saw convenient, in the worst and most wretched Drudgeries; and to be used at their Discretion, pinch'd, starv'd, beaten, tormented, and that in most Places, without any Appeal to superior Power, and punish'd even with Death itself. And, which yet farther enhanced the Misery of their Condition, they had no Hopes of recovering their Freedom themselves, or procuring it for their Posterity, but were to continue in the same Condition as long as they lived, and all the Inheritance they could leave their Children (for their Masters not only allow'd but encouraged them to marry, that they might increase in Number) was the Possession of their Parents Miseries, and a Condition scarce any Way better than that of Beasts.

The Ancients were very sensible of the hard Usage Slaves met with; and the earnest Desire of Liberty, that reign'd in their own Breasts, and made them always forward to expose their Lives in the Defence of it, was a sufficient Cause to beget in them a Jealousy of the like in other Persons; Men being generally very apt to suspect others of the same Passions and Inclinations, which themselves have been-guilty of. And we find them very industrious to prevent and suppress all such Motions, by keeping the Slaves at a very great Distance from them, by no means condescending (I speak of the Generality of them) to converse familiarly with them; by instilling into them a mean Opinion of themselves; debasing their Natures, and extinguishing in them (as much as possible) all Sparks of Generosity and Manhood, by an illiberal Education, and accustoming them to Blows and Stripes, which they thought were very disagreeable to ingenuous Natures; and subduing them with hard Labour and Want; and, in short, by using them almost in the same Manner, nay sometimes worse than we do brute Animals. A sufficient Proof whereof (were there no more) we have in the famous Roman Cato, a Man celebrated in all Ages for his exact Observance of the nicest Rules of Justice; nor doth it at all invalidate the Evidence, that this was done by a Roman, since both at Rome, and in Greece, and most other civiliz'd Countries, the Usage of Slaves seems to have been much what the same, some few Alterations excepted. This Cato (Plutarch tells us) when his Servants grew old and unfit for Labour, notwithstanding they had been very faithful and serviceable to him, and had spent their Youth and Strength in labouring for him; for all this, when Years came upon them, and their Strength fail'd them, would not be at the Charge of maintaining them, but either turn'd them away, unable to provide for themselves, or let them starve to Death in his own Family (o). It is true, this Barbarity was not practis'd in all Places, and my Author thinks the Censor blame-worthy for it, imputing it to a savage and unnatural Temper; yet hence appears the miserable Condition of Slaves, that were forced to undergo the most arbitrary and unjust Impositions of the cruellest and most barbarous Tyrants. Now the better to shew you what State they were in, I will give you a Taste of the constant Behaviour of their Masters towards them in a few Instances, which were not the Effects of the Passion, Pride, or Humour of private Persons, but the common and general Practice of the whole Country.

It was accounted an unsufferable Piece of Impudence, for a Servant to imitate the Freemen in any Thing, or affect to be like them in their Dress, or any Part of their Behaviour. In those Cities, where they let their Hair grow long, for a Servant to have long Hair was an unpardonable Offence, insomuch that the Comedian, speaking it proverbially of one that does what becomes him not, says, Ἐπειτα δῆτα δῶλθ' ἂν κόμην ἔχεις (p).

Then you, disdaining your own State, affect

To wear long Hair as Freemen.—

J. A.

They had a peculiar Form, after which they cut their Hair, call'd Θριξ ἀνδραποδώδης, which they laid aside, if ever Fortune was so propitious, as to restore them their Liberty. And because Slaves were generally rude and ignorant, therefore ἔχειν τὰς ἀνδραποδώδεις ἐπι τῆς ψυχῆς τρίχας, was proverbially applied to any dull, stupid Fellow (q). The Freemen's Coats were ἀμυμιμόσχαλοι, had two Sleeves; whereas those of Slaves were ἑτερομόσχαλοι, had only one Sleeve (r).

At Athens, it was common to be in Love with Boys. Socrates and Plato's Amours are notorious enough, and Solon himself was too weak to resist this Passion, but thought it neither unlawful, nor scandalous, but on the contrary honourable, and well becoming an ingenuous Education; therefore he forbid Slaves the Use of this Pleasure, "as it were" inviting the Worthy to Practice, when he commanded the Unworthy "to forbear, says Plutarch (s)". The same Lawgiver forbid them to anoint, or perfume themselves with sweet Odours, allowing those Pieces of Gentility only to Persons of better Birth and Quality. Slaves were neither permitted to plead for themselves, nor to be Witnesses in any Cause. Thus Terence, the Scene of whose Action is laid in Athens, expressly affirms in his Phormio (t).

*Servum hominem causam orare leges non sinunt,

Yet it was customary to extort Confessions from them by Tortures, which, because they were often so violent as to occasion the Death of the Slave, or to disable him from being serviceable to his Master; whoever demanded any Slave for this End (which was call'd παρακαλεῖν, and the Action πρόκλησις) was obliged to give his Master a sufficient Security to answer the Loss of his Slave (u). The several Ways of torturing Slaves are briefly compriz'd in the following Verses of Aristophanes (w).

(p) Aristophan. Avibus. (q) Eustath. II. d. p. 59. Edit. Bas. (r) Pollux. On. I. VII. c. 13. (s) Solone. (t) Act. II. Scen. I. (u) Demosthenes Orat. adv. Pannetum. (w) Ranis. Act. II. Scen. VI.

Slaves were not permitted to communicate at the Worship of some of the Deities, but were accounted unholy and prophane; and thought to be offensive to the Gods, and to pollute the Worship by their Presence; as for Instance, at the Worship of the Eumenides, or Furies, at Athens; and Hercules, at Rome. Of which I shall have Occasion to speak something more hereafter.

Their Education was quite different from that of freeborn Children; these were instructed in all the liberal Arts, the others only taught how to obey, and drudge in their Master's Business. And whereas the common Method was, to win those of ingenuous Births, by gentle Means, into a Performance of their Duty; the Manner of tutoring Slaves was the same which they used to tame wild Beasts, namely, Stripes, and the cruellest Severity. For all this, there wanted not some, whom Nature had bleis'd with a more happy Genius, and a larger Share of Parts than the rest, and Fortune directed to kind and gentle Masters, that, by their great Improvements in Learning and Wisdom, were a sufficient Evidence, that Nobility of Soul, and Greatness of Understanding, are not confin'd to any Rank or Quality, but that even the meanest and most abject Persons may dive into the most hidden Secrets of Nature, and be admitted to the most intimate Converse with the Muses. To prove this, we need only mention Æsop, the Author of the Fables; Alcman (x) the Poet, and Epicætetus the famous Moralist, of whose Poverty and servile Condition we have Mention in this Epigram:

Δεῖλ' Ἐπικτήτῳ γένονμιν, καὶ σώματι πνεῦς,
 Καὶ πενίῳ ἰεῖς, καὶ φίλ' Ἀθανάτοισ.

The Gods to me great Favours do dispense,
 Tho'n Bondage, crippled, and in Indigence.

J. A.

They thought it a Presumption, and a Sort of lessening the freeborn Citizens, to call Slaves by any Name that was in Use amongst them: But if any Man was so bold, as to give his Servant the Name of a Person of Quality, or Honour, it was a signal Affront. Domitian is said to have punish'd Metius Pomposianus, for calling his Slaves by the illustrious Names of Hannibal and Mago; and, to come nearer to our Purpose, the Athenians enacted a Law, that no Man should presume to call any of his Servants by the Names of Harmodius and Aristogiton, two famous Patriots, that with Courage and Resolution opposed the Tyranny of Pisistratus's Sons (y). At the same Place there was a Law, whereby they were prohibited to derive the Name of their Slaves from any of the solemn Games: Whence this Question is propounded by Athenæus (x), How came it to pass that Nemea the Minstrel derived her Name from the Nemean Games? For the most Part, as Strabo reports, they were call'd after the Names of their native Countries, as Δυδῶς, or Σύεσι, if they were born in Lydia or Syria; or, by the Names which were most used in those Nations, as Manes, or Midas in Phrygia; Tibias in Paphlagonia. The most common Names in Athens were Geta and Davus, being taken from the Getes and Daci, who, as my Author thinks, were formerly call'd Δαῦνοι, or Δαυι (a). They seldom consisted of above two Syllables, and therefore Demosthenes having objected to Æschines, that his Father was a Slave, tells him farther, as a Proof of what he affirm'd, that he had falsified his Name, calling him Atrometus, whereas in Truth it was Tromes (b). The Reason of this seems to have been, that their Names, being short, might be more easily and quickly pronounced. Upon the same Account, Oppian advises to give Dogs short Names:

(x) Ælian, V. H. (y) Alex, ab Alex. I. III. c. 20.

Οὐνόμαστα σκυλάκεσσι

Βαδὲ τίθει, δοῦκ' ἀπάνστα, δοῦκ' ἵνα βάζῃν ἀκῆη (b).

Let Hounds, which are design'd for Game and Sport,
Have Names impos'd that easy be, and short;
Lest at the Huntsman's Call they trace in vain,
And run with open Cry confus'dly o'er the Plain.

J. A.

Hence it was common for Slaves, who had recover'd their Freedom, to change their servile Names for others, which had more Syllables. Thus Stephanus is said in the Epigram, to have changed that Name for Philostephanus (c):

Ἦν Στέφανος πτωχός, καὶ παῖς ἄμα· νῦν δ' ἀποκόψας
Πλατεῖ, καὶ γενένη' εὐδὺ Φιλοστέφανος.

Above all Things, especial Care was taken that Slaves should not bear Arms, which (since their Number was almost twenty Times as great as that of the Citizens) might have been dangerous to the Publick. For this Reason it was not usual for them to serve in the Wars; and therefore when Virgil speaks of a Slave's assisting in the War of Troy, he tells us, it was contrary to Law and Custom,

————— Vix unus Helenor,

Et Lycus elapsi, quorum primævus Helenor;

Yet sometimes we find the Slaves arm'd in the Defence of their Masters and themselves; but this was never allow'd, except in Cases of most extreme Danger, when all other Means of preserving the Commonwealth were taken away. The first Time it was practis'd, is said to have been when the Persians under Darius invaded the Athenians, and received a total Overthrow by them in Marathon (e). The like was afterwards put in Practice by other Commonwealths, but not without great Caution; Cleomenes, King of Sparta, being fore press'd by the Macedonians and Acbeans, and finding himself unable to make Head against them, arm'd two thousand of the Helotæ, or Lacedæmonian Slaves, that he might make a fit Body to oppose Antigonus's Leucaspidae, or white Shields; but ventur'd not to list any more of them, though Laconia was at that Time furnish'd with much greater Numbers (f). And their Prudence in this Case deserves Commendation, for having exasperated them so much by their hard Usage, they had no Reason to expect any Mercy from them; if ever they should get the upper Hand. And it is very wonderful, that four hundred thousand Men should groan under the Oppression of twenty or thirty thousand, (for those, I have told you already, were the Number of the Slaves, Citizens, and Sojourners in Attica) without ever (some few Times excepted) attempting to assert their Liberty; when, it is evident, they wanted not Strength to turn the State upside down; neither could they be destitute of Opportunities, especially in Times of War, Sedition, and Tumults, in which this City was continually embroil'd, to accomplish such a Design. But this must be ascribed partly to the watchful Eye their Masters and the whole State had upon them; and partly to that Cowardice and Degeneracy, which usually debase the Minds of those, whom Fortune has placed in a servile Condition, however noble and daring they are by Nature; for it is a true Saying of Homer,

Ἥμισυ δὲ τ' ἀρετῆς ἀποαίνου εὐνόπα Ζεὺς
 Ἀνέρες εὐ τ' ἄν μιν κατὰ δόλιον ἤμαρ ἔλησι.

True Valour ne'er can animate that Mind,
 Whose inbred Seeds by Slav'ry are confin'd.

J. A.

But neither the Care of the State, nor the great Power, which Oppression has to debase Men's Souls, could always keep them in Subjection; but Nature sometimes would exert itself, when either a fair Opportunity invited, or some insufferable Oppression compell'd them to endeavour the Recovery of their Liberties, that is, their Lives and Fortunes into their own Hands. Athenæus reports, that in Attica they once seized upon the Castle of Sunium, and committed Ravages throughout the Country; and at the same Time made their second Insurrection in Sicily, for in that Country they frequently rebell'd, but were at last reduced with great Slaughter, no less than a Million of them being kill'd (g). Several other Efforts we find made by them in other Places, to the great Danger, and almost utter Subversion of those Countries. Sometimes in Times of War, the Slaves deserted to the Enemy, the doing which they call'd αὐτομολεῖν (b), which, excepting Theft, a Crime almost peculiar to them, was the most common Offence they committed, being, in most Places, the only Way they had to deliver themselves; but if they were taken, they were made to pay dearly for their Desire of Freedom, being bound fast to a Wheel, and unmercifully beaten with Whips, as the Comedian tells us,

Ἡ δ' ἄλλ' αὐτομολεῖν παρεσκιάσμεν
 Ἐπὶ τροχῷ χ' ἔλκοιτο μασιγέμβυθ' (i).

If wretched Slaves, harras'd and weary'd out
 Under the Thraldom of dire Servitude,
 Should but anticipate sweet Freedom's Joys,
 And make Revolt to their more gentle Foes,
 Fast to a Wheel being bound with Cords, they're whipt.

J. A.

The same Punishment was inflicted on them for Theft, as we learn from Horace (k),

Non furtum feci, nec fugi, si mihi dicat
 Servus, habes pretium, loris non ureris, aio.

Suppose my Slave should say, I neither fly
 Nor steal: Well, thou hast thy Reward, say I,
 Thou art not scourg'd. —————

Mr. Creech.

Sometimes they were rack'd upon the Wheel, (a Cruelty never practis'd upon any freeborn Person) to extort a Confession from them, when they were suspected to have been accessary to any villainous Design, as Aristophanes informs us in his first Comedy, where one says to a Slave,

Ἐπὶ τῷ τροχῷ γὰρ δεῖ σ' ἐκεῖ σρεβλάμεινον
 Εἰπαῖν ἢ πεπανεργηκας. —————

We ought to rack you with incessant Pain,
 To force you to reveal your Rogueries.

J. A.

The common Way of correcting them for any Offence, was to scourge them with Whips; whence a Villain, that had been guilty of any Crime that deserved Punishment, was said μασιγιαῖν, to stand in need of, and as it were itch for a Scourge. Sometimes to prevent their shrinking, or running away, they were tied fast to a Pillar; and therefore Hyperides in Pollux saith, κρεμάσας ἐν τῷ κίονθ', ἐξέδειξεν. For so I think, that Place ought to be read, and not κρεμάσαι ἐν τῷ κίονος, ἐξέδειξεν (l), as the vulgar Editions have it.

They, who were convicted of any notorious Offence, were condemned to grind at the Mill; a Labour exceeding toilsome in those Days, when they were forced to beat their Grain into Meal, being unacquainted with the easy Way of grinding, which is used amongst us, and was the Invention of later Ages. And therefore when they had a Mind to express the Greatness of any Labour or Toil, it was usual to compare it to Grinding in a Mill, Tibi mecum erit, Crasse, in eodem pistrino vivendum, says Tully (m), that is, You and I, Crassus, must undergo the same troublesome Course of Life. But beside the Labour they were put to, they were beaten with Rods, or Scourges, sometimes, if their Offence was very great, to Death, as we learn from Terence, the Scene of whose Drama is laid in Attica, Verberibus cæsum te in pistrinum, Dave, dedam usque ad necem (n).

I'll have you flead, you villainous Cur; to Death. J. A.

Or else, as others understand this Place, they were condemned to that Punishment as long as they lived.

These Mills were call'd in general Μύλωνες, which Word, because of the Cruelty there exercised upon poor Slaves, Pollux tells us was ἐκ εὐφρημος, unlucky, or inauspicious, and not to be nam'd, and therefore he calls it Σίστοποικίδς οἶκος. They had several Names from the different Sorts of Grain that was ground in them, as, Χονδρόκοπια, or Χονδρόκοπέα, Αλφίσεια, Ζώσεια, Ζώνσεια, or Ζώνσεια, and Ζυτσεια, whence comes the Word Ζατρεύειν, to examine upon the Rack, as was usual in that Place (o).

It was likewise customary to stigmatize Slaves, which was usually done in the Forehead, as being most visible; sometimes other Parts were thus used, it being customary, as Galen observes (p), to punish the Member that had offended: If the Slave was a Glutton, his Belly must suffer; if a Tell-tale, his Tongue must be cut out, and so of the rest. The common Way of stigmatizing was, by burning the Member with a red-hot Iron mark'd with certain Letters, till a fair Impression was made, and then pouring Ink into the Furrows, that the Inscription might be the more conspicuous: Persons thus used were call'd Στιγματίαι, and Στιγμώνες, saith Pollux; or Αιταγæ, because that Bird was ποικιλόπτερος, of divers Colours, as Aristophanes tells us (q). Pliny calls them Inscripti (r); and others Literati, as Plautus, ————— si hic literatus me finat.

And what the same Author means by Trium literarum homo, no Man can be ignorant. This Punishment was seldom or never inflicted upon any but Slaves, and with them it was so frequent, that the Samians, when they gave a great Number of Slaves their Liberty, and admitted them to Offices in the State; were branded with the infamous Name of Literati,

Σαμίων ὁ Δῆλος ἐστὶ πολυγράμματος, faith Aristophanes in Plutarch (f); tho' others, and amongst them Plutarch himself, assign different Reasons for this Appellation (t). This was the greatest Mark of Infamy, that could be inflicted on them, and therefore Phocylides advises to forbear it, even in Slaves.

Στίγματα μὴ γέφυς, ἐπονεδίζων δεξέποντα (u).

Brand not your Slaves with Characters of Infamy.

On the contrary, in Thrace, Herodotus tells us, it was accounted a Badge of Honour, and us'd by none but Persons of Credit, nor omitted, but by those of the meanest Rank (w). Τὸ μὲν ἐσίχθαι, εὐγενὲς κέκεται, τὸ δὲ ἀσίχθον ἀγεννὲς, to be stigmatized, says he, is reputed a Mark of Quality, to want which is a Disgrace. The same is affirmed by Claudian of the Geloni, who inhabited a Part of Scythia (x):

Membraque qui ferro gaudet pinxisse Gelonus.

And some relate, that the ancient Britons tenellis infantibus notas certasque figuras animalium ardenti ferro imprimebant: Imprinted upon the Bodies of their Infants the Figures of Animals, and other Marks, with hot Irons (y). The same is likewise affirmed by Tertullian (z), who reports, that the Britons were distinguished by such Marks or Stigmata, in the same Manner as the Garamantes by their Feathers, the Barbarians by their Curls, and the Athenians by their Grasshoppers. And Claudian mentions the same Custom (a):

———— Ferroque notatas

Perlegit exsangues Piclo moriente figuras.

But it must not be forgotten in this Place, that Slaves were not only branded with Stigmata for a Punishment of their Offences; but (which was the common End of these Marks) to distinguish them, in Case they should desert their Masters. For which Purpose, it was common to brand their Soldiers; only with this Difference, that whereas Slaves were commonly stigmatiz'd in their Forehead, and with the Name or some peculiar Character belonging to their Masters: Soldiers were branded in the Hand, and with the Name or Character of their General. After the same Manner, it was likewise customary to stigmatize the Worshipers and Votaries of some of the Gods. Whence, Lucian, speaking of the Votaries of the Syrian Goddesses, affirms, They were all branded with certain Marks, some in the Palms of their Hands, and others in their Necks. Whence it became customary for all the Assyrians thus to stigmatize themselves. And Theodoret is of Opinion (b), that the Jews were forbidden to brand themselves with Stigmata, because the Idolaters, by that Ceremony, us'd to consecrate themselves to their false Deities. The Marks used on these Occasions were various. Sometimes they contained the Name of the God, sometimes his particular Ensign (παράσημον) such were the Thunder-bolt of Jupiter, the Trident of Neptune, the Ivy of Bacchus: Whence Ptolemee Philopater was by some nick-nam'd Gallus, Δὶ τὸ φύλλα κισσοῦ κατεσίχθαι, because his Body was mark'd with the Figures of Ivy-Leaves (c). Or, lastly, they marked themselves with some mystical Number, whereby the God's Name was describ'd : Thus the Sun, who was signify'd by the Number DCVIII. is said to have been represented by these two Numeral Letters XH (d). These three Ways of stigmatizing are all express'd by St John, in the Book of Revelation (e); and he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a Mark in their right Hand, or in their Foreheads: And that no Man might buy or sell, save he that had the Mark, or the Name of the Beast, or the Number of his Name. But to return from this Digression.

Slaves were treated with more Humanity at Athens than in most other Places, for if any of them were grievously oppress'd, they were allow'd to fly for Sanctuary to Theseus's Temple, whence to force them was an Act of Sacrilege (f). And those, that had been barbarously treated by their Masters, had the Privilege of commencing a Suit at Law against them, which they call'd Υβρεως Δίκη, or Αιτίας Δίκη, the former of which was against such as had made any violent Attempts upon the Chastity of their Slaves; the latter against those that had us'd too much Severity in punishing them; and if it appear'd that the Complaint was reasonable and just, the Master was oblig'd to sell his Slave. This is plainly prov'd by Julius Pollux (g), out of Aristophanes's Horæ, whence he cites the following Verses:

Εἰ μὴ κερταίον ἐστὶν εἰς τὸ Θησεῖον
Δραμῆν, ἐκτὶ δ' ἕως ἂν εὐρωμῶ πρᾶσιν, Μένειν.

Unless it be most expedient to fly to the Temple of Theseus, and there remain till we are sold to another Master. The same he observes out of Eurpolis's Πόλεις.

Κακὰ τοιάδε πάσχουσιν, εἰδὲ πρᾶσιν Αἰτῆσιν.

They endure these Evils, and do not demand to be sold. Neither did the Law secure them only from their own Masters, but if any other Citizen did them any Injury, they were allow'd to vindicate themselves by a Course of Law (h).

Besides their being deliver'd from the injurious Treatment of Tyrants, the Slaves at Athens had a great deal the Advantage of their Brethren in other Places, in many Respects; they might use their Tongues with far greater Freedom, as appears every-where from the Comedies of Aristophanes, Plautus, and Terence; and indulge themselves in the Enjoyment of a great many Pleasures, which in other Places they had not the smallest Taste of; insomuch that Demosthenes tells us, the Condition of a Slave in Athens was preferable to that of a free Denizon in some other Cities (i); and Plautus sufficiently testifies the Truth of what he saith,

Atque id ne vos miremini, homines servulos
Potare, amare, atque ad cœnam condicere;

The Laws at Athens don't our Slaves restrain
 From Pleasure, Mirth, and Gaiety of Life,
 For they may revel, be inflam'd with Love,
 And live as much at Ease, as some free Denizens. J. A.

Farther, they were permitted to get Estates for themselves, paying only a small Tribute to their Masters every Year out of them; and if they could procure as much as would pay for their Ransom, their Masters had no Power to hinder them from buying their Liberty, as may be observ'd from the same Author, who introduces a Slave speaking in this Manner,

*Quid tu me verò libertate territas?
 Quod si tu nolis, filiusque etiam tuus,
 Vobis invidis, atque amborum ingratis,
 Una libella liber possum fieri (l).*

Pray, Sir, good Words, since nor you, nor your Son,
 Can me my Liberty deny, although
 You pour out Threat'nings with such rigorous Awe.
 For if I please, one Pound can me release,
 And purchase Freedom.

Sometimes, if they had been faithful and diligent in their Master's Business, they dismiss'd them of their own Accord; and upon the Performance of any remarkable Service for the Publick, the State usually took Care to reward them with Liberty. Such of them as were admitted to serve in the Wars, were seldom left in the Condition of Slaves, either for fear the Remembrance of their former Oppression might move them to revolt to the Enemy, or raise a Sedition at home, so fair an Opportunity being put into their Hands; or to animate them with greater Courage and Constancy to oppose the Invaders, when they were to receive so great a Reward for the Dangers they underwent; or because it was thought unreasonable, that such, as hazarded their Lives in Defence of their Country's Liberty, should themselves groan under the heavy Yoke of Slavery, and be depriv'd of even the smallest Part of that, which was in a great Measure owing to their Courage and Loyalty; for one, I say, or all these Reasons, such, as upon emergent Occasions took up Arms for the publick Safety, seldom fail'd of having their Liberty restor'd to them. An Instance whereof, to mention no more, we have in the Slaves, that behav'd themselves valiantly in the Sea-Fight at Arginusæ, where the Athenians obtain'd a signal Victory against Callicratidas, the Lacedæmonian Admiral; and therefore the Slave in Aristophanes, being almost ready to faint under an heavy Burthen, accuseth his own Cowardice, that hindred him from listing himself amongst the Marine Forces, and thereby recovering his Liberty,

 In boist'rous Seas the Spartan Fleet.

Slaves, as long as they were under the Government of a Master, were call'd Οικίται, but, after their Freedom was granted them, they were Δέλοι, not being, like the former, a Part of their Master's Estate, but only oblig'd to some grateful Acknowledgments and small Services (n), such as were required of the Μέτοικοι, to whom they were in some few Things inferior; but seldom arrived to the Dignity of Citizens, especially if they had received their Freedom from a private Person, and not upon a publick Account; for such, as were advanc'd for publick Services, seem to have liv'd in great Repute, and enjoy'd a larger Share of Liberty than others, that had only merited their Freedom by the Obligations they had laid upon particular Persons. These therefore were sometimes advanc'd to be Citizens, yet not without the Opposition or Dislike of many:

Καὶ γὰρ αἰσχρὸν ἔστι, τῆς μὲν ναυμαχίης αἰτίας μίαν, καὶ Πλαταιᾶς εὐθὺς εἶναι, πάντι δούλων δεσπότης.

It being dishonourable to rank those, who had been in one Engagement at Sea, with the Plataeans, that is, to honour them with the Privileges of Athenian Citizens, and from Slaves to make them Masters, as one affirms in Aristophanes (o). Whence there was a Law enacted, whereby the publick Criers were forbid to proclaim the Freedom of a Slave in the Theatre, that being a Place of publick Concourse, and frequented by Men of other Cities, who would, on that Account, have less Value for the Privileges of Athens (p). Lastly, the ἀπελεύθεροι, Slaves made free, were term'd νόθοι, Bastards; νόθοι γὰρ οὗτοι πρὸς τὰς ἐκ γενετῆς ἐλευθέρους; they being under a Sort of Illegitimacy, if compar'd with the genuine and free-born Citizens (q).

A Tribute of twelve Drachms was exacted of the Μέτοικοι, and the same with an Addition of three Oboli was required of the Freemen (r). Also they were obliged to chuse a Προστάτης, who was to be no other than the Master, out of whose Service they had been releas'd; upon him they attended almost in the same Manner with the Roman Liberti, and Clientes; but in Case they behav'd themselves stubbornly, and ungratefully towards him, he had Power to arrest them, and carry them before a Judge, by whom, if they were found guilty, they were depriv'd of their Liberty, and reduc'd to their former miserable Condition. But if the Judge acquitted them, they became τελέως ἐλευθέρου, intirely free from their Master. This Action was term'd ἀποσασίου δίκη, which Name was also given to the Complaints made by Servants and Freed-men against their Masters and Patrons, which both of them were allow'd to prefer, if they were not treated with all the Humanity that was due to their respective Conditions: But because all the Freed-men's publick Business, like that of the Μέτοικοι, was to be managed chiefly by Proxies; at their Restoration to Liberty, both of them had the Privilege of chusing an Επίτροπος, or Curator, who, in Case his Client receiv'd any Injury from his Patron, was to defend him, to appeal for him, and plead his Cause before the Judges, who, out of Respect to the Patron, were appointed out of his own Tribe (f).

This was the Condition of Slaves in Athens, which tho' in itself deplorable enough, yet, if compar'd with that of their Fellow Sufferers in other Cities, seems very easy, at least tolerable, - and not to be repin'd at. I might here give you an Account of the various Conditions of Slaves in the several Countries of Greece, such as the Penestæ in Thesfaly; the Clarotæ and Mnoitæ in Crete; the Corynephori at Sicyon; the Gymnitæ at Argos, and many others; but I shall only at present lay before you the State of the Helotæ in Sparta, which, because of the frequent Mention made of them in Authors, must not be omitted; and from their Treatment (tho' they were a more genteel Sort of Slaves, and enjoy'd more Privileges (a) than the rest) will appear the Truth of what Plutarch tells us was commonly said of Sparta, Ἐν Λακεδαιμόνι τὸν ἐλεύθερον μάλιστα ἐλεύθερον εἶναι, καὶ τὸν δούλον μάλιστα δούλον, that in Sparta, he that was free, was most so; and he, that was a Slave, was the greatest Slave in the World (b).

The Helotæ were so call'd from Helos, a Laconian Town, conquer'd by the Spartans, who made all the Inhabitants Prisoners of War, and reduced them into the Condition of Slaves (c).

The Freemen of Sparta were forbidden the Exercise of any mean or mechanical Employment; and therefore the whole Care of supplying the City with Necessaries was devolv'd upon the Helots, the Ground was till'd, and all Sorts of Trades managed by them; whilst their Masters, Gentlemen-like, spent all their Time in Dancing, and Feasting, in their Exercises, Hunting-matches, and the λίσχαι, or Places where good Company used to meet (d).

But the being condemned to such Drudgeries, all their Lives, had been at least supportable, had they not been also treated in the most barbarous Manner, and often murder'd without committing any Fault, and without any Shew of Justice. And of this the Κρυπία, or secret Law, the Invention whereof some ascribe to the Ephori, others to Lycurgus, is a sufficient Proof. " It was an Ordinance, (these are Plutarch's own Words) by which those, who had the Care of the young " Men, dispatch'd privately some of the ablest of them into the Coun- " try from time to time, arm'd only with Daggers, and taking a little " necessary Provision with them; these in the Day-time hid them- " selves in the Thickets and Clefts, and there lay close; but in the " Night issued out into the Highways, and murder'd all the Helots they " could light upon; sometimes they set upon them by Day, as they " were at Work in the Field, and kill'd them in cool Blood, as Thucydides reports in his History of the Peloponnesian War. The same Au- " thor tells us (saith Plutarch) that a good Number of them being " crown'd by Proclamation, which was a Token of their being set free, " enfranchis'd for their good Services, and led about to all the Temples " in Token of Honour, disappear'd of a sudden, being about the Num- " ber of two thousand, and no Man either then, or since, could give any " account how they came by their deaths. Aristotle adds, that the Ephori, " so soon as they were entred into their Office, used to declare War a- " gainst them, that they might be massacred with a Pretence of Law.

It is confess'd on all Hands, proceeds my Author, that the Spartans dealt with them very hardly; for it was a thing common to force 'em to drink to Excess, and to lead them in that Condition into their publick Halls, that their Children might see, what a contemptible and beastly Sight a drunken Man is. They made them to dance uncomely Dances, and sing ridiculous Songs; forbidding them expressly to use any that was serious and manly, because they would not have them profan'd by their Mouths. For this Reason, when the Thebans made an Incurſion into Laconia, and took a great Number of the Helots Prisoners, they could by no Means persuade them to sing the Odes of Terpander, Aleman, or Spendon, Poets in Repute at Lacedæmon, for, said they, they are our Masters's Songs, we dare not sing them (e).

Having given you a Survey of the Usage Slaves generally met with among the Ancients, it remains that I give you an Account how they came to fall into this deplorable Condition, from that Liberty, which all Men are by Nature made Masters of. And it seems to have happen'd these three Ways. First, from Poverty, whereby Men being unable to subsist of themselves, and perhaps deeply in Debt, were forc'd to part with their Freedom, and yield themselves Slaves to such as were able to maintain them; or sell their Bodies to their Creditors, and pay them in Service, what they were not able to do in Money. Secondly, vast Numbers were reduc'd to Slavery by the Chance of War, by which the conquer'd became wholly at the Disposal of the Conquerors. Thirdly, by the Perfidiousness of those who traded in Slaves, who often stole Persons of ingenuous Birth and Education, and sold them. Aristophanes tells us, the Theſſalians were notorious for this Sort of Villany,

But if any Person were convicted of having betray'd a Freeman, he was severely punished by Solon's Laws, except it was his Daughter, or Sister, whom the Laws permitted them to sell for Slaves, when convicted of Fornication (g).

At Athens, several Places in the Forum were appointed for the Sale of Slaves, of which I have spoken already; and upon the first Day of every Month the Merchants, call'd Ανδραποδοκαπηλοι, brought them into the Market, and expos'd them to Sale (h), the Crier standing upon a Stone erected for that Purpose, call'd Πεγτήρ λίθθ', and calling the People together (i) whence Cicero opprobriously calls the Tribunes, emptos de lapide, because they were suspected to have been hir'd to the Management of a certain Affair (k).

At Athens, when a Slave was first brought Home, there was an Entertainment provided to welcome him to his new Service, and certain Sweet-meats were pour'd upon his Head, which for that Reason they call'd Καλαχυσμαία (l). But I do not find that this Ceremony was practis'd in other Places, tho', in all Countries, Slaves were bought and sold like other Commodities; the Thracians are particularly remarkable for purchasing them with Salt, and therefore they were call'd Πεῖς ἀλός ηφορασμένα; Eustathius adds, that Αλώνησα δολαία signified those that were bought at a very low Rate. The Chians are reported to have been the first that gave Money for Slaves (m), whereas, before, they had usually been exchange'd for other Commodities, which was the ancient Way of trading before the Invention of Money. Homer's Heroes are often said to have exchange'd their Captives for Provisions, and particularly at the End of the Seventh Iliad,

Ενθεν ἄρ' οἰνίζοντο καρνηκομῶντες Ἀχαιοί,
 Ἄλλοι μὲν καλκῶ, ἄλλοι δ' αἰθωνί σιδήρω,
 Ἄλλοι δὲ ῥινόϊς, ἄλλοι δ' αὐτοῖσι ἑρέσσιν,
 Ἄλλοι δ' ἀνδραπόδεςσι, τίθειτο ᾗ δαῖτα θάλαϊαν.

Whence it appears, that the barbarous Oppression and Cruelty, us'd towards Slaves, was not an Effect of the Pride of later Ages, but practis'd in the most primitive and simple Times; how long it continued is not certain.

Adrian is said to have been the first that took away from Masters the Power of putting their Slaves to Death, without being call'd to Account for it. And in the Reign of Nero, and other cruel Emperors of Rome, the Masters were forced to give them civil Treatment, for Fear they should accuse them, as Persons disaffected to the Government.

But the Growth of Christianity in the World seems to have put a final Period to that unlimited Power, that Lords in former Ages claim'd over their Slaves; for the Christians behav'd themselves with Abundance of Mildness and Gentleness towards them; partly, to encourage them to embrace the Christian Religion, the propagating of which they aim'd at more than the Promotion of their own private Interests; and partly, because they thought it barbarous and unnatural, that Persons endu'd by Nature with the same Powers and Faculties, the same Tempers and Inclinations with themselves, should be treated with no

Of the Athenian Magistrates.

THE Magistrates of Athens are divided by Æschines (n) into three Sorts; the Ground of which Distinction is taken from the different Methods of their Election and Promotion.

1. Χερσφουνητοὶ, were such as receiv'd their Dignity from the People, met together in lawful Assembly, which on this Occasion was held in the Πρυξ; and were so called from the Manner of their Election, in which the People gave their Votes, by holding up their Hands.

2. Κληρωτοὶ, were those that ow'd their Promotion to Lots, which were drawn by the Thestothetæ, in Theseus's Temple. But it must be observ'd, that no Person was permitted to try his Fortune by the Lots, unless he had been first approv'd by the People; who likewise reserv'd to themselves a Power to appoint whom they pleas'd, without referring the Decision to Lots; and thus Aristides was nominated to the Office of Archon. The Manner of casting Lots was thus; the Name of every Candidate, inscribed upon a Table of Brass, being put into an Urn, together with Beans, the Choice fell upon those Persons, whose Tablets were drawn out with white Beans. If any Man threw more than one Tablet into the Urn, he suffer'd capital Punishment (o).

3. Αἵρετοὶ, were extraordinary Officers, appointed by particular Tribes or Boroughs, to take Care of any Business; such were the Surveyors of the publick Works, and such like.

According to Solon's Constitutions, no Man was capable of being a Magistrate, except he was possessed of a considerable Estate; but, by Aristides's Means, the poorer Sort were admitted to a Share in the Government, and every free Denizon render'd capable of appearing for the highest Preferments. Yet such was the Modesty of the Commons, that they left the chief Offices, and such as the Care of the Commonwealth depended upon, to Persons of superior Quality, aspiring no higher than the Management of petty and trivial Businesses (p). Yet they seem to have been afterwards made incapable of bearing Offices. Plutarch, in the Life of Phocion, mentions some who were ἐπονηριδέντες τῷ πολιτεύματι διὰ τὴν πενίαν, incapable of the Government by reason of their Poverty. Neither is it improbable, that, as different Factions and Interests became prevalent, sometimes the Nobility admitted the Commons to a Participation of Employments and Offices, and sometimes again excluded them.

But tho' no Man's Quality, or Condition, could exempt him from bearing publick Offices, yet his Course of Life and Behaviour might; for if any Man had liv'd a vicious and scandalous Life, he was thought unworthy of the meanest Office; it being improbable that a Person, that could not behave himself so as to gain Reputation in a private Capacity, should be able to demean himself prudently and wisely in a publick Station; or that he, who had neglected his own Concerns, or fail'd in the Management of them, should be capable of undertaking publick Business, and providing for the Commonwealth. And therefore, before any Man was admitted to a publick Employment, he was obliged to give an Account of himself, and his past Life, before certain Judges in the Forum, which was the Place appointed for his Examination, which they call'd Δοκιμασία (q). Nor was this alone thought sufficient, for tho' at this Time they pass the Trial with Credit, yet in the first Ordinary (κνεία) Assembly after their Election, they were a second Time brought to the Test, when, if any Thing scandalous was made out against them, they were deprived of their Honours (r). And of the Magistrates appointed by Lots, whoever had the Misfortune to be deprived, after his Election, was prohibited from coming to the publick Assembly, and making Orations to the People (s). But it was a capital Crime for any Man to enter upon the Magistracy, whilst unable to pay his Debts. And Actions of this Nature were heard by the Thesmothetæ (t). And when their Offices expired, they were obliged to give an Account of their Management to the Notaries (γγραμματεῖς) and the Logistæ, which was call'd Εὐθύνη, and if any Man neglected to do it, or had not undergone the former Probation, the People were forbidden, by an express Law, to present him with a Crown, which was the usual Reward of such as had gain'd themselves Honour and Reputation, by the careful and wise Management of publick Employments. Also till their Accounts were pass'd, they were not permitted to sue (u) for any other Office, or Place of Trust, or to travel into any foreign Country, or to dispose of their Estates, or any Part of them, whether by Will, or consecrating them to pious Uses, or any other Way; but the Whole was to remain entire, that, in Case they should be found to have embezzled the publick Revenues, the City might not lose by them. The (Λογισταί) Logistæ, who examined the Accounts, were ten. If any Magistrate neglected to give in his Accounts, they prefer'd against him an Action, which was termed ἀλογίς δίκη (w). If any Controversy happened, it was determined by proper Judges. If it was concerning Money, the Logistæ themselves were impower'd to decide it. If it concern'd Affairs which belonged to the popular Assembly, they refer'd thither. If it was about Injuries committed, it was brought before the Judges, who used to have Cognizance of such Causes (x). Every Man was permitted to offer his Complaint, Proclamation being usually made by the publick Crier in this Form, Τίς ἐάλεται κατὰγορεύειν; Who will accuse (y)? The Time limited for Complaints was thirty Days; which being past, no Magistrate could have any farther Trouble. If any Person, against whom a Complaint was prefer'd, refused to appear at the Time appointed, he was summon'd to defend himself before the Senate of five hundred; where, if he did not make his Appearance, he was punish'd with ἀτιμία, Infamy.

This was the Method of examining into the Behaviour of Magistrates after the Expiration of their Offices. Neither were they exempted from being brought to Trial during their Magistracy; it being the Custom for the nine Archons, in every ordinary and stated (κυρία) Assembly of the People, to propound this Question, Whether the Magistrates were faithful in the Discharge of their several Duties? If upon that any of them was accused, the Crier made Proclamation, that such, as thought the Accusation just, should lift up their Hands; which Action was term'd καταχειροτονία. This being over, the rest of the Assembly, to whom the Magistrate appear'd innocent, held up their Hands, which was ἀποχειροτονία (x). Then the Voices being number'd on both Sides, the Majority carried it.

The Day, in which the Magistrates entred upon their Offices, was the first of Hecatombæon, the first Month in the Athenian Kalendar; it was a solemn Festival, which from the Occasion had the Name of Εισητήσια, and was celebrated with all the Expressions of Mirth and Joy, usual on such Occasions. Also Sacrifices were offer'd to the Gods by the Senators, and most of the other Magistrates; and Prayers made for the Prosperity of the City, in the Chapel of Jupiter and Minerva the Counsellors (a).

C H A P. XII.

Of the nine Archons, &c.

THE chief Magistrates of Athens were nine in Number, and had all the common Name of Archontes, or Rulers. They were elected by Lots, but were not admitted to their Offices, till they had undergone a two-fold Trial; one in the Senate-house, call'd Ανάκρισις, and a second in the Forum, call'd Δοκιμασία. The Questions, which the Senate propos'd to them, were such as these, Whether they were descended from Ancestors, that had been Citizens of Athens for three Generations? Of what Tribes and Hundred they were, and whether they bore any Relation to Apollo Patrius and Jupiter Herceus? Whether they had been dutiful to their Parents, had served in the Wars, and had a competent Estate (b)? Lastly, whether they were ἀρεαίεις, perfect in all the Members of their Bodies? It being otherwise unlawful for them to be Archons. And, as some are of Opinion, the same Questions were demanded of all other Magistrates (c). We must not omit in this Place, that by the foremention'd Question concerning their Relations to Apollo Patrius and Jupiter Herceus, was enquired, whether they were freeborn Citizens of Athens, (they alone being permitted to execute the Office of Archon) for all the Athenians claim'd a Sort of Relation to these Gods. Hence we are told by the Scholiast on Aristophanes (d) that the Archons honour'd Apollo Patrius as their Progenitor, when they were admitted into their Office; ἐκ γὰρ τῆς μὴ ἐξένου, ξένος αὐτὸς ἐνόμιζον, because such, as had no Acquaintance with him, were reputed Foreigners. Whence that Saying of Aristophanes (e), ὃ γὰρ εἰσὶ βάρβαροι,

ὄθεν ὁ πατρώος ἐστίν.—

For they are not Barbarians who live with Apollo Patrius. But afterwards, when the Athenian Glory was in the Declension, not only Men of the Half-blood of Athens, but even Foreigners, who had been admitted into the City, were made Archons. Examples whereof are Hadrian, before he was advanced to be Emperor of Rome (f); and Plutarch, who relates (g), that himself was honour'd with the Freedom of Athens, made a Member of the Tribe Leontis, and afterwards bore the Office of Archon.

But what was more peculiar to these Magistrates, was the Oath required of them before their Admission, in the Portico, call'd Βασιλείος σοῦ, or πρὸς τῷ λίθῳ, at the Stone Tribunal in the Forum, to this Effect; that they would observe the Laws, and administer Justice without Partiality, would never be corrupted by Bribes, or, if they were, would dedicate a Statue of Gold of equal Weight with their own Bodies, to the Delphian Apollo; from thence they went into the Citadel, and there repeated the same Oath. This Custom was instituted by Solon, as we are inform'd by Plutarch in his Life of that Lawgiver. He mentions only the Thesmothetæ; but that the other Archons took the same Oath, is evident from Plato, by whom Phædrus is introduced, promising to dedicate at Delphi a Golden Statue equal to himself in Weight, ὡσπερ οἱ ἐννέα Ἀρχόντες, after the Manner of the nine Archons.

This done, they undertook their Charge, some Parts of which were to be executed by them separately, according to their respective Offices, others equally concern'd them all. They had all the Power of punishing Mafactors with Death, were all crown'd with Garlands of Myrtle; they had a joint Commission of appointing the Δικασταί, and Αθλοθέται, by Lots, electing out of every Tribe one; as also of constituting the Ἰπποαρχοί, Φύλαρχοί, and Στρατηγοί, of enquiring into the Behaviour and Management of other Magistrates, and deposing such as were by the Suffrages of the People declared to be unworthy of bearing any Office, which had been committed to them (h). And as a Recompence of their Services, they were free from all Taxes and Contributions exacted of other Citizens for the Building of Ships of War, which was an Immunity never granted to any besides themselves. If any Person had the Insolence to strike, or publicly affront any of the Archons, adorn'd with their Crowns, or any other to whom the Citizens had given a Crown, or other Honour or Immunity, he was to be punish'd with Infamy, (ἀτιμία) as guilty of a Disrespect not only to the Person whom he had injur'd, but to the whole Commonwealth (i).

And thus much of the nine Archons in common, I shall now speak of them severally; only first begging Leave to tell you, that concerning the first Original of their Names nothing certain is recorded; but Sigonius conjectures, that the Names of Βασιλεύς, and Ἀρχων, were in Imitation of the chief Magistrates of former Ages, wherein the City was first govern'd by Kings, and then by Archons; and that of Πολέμαρχος, in Memory of the General of the Army, an Officer usually created by the first Kings to assist them in Times of War. And the Θεσμοθέται, as their Name imports, seems to have been constituted in Behalf of the People, to protect them in the Possession of their Laws and Liberties, from the Usurpation of the other Archons, whose Power before Solon's Regulation of the Commonwealth seems to have been far greater, and more unbounded, than afterwards; for by that Law-giver it was order'd, that their Offices should chiefly consist in these Things which follow.

Ἀρχων, so call'd by way of Eminence, was Chief of the Nine, and is sometimes nam'd Ἐπώνυμος, because the Year took its Denomination from him. His Jurisdiction reach'd both Ecclesiastical and Civil Affairs. It was his Business to determine all Causes betwixt Men and their Wives; concerning Wives brought to Bed after the Death of their Husbands; concerning Wills and Testaments, concerning Dowries and Legacies; to take Care of Orphans, and provide Tutors and Guardians for them; to hear the Complaints of such as had been injur'd by their Neighbours, and to punish such as were addicted to Drunkenness; also to take the first Cognizance of some publick Actions, such as those call'd Ἐισαγγελία, Φάσεις, Ἐνδείξεις, Ἐρηγήσεις, of which in their Place. He kept a Court of Judicature in the Odeum, where Trials about Victuals, and other Necessaries, were brought before him. It was his Duty also to appoint Curators, call'd Ἐπιμεληταί, to make Provision for the Celebration of the Feasts, call'd Διονύσια, and Θαργήλια, with some other Solemnities; to take Care for the Regulation of Stage-players, and to provide Singers, Choristers, and other Necessaries for them (k). He was to be punish'd with Death, if convicted of being overcome with Drink during the Time of his Office.

Βασιλεύς, had a Court of Judicature in the Royal Portico, where he decided all Disputes which happen'd amongst the Priests, and the sacred Families, such as were the Ceryces, Eteobutadæ, &c. to whom certain Offices in the Celebration of Divine Worship belong'd by Inheritance. Such also as were accused of Impiety, or Prophanation of any of the Mysteries, Temples, or other sacred Things, were brought before him. It was his Business to assist in the Celebration of the Eleusian and Lenean Festivals, and all those, in which they ran Races with Torches in their Hands, viz. Panathenæa, Hephestia, and Promethea; and to offer publick Sacrifices for the Safety and Prosperity of the Commonwealth. It was required that his Wife, whom they term'd Βασίλισσα, should be a Citizen of the whole Blood of Athens, and a Virgin: Which was likewise enjoined by the Jewish Law to the High Priest, otherwise neither of them was duly qualified to preside over the Mysteries and Rites of their several Religions (1). Besides this, he had some Concernment in secular Affairs, for Disputes about inanimate Things were brought before him; as also Accusations of Murder, which it was his Business to take an Account of, and then refer them to the Areopagites, amongst whom he had a Right of Suffrage, but was obliged to lay aside his Crown (which was one of the Badges of his Office) during the Trial (m).

Πολέμαρχος ☉, had under his Care all the Strangers and Sojourners in Athens, and exercised the same Authority over them, which was used by the Archon towards the Citizens. It was his Duty to offer a solemn Sacrifice to Enyalius, (who is by some taken for Mars, by others for one of his Attendants) and another to Diana, surnam'd Αγροσία, from one of the Athenian Boroughs; to celebrate the Exequies of the famous Patriot Harmodius; and to take Care that the Children of those Men, that had lost their Lives in their Country's Service, should have a competent Maintenance out of the publick Exchequer.

But because these three Magistrates were often, by Reason of their Youth, not so well skill'd in the Laws and Customs of their Country, as might have been wish'd, that they might not be left wholly to themselves, it was customary for each of them to make Choice of two Persons of Age, Gravity, and Reputation to sit with them upon the Bench, and direct them as there was Occasion. These they call'd Πάροδοι, or Assessors, and obliged them to undergo the same Probation in the Senate-house, and publick Forum, with the other Magistrates; and like them too, to give an Account how they had behav'd themselves in their respective Trufts, when their Offices expired.

The six remaining Archons were call'd by one common Name, Thesmothetæ. They received Complaints against Persons guilty of false Accusations, of Calumniating, of Bribery, of Impiety, which also was Part of the King's Office, but with this Difference, that the Accusers did only φαίνεν τὸν ἀσεβῆ, inform against the Impious, by Word of Mouth at the King's Tribunal; whereas, before the Thesmothetæ, they did γράφειν, deliver their Indictment in Writing, and prosecute the Criminal. Also all Causes and Disputes between the Citizens, and Strangers, Sojourners or Slaves, and Controversies about Trade and Merchandize were brought before them. Appeals to the People were prefer'd, the publick Examination of several of the Magistrates perform'd, and the Suffrages in publick Assemblies taken by them. They ratified all publick Contracts and Leagues, appointed the Days upon which the Judges were to sit, and hear Causes in their several Courts of Judicature, took Care that no Laws should be established, but such as conduced to the Safety and Prosperity of the Commonwealth, and prosecuted those that endeavour'd to seduce the unwary Multitude, and persuade them to give their Consent to what was contrary to the Interest of the Commonwealth.

(1) Demosthenes in Neeram. (m) Demosthenes in Lacritum & in Nearam.

Εὔθυνοι, were ten Officers appointed to assist the Archons, to pass the Accounts of the Magistrates, and to set a Fine upon such as they found to have embezzel'd the publick Treasure, or any way injur'd the Commonwealth by their Male-administration. Aristotle (n) tells us, they were sometimes call'd Εξελασαι, and Συνήγοροι, and others will have them to be the same with the Λογισαι; but these are by Aristotle said to be distinguish'd from them.

C H A P. XIII.

Of the Athenian Magistrates.

OΙ ἑνδεκα, the Eleven, so call'd from their Number, were elected out of the Body of the People, each of the ten Tribes sending one; to which there was added a Γραμματεὺς, or Register, to make up the Number; sometimes they were call'd Νομοφυλακες, Keepers of the Laws; which Appellation was taken from their Office, being in some Things not unlike to that of our Sheriffs; for they were to see Malefactors put to Execution, and had the Charge of such as were committed to the publick Prison. They had also Power to seize Thieves, Kidnappers, and Highwaymen upon Suspicion; and, if they confess'd the Fact, to put them to Death; if not, they were obliged to prosecute them in a judicial Way.

Φύλαρχοι, were Magistrates that presid'd over the Athenian Tribes, one of which was allotted to each of them. Afterwards this Name became peculiar to a military Command, and the Governors of Tribes were call'd Επιμεληταὶ φυλῶν. Their Business was to take Care of the publick Treasure, which belong'd to each Tribe, to manage all their Concerns, and call them together to consult as oft as any Thing happen'd, which required the Presence of the whole Body.

Φυλοβασίλεις seem to have had, in most Things, the same Office, with respect to particular Tribes, that the Βασιλεὺς had, with respect to the Commonwealth. They were chosen out of the Εὐπατεῖσαι, or Nobility, had the Care of publick Sacrifices, and other divine Worship peculiar to their respective Tribes, and kept their Court in the Portico call'd Βασίλειον, and sometimes in the Βυκολεῖον.

Φρατειαρχοι, and Τετρίναρχοι, had in the several Φρατεῖαι, and Τετρίνες, the same Power that the Φύλαρχος exercised over the whole Tribe.

Δήμαρχοι, had the same Offices in the Δῆμοι, took Care of their Revenues, out of which they paid all the Duties required of them, assembled the People in the Boroughs under their Jurisdiction, all whose Names they had written in a Register, and presid'd at the Election of Senators, and other Magistrates chosen by Lots. Sometimes we find them call'd Ναύαρχοι, and the Boroughs Ναυκραεῖαι, because each of them was obliged, besides two Horsemen, to furnish out one Ship for the publick Service.

(n) Polit. l. VI. cap. ultimo.

Ληξιαρχοί, were six in Chief, but were assisted by thirty inferior Officers, in laying Fines upon such as came not to publick Assemblies, and making Scrutiny amongst those that were present; such also, as were busy in the Market, they compell'd to leave their Buying and Selling, and attend on the publick Business, the which they did by the Help of the Τοξόϋ, who were certain inferior Officers, or rather Servants, much like the Roman Licitors, and our Sheriff's Liverymen, Bailiffs, &c. the City of Athens had a thousand of them, that liv'd in Tents, erected in the Middle of the Forum, and were afterwards removed to the Areopagus. Their Name seems to have been taken from the Arms they usually carried with them, in the same Manner that the Life-guards of Kings are call'd Δορυφόροι. Sometimes they are call'd Δημόσιοι Επόπϋ, a Name which was taken from their Offices; sometimes Πεισίνιοι, from Peisinus, one of the Primitive Athenians, that either first instituted this Office, or gave Rules for the ordering of it; and sometimes Σκύθαι, from the Country of Scythia; for generally Men of that Country were chosen into this Place, as being brawny, sturdy, Fellows; and therefore one of them is introduced by Aristophanes, speaking in an uncouth and barbarous Manner (o). But to return to the Lexiarchi. They were the Persons that had the keeping of ληξιαρχικὸν γράμματῆϊον, or λεύκωμα, or publick Register of the whole City, in which were written the Names of all the Citizens, as soon as they came to be of Age to enter upon their paternal Inheritance, which they call'd Λήξεις.

Νομοφύλακες, were Officers, whose Business it was to see that neither the Magistrates, nor common People made any Innovation upon the Laws, and to punish the stubborn and disobedient (p). To this End in publick Assemblies they had Seats appointed with the Πρεσβυτεροι, that they might be ready to oppose any Man that should act contrary to the Laws, and received Customs, or promoted any Thing against the publick Good. As a Token of the honourable Station they were placed in, they always wore a white Ribband in the solemn Games, and publick Shews, and had Chairs erected for them over-against those of the nine Archons.

Νομοθέται, were a thousand in Number, who were commonly chosen by Lot out of such as had been Judges in the Court Heliæa: Their Office was not (as the Name seems to imply) to enact new Laws by their own Authority, for that could not be done without the Approbation of the Senate, and the People's Ratification, but to inspect the old; and if they found any of them useless, or prejudicial, as the State of Affairs then stood, or contradictory to others, they caused them to be abrogated by an Act of the People. Besides this, they were to take Care that no Man should plough, or dig deep Ditches within the Pelasgian Wall, to apprehend the Offenders, and send them to the Archon.

C H A P. XIV.

Of the Athenian Magistrates.

THE Treasurers and General Receivers of Athens were of several Sorts; but, before I proceed to give an Account of their Offices, it will be necessary to premise a Word or two concerning the publick Revenues; which are by the accurate Sigonius divided into these four following Sorts.

1. Τέλιαι, signify those Revenues that were brought in by Lands, Mines, Woods, and other publick possessions, set apart for the use of the Commonwealth; and the Tributes paid by the Sojourners, and the Freed-Servants; as also the Customs requir'd of certain Arts, and Trades, and particularly of Merchants for the Exportation and Importation of their Goods.

2. Φόροι, were the annual Payments exacted of all their tributary Cities, which, after Xerxes's Overthrow, were first levied by the Athenians, as Contributions to enable them to carry on the War, in Case, as was fear'd, the Enemy should make a new Invasion upon them. The first Collector of this Tax was Aristides, who, (as Plutarch reports in his Life) assess'd all particular Persons, Town by Town, according to every Man's Ability; and the Sum raised by him amounted to four hundred and sixty Talents. To this Pericles added near a third Part (proceeds my Author) for Thucydides reports, that, in the Beginning of the Peloponnesian War, the Athenians had, coming in from their Confederates, six hundred Talents. After Pericles's Death, the Orators, and Men powerful amongst the People, proceeded to increase it by little and little, till it amounted to one thousand and three hundred Talents; and that not so much, because of the extraordinary Expensiveness of the Wars, as by exciting the People to Largeesses, Play-house Expences, and the Erecting of Statues and Temples.

3. Εισφοραί, were Taxes laid upon the Citizens, as well as Sojourners, and Freed-Servants, by the Order of the Assembly and Senate, for the defraying of extraordinary Charges, occasion'd by long and unsuccessful Wars, or any other Means.

4. Τιμήματα, were Fines and Amercements, all which were carried into the Exchequer, except the tenth Part, which was given to Minerva, and the fiftieth Part which belong'd to the rest of the Gods, and the Heroes call'd Εσώνυμοι. Having said thus much of the publick Money, I shall now proceed to the Persons that had the Disposal and Management of it.

Επιστάτης, was elected by Lot out of the Prytanes, and had in his Custody the Keys of the publick Exchequer, which Trust was thought so great, that no Man was permitted to enjoy it above once. Of the rest of the Honours and Offices of this Magistrate I shall speak in another Place.

Πωληταί, were ten in Number, and, together with those that had the Care of the Money allow'd for Shews, had the Power of letting out the Tribute Money, and other publick Revenues, and selling Estates that that were confiscated; all which Bargains were ratified in the Name of their President. Besides this, it was their Office to convict such as had not paid the Tribute, call'd Μετοίκιον, and sell them by Auction. Under these were certain inferior Officers, call'd Εκλογεῖς, whose Business it was to collect the publick Money, for such as had Leases of the City's Revenues, whom they call'd Τελῶναι; these were always Persons of good Credit themselves, and, besides their own Bonds, were obliged to give other Security for the Payment of the Money due according to their Leases, in which, if they fail'd any longer than till the ninth Prytanea, they were under a Forfeiture of twice the Principal, to be paid by themselves or their Sureties, upon Neglect of which they were all cast into Prison, and their Estates confiscated (g). After the Expulsion of the thirty Tyrants, certain Officers, call'd ἑὺνδικτοί, were created with Power to take Cognizance of all Complaints about the Confiscation of Goods, as appears from an Oration of Lyfias in Behalf of Nicias.

Ἐπιγραφεῖς, were Officers that rated all those of whom Taxes and Contributions were required according to every Man's Ability, kept the publick Accounts, and prosecuted such as were behind-hand with their Contributions.

Ἀποδέκται, were ten general Receivers, to whom all the publick Revenues, Contribution-money, and Debts ow'd to the Publick were paid: Which done, they registred all their Receptions, and cross'd out of the publick Debt-book such as had discharged their Debts in the Presence of the whole Senate. If any Controversy happen'd about the Money or Taxes, they had Power to decide it, except it was a difficult and knotty Point, or of high Concern, for such they referred to the Hearing of some of the Courts of Judicature.

Ἀντιγραφεὺς τῆς βελῆς, was a publick Notary, appointed at the first Institution of the Office by Election, and afterwards by Lot, to take a Counter-part of the Accounts of the Ἀποδέκται, for the Prevention of all Deceit and Mistakes.

Ἐλλωτοαμίαι, or Ἐλλωτοαμειῶι, had the same Offices in the tributary Cities that belong'd to the Ἀποδέκται in their own Territories.

Πράξιπες, were those that receiv'd the Money due to the City from Fines laid upon Criminals.

Ταμίαι τῶ Θεῶ, καὶ τῶ Θεῶν, were those that received that Part of the Fines which was due to Minerva, and the rest of the Gods, which was done before the Senate. They were ten in Number, were chosen by Lots out of the Πεντακνησιμέδιμοι, or Nobles, and had Power of remitting any Man's Fine, if it was made appear to them, that the Magistrates had unjustly imposed it. Pollux tells us, they were the same with those they call'd Κωλακρέται, and these, as the *Scholias*t upon Aristophanes reports, used to receive not only the Money due to the Gods from Fines, but other Incomes design'd for Civil Uses, and particularly, the Τειώβολα, distributed amongst the Judges, and therefore call'd Δικασικὸς μεδός. They were so nam'd (g) Κωλαγρέται, because they were a kind of Priests, and used to claim as their Due the Relicks of Sacrifices, amongst which were the Skins and the Κωλαί (r).

(g) Suidas, Ulpianus in Demosthen. &c. (r) Aristoph. Schol. Avibus Vespis.

Ζηῆται, were Officers appointed upon extraordinary Occasions to enquire after the publick Debts, when, thro' the Neglect of the Receivers, or by other Means, they were run up to large Sums, and began to be in Danger of being lost, if not call'd in.

The Distinction of the Officers, hitherto mention'd, has been taken chiefly from the different Receptions of the publick Money; I shall proceed in Sigonius's Method, and give you an Account in the next Place of those that were distinguished by the different Manners of disbursing it. And, to this End, you must know the publick Treasure was divided into three Sorts, according to the various Uses to which it was employ'd; the first they called,

1. Χρήματα τῆς Διοικήσεως, being such as were expended in civil Uses.

2. Στρατιωτικὰ, those that were required to defray the Charges of the War.

3. Θεωικὰ, such as were consecrated to pious Uses; in which they included the Expences at Plays, publick Shews, and Festivals, because most of them were celebrated in Honour of some of the Gods, or in Memory of some deceased Hero; and Pollux tells us, the Money given to the Judges, and the People, that met in the publick Assemblies, was call'd by this Name. There is a Law mentioned by Demosthenes (f), whereby this Money was commanded, when the necessary Expences of War could not otherwise be provided for, to be applied to that Use. This Eubulus (to ingratiate himself with the Commonalty, who were generally more concern'd to maintain the publick Shews and Festivals, than the most necessary War) caused to be abrogated, and at the same Time to be declared a capital Crime for any Man to propound, that the Θεωικὰ χρήματα should be applied for the Service of the War (g). Ταμίης τῆς Διοικήσεως, otherwise call'd Επιμελητῆς τῶν κοινῶν προσόδων, was the principal Treasurer, being far superior to all the rest in Honour and Power, created by the People, and continued in his Office for five Years; after which, if he had behaved himself with Honesty and Integrity, it was an usual Thing for him to be elected a second and third Time.

Ἀντιγραφεὺς τῆς Διοικήσεως, seems to have been one that kept a Counterpart of the chief Treasurer's Accounts to preserve them from being falsified, or corrupted.

Ταμίης τῆς Στρατιωτικῶν, was the Pay-master General of the Army.

Ταμίης τῶν Θεωικῶν, or, Ὁ ἐπὶ τῶν Θεωικῶν, had the Disposal of the Θεωικὰ χρήματα, for the Uses abovementioned. But the greatest and most troublesome Part of his Office consisted in distributing them to the poor Citizens, to buy Seats in the Theatre; which Custom was first begun and enacted into a Law by Pericles, to ingratiate himself with the Commonalty (u); for, as Libanius observes, in the Primitive Ages of the Commonwealth, when the Theatres were composed of Wood, the People, being eager of getting Places, used to quarrel among themselves, and sometimes beat and wounded one another; to prevent which Inconvenience, it was order'd that every one, before he entered into the Theatre should pay two Oboli, or a Drachm, according to Harpocrasion, for Admittance; and, left by this Means the poorer Sort should be deprived of the Pleasure of seeing, every Man was allow'd to demand that Sum of the publick Exchequer (ω).

C H A P. XV.

Of the Athenian Magistrates.

Σιτωῶναι, were so call'd from their Office, which was to lay in Corn, for the Use of the City; and to this End the Ταμίαι τῆς Διοικήσεως, was to furnish them with as much Money as they had Occasion for. Athens was seated in a barren and unfruitful Country, which was not able to furnish its own Inhabitants with necessary Provisions, whereby they were forced to fetch Corn from foreign Nations, and supply their own Wants by the Superfluities of others: And this it was, that caused them to institute this Office.

Σιτοφύλακες, were fifteen in Number, ten of which officiated in the City, and five in the Piræeus; their Business was to take Care, that Corn and Meal should not be sold at too dear a Price, and to appoint the Size of Bread. Nearly related to these were the Σιτομέτραι, or Αποδεκταῖοι, whose Office was to see, that the Measures of Corn were just and equal.

Αγορανόμοι, sometimes term'd Λογισαὶ (x), were ten in Number, five belonging to the City, and as many to the Piræeus. Others make them fifteen, ten whereof they give to the City, and five to the Piræeus, which was reckon'd a third Part of Athens. To these Men a certain Toll or Tribute was paid by all those who brought any Thing to sell in the Market. Whence Dicæopolis is introduced by Aristophanes (y), demanding an Eel of a Bæotian for the τέλῳ τῆς ἀγορᾶς, Toll of the Market:

Αγορᾶς τέλῳ ταύτῳ γέπε δάσεις ἐμοί.

This thou shalt give me for Toll of the Market; for their Business lay in the Market where they had the Care of all Vendibles, except Corn; and were especially obliged to see that no Man wronged, or any way circumvented another in Buying or Selling (z).

Μετρονόμοι, were Officers that inspected all Sorts of Measures, except those of Corn; there were five of them in the City, and double that Number in the Piræus, in which the greatest Mart in Attica was kept.

Οψονόμοι, were Officers who took Care of the Fish-Market. They were two or three in Number, and chosen by the Senate (a). Their Name is derived from ὄψον, which, tho' originally of a more general Signification, is many Times appropriated to Fish. Thus Plutarch (b) has inform'd us: Πολλῶν ὄψων ὄψων ἐκνενίκηκεν ὁ ἰχθυὸς μόνον, ἢ ἀδελισα γε, ὄψον καλεῖσθαι. Many other Things being call'd ὄψα, that Name is nevertheless now apply'd only, or chiefly to Fish. Whence ὀψάριον is used in that Sense by Saint John (c).

Ἐμποροὶ ἐπιμεληταί, were Officers that belong'd to the Haven; they were ten in Number, and the chief Part of their Business was to take Care that two Parts, at least, of all the Corn which was brought into the Port, should be carried into the City, and no Silver should be exported by any private Person, except such as design'd to trade in Corn (d).

Ναυλοδίκαι, or Ἰκευοδίκαι, had Cognizance of Controversies that happen'd between Merchants and Mariners, and examin'd Persons, that, being the Children of Strangers both by the Father and Mother's Side, had by Fraud inserted their Names into the publick Register, thereby claiming the Privileges of freeborn Citizens; this they did upon the twenty-sixth of every Month. Not much different from these were the Ἐπαγωγῆς, according to Sigonius and Emmius's Account of them; only they were to hear such Causes in Matters of Trade, as required Dispatch, and could not be deferr'd to the monthly Sessions of the Ναυλοδίκαι. But Pollux tells us, that, besides those Trials, they had Cognizance of Controversies about Feasts and publick Entertainments.

Ἀσυνόμοι, were Officers who took Care of the Streets, and several other Things, especially such as any Way concern'd the Streets, πρὸς τὰ αἰλητρίδων, καὶ κοπελόγων, καὶ τῶν ποιῶτων, Of the Minstrels and Singers, and Scavengers, and such-like. Aristotle, as he is cited by Harpocration, makes ten Asynomi, five in the City, and as many in the Piræus: But Samuel Petitus enlarges their Number, as likewise that of the Agoranomi, to fifteen; ten of which he would have to officiate in the City, and five in the Piræus, which was never accounted more than a third Part of Athens, and therefore he thinks that the Numbers in Harpocration have been by some Accident or other changed. But as this is no certain Way of arguing; so it is not improbable that the Piræus, tho' only a third Part of Athens, yet being a very great and celebrated Mart, might find Employment for as many Agoranomi and Asynomi as the other two Parts; however that be, we are inform'd by Demosthenes (e), that no Man served in this Office oftener than once.

Ὀδοποιοί, were the Surveyors of the Ways.

Ἐπιστάται τῶν ὑδάτων, were those that took Care of the Aquædæ, and other Conveyances of Waters. But the Fountains belong'd to other Officers, call'd Κρηνοφυλάκες. And the Officers of these four are by Aristotle comprehended under the Name of Ἀσωμοία.

Ἐπιστάται τῶν δημόσιων ἔργων, were Officers with whom was entrusted the Care, Contrivance, and Management of all publick Edifices, except the City Walls, for which there were peculiar Curators, call'd from their Offices Τερχοποιοί whose Number was usually the same with that of the Tribes, every one of which had the Choice of one Τερχοποιοῦς, as often as Occasion required.

Σωφρονισταί, were in Number ten, and, as their Name imports, took Care that the young Men behaved themselves with Sobriety and Moderation (f). For the same End, the Thestothetæ used to walk about the City in the Night-time, and correct such as they found committing any Disorder (g).

Δινόπται, were three Officers, that provided Lights and Torches at the publick Entertainments, and took Care that every Man drank his due Proportion (h).

Γυναικονόμοι, also had an Office at publick Feasts, Sacrifices, Marriages, and other Solemnities, and took Care that nothing should be done contrary to Custom (i).

Γλαυκοκόσμοι, were Magistrates, whose Business it was to regulate the Women's Apparel, according to the Rules of Modesty and Decency; and set a Fine upon such as were too nice and phantastical in their Dresses, which they exposed to publick View in the Ceramicus.

Λεῖσεργοὶ, were Persons of considerable Estates, who, by their own Tribe, or the whole People, were ordered to perform some publick Duty, or supply the Commonwealth with Necessaries at their own Expences. Of these there were divers Sorts, all which were elected out of twelve hundred of the richest Citizens, who were appointed by the People, to undergo, when they should be required, all the burdensome and chargeable Offices in the Commonwealth, every Tribe electing an hundred and twenty out of their own Body; tho', as Sigonius has observed, this was contrary to Solon's Constitution, by which every Man, of what Quality soever, was obliged to serve the Publick, according to his Ability, with this Exception only, that two Offices should not be imposed on the same Person at once, as we are inform'd by Demosthenes, in his Oration against Leptines; where he likewise mentions an ancient Law, requiring every Man to undergo some of the λεῖσεργία every second Year.

These twelve hundred were divided into two Parts, one of which consisted of such as were possessed of the greatest Estates, the other of Persons of meaner Abilities. Each of these were divided into ten Companies, called Συμμοεῖαι, which were distinct Bodies, and had distinct Governors and Officers of their own. They were again subdivided into two Parts, according to the Estates of the Persons that composed them; and thus, out of the first ten Συμμοεῖαι, were appointed three hundred of the most wealthy Citizens in Athens, who, upon all Exigencies, were to furnish the Commonwealth with necessary Supplies of Money, and, together with the rest of the twelve hundred, were required to perform all extraordinary Duties in their Turns (k). The Institution of these Συμμοεῖαι happened about the third Year of the hundredth Olympiad, Nausinicus being Archon. Before that Time, such, as were unable to bear the Expence of the λεῖσεργία assigned to them, had Relief from the ἀγιδωσις, or Exchange of Goods, which was one of Solon's Inventions, and performed in the following Manner. If any Person appointed to undergo one of the λεῖσεργία, or Duties, could find another Citizen of better Substance than himself, who was free from all the Duties, then the Informer was excused. But in Case the Person, thus substituted in the other's Place, denied himself to be the richest, then they exchanged Estates in this Manner:

(g) Ulpian, in Orat. adverst. Mediam. (h) Athenæus, lib. X. (i) Idem, lib. VI.
 (k) Ulpian, in Olyntiac. II. & Apheh. I.

The Doors of their Houses were close shut up and seal'd, lest any thing should be carried thence. Then both the Men took the following Oath ; Αποφαίνω τὴν εὐσίαν τὴν ἐμαυτῷ ὀρθῶς καὶ δικαίως, πλὴν ἧς ἐν τοῖς ῥητοῖς τοῖς ἀργυρείοις, ὅσα καὶ νόμοι ἀλεῖν πεποιθήκασι. I will truly and faithfully discover all my Substance, except that which lies in the Silver Mines, which the Laws have excused from all Imposts and Taxes. Then within three Days, a full Discovery was made of their whole Estates, and this was term'd ἀπόφασις. Neither was this Custom wholly laid aside upon the Institution of the forementioned συμμοεῖαι ; but then, and afterwards, if any one of the 300 Citizens could give Information of any other Person more wealthy than himself, who had been passed by in the Nomination, the Informer was excused (l). This whole Controversy was termed διαδικασία, the Sense of which Word is so much enlarg'd by some, as to be equivalent to the general Terms, κείσις and ἀμφισβήησις (m) ; and by others (n) is restrained to the Controversies happening between the χορηγοὶ, tho' perhaps these may be taken in general for the λεῖψες, one remarkable Part being put for the Whole. This must be observed farther, that, if any Controversy happen'd between such as were appointed τριηραρχοὶ, it was to be brought before the στρατηγός, who had the Care of all warlike Preparations, and by him to be referr'd to the customary Judges ; the rest of the διαδικασίαι seem to have belonged to other Magistrates.

Of the Duties to be undergone in the foremention'd Manners, some concern'd the Affairs of Peace, others related to those of War. The Duties of Peace were chiefly three, χορηγία, γυμνασιαρχία, and ἐσιτίασις. Those of War were two, τριηραρχία and εἰσορέα.

Χορηγοὶ, were at the Expence of Players, Singers, Dancers, and Musicians, as oft as there was Occasion for them at the Celebration of their publick Festivals and Solemnities (o).

Γυμνασίαρχοι, were at the Charge of the Oil, and such like Necessaries, for the Wrestlers and other Combatants (p).

Εσιτίορες ἢ δουλοῦν, were such as, upon publick Festivals, made an Entertainment for their whole Tribe (q). Besides those who were appointed by Lots to this Office, others voluntarily undertook it to ingratiate themselves (r). It may be further observed, that the μέλοικοι, Soujourners, had also their εἰσιτίορες, by whom they were entertained.

Τριηραρχοὶ, were obliged to provide all Sorts of Necessaries for the Fleet (s), and to build Ships. To this Office no certain Number of Men was nominated ; but their Number was increased or diminished according to the Value of their Estates, and the Exigencies of the Commonwealth.

Εἰσορέοις, were required, according to their Abilities, to supply the Publick with Money for the Payment of the Army, and other Occasions (t).

Besides these, upon extraordinary Occasions, when the usual Supplies were not sufficient, as in Times of long and dangerous Wars, the rich Citizens used generously to contribute as much as they were able to the publick Necessities, beside what was required of them, and could not be avoided. These are by Pollux call'd ἐπιδιδούτες ἐπιδόσεις, εἰσ-φέρουτες, ἐκόντες, ἐθελολογία, &c.

Others there were, that were not properly Magistrates; yet, because they were employ'd in publick Businests, must not be omitted in this Place.

Such were the Σύνδικοι, or Oratores, appointed by the People, to plead in Behalf of any Law, which was to be abrogated, or enacted, of whom I have spoken in another Place. These Men, tho' differing from those who are next to be mentioned, were sometimes term'd ῥήτορες, and σωήσοσι, and their Fee τὸ σωησορικόν. Lest this Office, which was created for the Benefit of the Commonwealth, should be abused, to the private Advantage of particular Men, there was a Law enacted, whereby the People were prohibited from conferring it twice upon the same Person (u).

ῥήτορες, were ten in Number, elected by Lots, to plead publick Causes in the Senate-house or Assembly, and, for every Cause wherein they were retain'd, they receiv'd a Drachm out of the publick Exchequer. They were sometimes call'd σωήσοσι, and their Fee τὸ σωησορικόν (w). No Man was admitted to this Office under the Age of forty Years (x). Tho' others think it was lawful to plead both in the Senate-house, and before the publick Assembly, at the Age of thirty. Neither were they permitted to execute this Office till their Valour in War, Piety to their Parents, Prudence in the Management of Affairs, Frugality and Temperance had been examined into. The Heads of which Examination are set down amongst the Laws of Athens.

Πρέσβεις, were Ambassadors chosen by the Senate, or most commonly by the Suffrages of the People to treat with foreign States. Sometimes they were sent with full Power to act according as themselves should judge most conducive to the Safety and Honour of the Commonwealth, and then they were Πρέσβεις ἀποκρίτορες, or Plenipotentiaries, and were not obliged, at their Return Home, to render an Account of their Proceedings; but their Power was usually limited, and they liable to be called in Question, if they exceeded their Commission, by concluding any Businests besides what they were sent about, or in any other Manner than what was prescribed them. During the Time of their Employment, they receiv'd a Salary out of the Exchequer. Whether that was always the same, does not certainly appear; but it is more probable that, like the Pay of Soldiers, and other Salaries, it was first very small, and afterwards, when the Commonwealth flourish'd with Trade and Riches, raised to a greater Value. When Euthymenes was Archon, they receiv'd every Day two Drachms, as we are inform'd by, Aristophanes (y).

Ἐπέμψαθ' ἡμᾶς ὡς βασιλέα τὸν μέσαν,
Μισθὸν φέροντας δύο δραχμάς τῆς ἡμέρας,
Ἐτ' εὐθυμίδης Ἀρχοντῶ.

We were sent to the Great King of Persia, with an Allowance of two Drachms a Day, Euthymenes being Archon. Those who faithfully discharged their Ambassies were publickly entertained by the Senate in the Prytaneum (x); those, who had been wanting in Care and Diligence, were fin'd (a). But such, as undertook any Ambassy without the Designation of the Senate or People, were punished with Death (b).

The Πρέσβεις were usually attended by a Κήρυξ, or Herald; and sometimes the Κήρυκες were sent upon Ambassies by themselves, as Sigonius observes, especially in the Primitive Times, when all Ambassies were performed by these Men, who were accounted sacred and inviolable, not only as being descended from Mercury, and employ'd in his Office, but because they were publick Mediators, without whom all Intercourse and Hopes of Reconciliation between Enemies must be at an End. Therefore, as Eustathius observes (c), whenever Ulysses, in his Travels dispatched his Scouts to discover what Sort of Country and People the Winds and Seas had brought them to, he always sent a Κήρυξ along with them, whereby they were secured from receiving any Harm in all Parts of the World whither they were driven, except in the Countries of the Læstrygones, Cyclopes, and such Savages, as were altogether void of Honesty.

Γραμματεῖς, Notaries were of several Sorts, and employed by several Magistrates; concerning whom this may be observed in general, that, for the Prevention of Fraud and Deceit, a Law was enacted, μὴ τις δις καταγράμματευσῇ τῇ αὐτῇ ἀρχῇ, That no Man should serve the same Magistrate in the Quality of a Notary above once. Besides these, there were other γραμματεῖς, Notaries, who, had the Custody of the Laws and the publick Records, which it was their Business to write, and to repeat to the People and Senate, when so required. These were three in Number; one chosen by the popular Assembly, whose Business was to recite before the People or Senate; and two appointed by the Senate; one whereof was Keeper of the Laws, another of other publick Records (d). The Custom was for a Notary to be appointed by every Prytanea, who laid down his Office at the End of thirty Days, and then underwent the accusom'd (εὐθύρην) Examination (e). It may not be improper to add in this Place, that at Syracuse the Office of Notaries was very honourable, but at Athens reputed εὐτελὴς ὑπερσεία, a mean Employment (f), and executed by those who are call'd by the Greeks Δυμόσιοι, by the Roman Lawyers, Vulgares, or, as that Word is explain'd, Calones. These were commonly Slaves, who had learned to read and write, that they might thereby become the more serviceable to their Masters (g). One of these was that Nicomachus, against whom Lyfias wrote his Oration.

Beside the forementioned Magistrates and Officers, there were several others, as the Πρωτάνεις, Πηδέροι, &c. But of these, and such as had military Commands, or were employed in the Divine Service, I shall give an Account in their own Places.

Of the Council of the Amphictyones.

B EING in the next Place to speak of the Athenian Councils, and Courts of Justice, I cannot omit the famous Council of the Amphictyones; which tho' it sat not at Athens, nor was peculiar to that City, yet the Athenians, and almost all the rest of the Grecians, were concerned in it.

It is commonly thought to have been first instituted, and received its Name from Amphictyon, the Son of Deucalion (g); but Strabo is of Opinion, that Acrisus, King of the Argives, was the first that founded and gave Laws for the Conduct and Management of it (h); and then it must have its Name from Αμφικτίσιονες, because the Inhabitants of the Countries round about met in that Council (i); and Androtion in Pausanias tells us, that the primitive Name of those Senators was Amphictiones, however of later Ages it hath been changed into Amphictyones. But the former Opinion receives Confirmation from what Herodotus reports of the Place where this Council was assembled, viz. that it was a Temple dedicated to Amphictyon and Ceres Amphictyoneis (k); and Strabo also reports, that this Goddess was worshipped by the Amphictyones.

The Place in which they assembled was call'd Thermopylæ, and sometimes Pylæ, because it was a strait narrow Passage, and, as it were, a Gate or Inlet into the Country. Hence these Counsellors are often called Πυλωνόβοι, and the Council Πυλαία (l): But the Scholiast upon Sophocles tells us, that this Name was given them from Pylades, the Friend of Orestes, who was the first that was arraign'd in this Court, having assisted in the Murder of Clytemnestra. Sometimes they met at Delpbi, where they were intrusted with the Care of Apollo's Temple, and the Pythian Games, which were celebrated in that Place (m), the Situation of which rendered it very commodious for them to assemble in, for it was seated in the Midst of Greece, as the Geographers tell us.

The Persons that first compos'd this Assembly, by the Appointment of Amphictyon, were, according to Pausanias, the Representatives of the Ionians, amongst whom the Athenians were included, Dolopians, Thessalians, Ænianians, Magnesians, Melians, Phthians, Dorians, Phocians, and the Locrians, that inhabited near Mount Cnemis, and were call'd upon that Account Epicnemidii. Strabo reports, that, at their first Institution, they were twelve in Number, and were delegated by so many Cities. Harpocration also and Suidas reckon up twelve Nations of which this Council consist'd, viz. Ionians, Dorians, Perrhæbians, Bœotians, Magnesians, Achæans, Phthians, Melians, Dolopians, Ænianians, Delpbians, Phocians. Æschines reckons only 11, instead of the Achæans, Ænians, Delphinians, and Dolopians, placing these three only, viz. Thessalians, Oetæans, Loerians (n).

Afterwards in the Time of Philip, King of Macedon, and Father of Alexander the Great, the Phocians, having ranfack'd and spoil'd the Delphian Temple, were by a Decree of the Amphictyones invaded by the rest of the Grecians, as a sacrilegious and impious Nation, and, after a ten Years War, depriv'd of the Privilege of sitting amongst them, together with their Allies the Lacedæmonians, who were one Part of the Dorians, and, under that Name, had formerly sat in this Assembly; and their vacant Places were supplied by the Macedonians, who were admitted, in Return of their good Services they had done in the Phocian War. But about 68 Years after, when the Gauls, under the Command of Brennus, made a terrible Invasion upon Greece, ravaging and destroying all before them, sparing nothing sacred or profane, and, with a barbarous and sacrilegious Fury, robb'd and despoil'd the Delphian Temple, the Phocians behav'd themselves with so much Gallantry, signaling themselves in the Battle above the rest of the Grecians, that they were thought to have made a sufficient Atonement for their former Offence, and restored to their ancient Privilege and Dignity (o).

In the Reign of Augustus Cæsar they suffer'd another Alteration; for that Emperor having worsted Antony in a Sea-fight at Actium, and, in Memory of that Victory, founded the City Nicopolis, was desirous that its Inhabitants should be admitted into this Assembly; and, to make Way for them, order'd that the Magnesiens, Meleans, Pthians, and Ænians, who, till that Time, had distinct Voices, should be number'd with the Thessalians, and send no Representatives, but such as were common to them all; and that the Right of Suffrage, which formerly belonged to those Nations, and the Dolopians (a People whose State and Name were extinct long before) should be given to the Nicopolitans (p).

Strabo, who flourish'd in the Reign of Augustus and Tiberius, reports, that this Council, as also the general Assembly of the Acheans, was at that Time dissolv'd; but Pausanias, who liv'd many Years after, under Antoninus Pius, assures us, that in his Time it remain'd intire, and that the Number of the Amphictyones was then thirty, being delegated by the following Nations, viz. the Nicopolitans, Macedonians, Thessalians, Bœotians, (who, in former Times, were call'd Æolians, and inhabited some Parts of Thessaly) Phocians, Delphians, Loerians, call'd Ozolæ, with those that lie opposite to Eubœa, Dorians, Athenians, and Eubœans.

This Assembly had every Year only two set Meetings, one in the Beginning of Spring, the other in Autumn (q), except some extraordinary Occasion called them together. The Design of their Meetings was to determine publick Quarrels, and decide the Differences that happen'd between any of the Cities of Greece, when no other Means were left to compose them. Before they entered upon Business, they jointly sacrificed an Ox cut into small Pieces to Delphian Apollo, thereby fignifying the Union or Agreement of the Cities, which they represented. Their Determinations were always receiv'd with a great deal of Respect and Veneration; and held inviolable, the Grecians being always ready to join against those that rejected them, as common Enemies.

An Assembly of neighbouring Cities, met to consult about the common Good, seems usually to have been call'd Αμφικτιονία; and, beside the famous one already spoken of, Strabo mentions another held in the Temple of Neptune at Traxen, at which the Delegates of the seven following States were present, viz. Hermione, Epidaurus, Ægina, Athens, the Persians, Nauplians, and the Orchomenians of Bœotia (r).

Of the Athenian Εκκλησία. or Publick Assemblies.

EΚΚΛΗΣΙΑ, was an Assembly of the People met together according to Law, to consult about the Good of the Commonwealth. It consisted of all such as were Freemen of Athens, of what Quality soever, as has been elsewhere mentioned. But such as had been punished with Infamy (ἀτιμία), Slaves, Foreigners, Women, and Children, were excluded. In the Reign of Cecrops, Women are said to have been allow'd Voices in the popular Assembly: Where Minerva contending with Neptune, which of them two should be declared Protector of Athens, and gaining the Women to her Party, is reported by their Voices, which were more numerous than those of the Men, to have obtain'd the Victory (f). It was of two Sorts, the first of which they call'd Κυβία, the other Μύκλητος.

Κυβία, were so call'd, ὅτι τὸ κῦβεν τὰ ψήφισμαία, because in them the People confirmed and ratified the Decrees of the Senate; or rather because they were held upon ἡμέραι κυβία, or ὡρισθεῖσαι καὶ νόμιμοι, Days stated and appointed by Law (t).

They were held four Times in five and thirty Days, which was the Time that each Προβία, or Company of Prytanes, presided in the Senate. The first Assembly was employ'd in approving and rejecting Magistrates, in hearing Actions call'd Εἰσαγγελία, and Proposals concerning the publick Good; as also in hearing the Catalogue of such Possessions, as were confiscated for the Service of the Commonwealth, and several other Things. The second made Provisions both for the Community and private Persons; and it was permitted every Man to prefer any Petition, or speak his Judgment concerning either of them. In the third, Audience was given to the Ambassadors of foreign States. The fourth was wholly taken up with Religion, and Matters relating to the Divine Worship (u). At this Time the Prytanes, who were obliged ἑὴν ἐκάστοτε κοινῆ, every Day to offer Sacrifices for the publick Safety, seem to have acquainted the Assembly with the Success of their Devotions after this Manner: "It is just and meet, O Athenians, as has been customary with you, that we should take Care that the Gods be religiously worshipped. We have therefore faithfully discharged this Duty for you. We have sacrificed to Jupiter the Saviour, to Minerva, to Victory; all which Oblations have been accepted for your Safety. We have likewise offered Sacrifices to Persuasion (Πειθῶ), to the Mother of Gods, to Apollo, which have met with the like good Success. Also the Sacrifices, offered to the rest of the Gods, have been all secure, and acceptable, and salutiferous: Receive therefore the Happiness, which the Gods have vouchsafed to grant you^(w). The first Assembly was upon the eleventh Day of the Prytanea; the second, upon the twentieth; the third, upon the thirtieth; the fourth, upon the thirty-third. Some there are, that reckon by the Month, and tell us, that they had three Assemblies every Month, upon the first, tenth, and thirtieth Days; or upon the tenth, twentieth, and thirtieth (x). But the former Computation seems to be more agreeable to the Custom of the ancient Athenians, amongst whom were ten Πρυτανείαι, according to the Number of their Tribes, each of which ruled thirty-five Days, in which they had four Assemblies. Afterwards the Number of the Tribes being increased by an Accession of two new ones, the Πρυτανείαι were also twelve in Number, each of which ruled a Month, and then perhaps the later Computation might take Place.

Σύγκλητοι Ἐκκλησίαι, were so call'd, ἀπὸ τῆς συγκαλεῖν, because the People were summoned together, whereas in the Κυεῖαι, they met of their own Accord, without receiving any Notice from the Magistrates, as Ulpian observes (y). The Persons that summoned the People were commonly the Στρατηγοί, the Πολέμασχοι, or the Κήρυκες in their Names, because the Occasion of these extraordinary Assemblies was, for the most part, the coming on of some sudden, unexpected, and dangerous War; sometimes the Prytanes, if the Senate so order'd it, as they usually did, when any civil Affairs, in which the Στρατηγοί were not concerned, required a quicker Dispatch than could be given them in Κυεῖαι. The Crier (κῆρυξ) seems to have summon'd them twice at the least. Whence, in Aristophanes, it is said to be full Time to go to the Assembly, because the Crier had given the second Call:

Ὡσα βαδίζων, ὡς ὁ κῆρυξ ἀρτίως,
Ἡμῶν περσιόντων, δεύτερον κηρόκκυκεν (z).

Κατεκκλησίαι, as Pollux, κατὰ κλήσεις, as Ammonius, or Κατακλήσεις, as Hesychius calls them, were Assemblies held upon some very weighty and momentous Affair, to which they summoned not only those Citizens that resided in the City, but all that lived in the Country, or were in the Ships then at Anchor in the Haven.

The Places, where the Ἐκκλησίαι were assembled, were several; as 1st, (w) Demosthenis Proœm. LXIII. (x) Ulpian. in Demosthen. Aristoph. Schol. (y) In Orat. de falsa Legat. (z) Concionatricibus, p. 686. Ed. Amstelod.

Ἄγορῆ, or the Market-place; and there, not the Athenians only, but most other Cities, had their publick Meetings, because it was usually very capacious. Hence the Assemblies themselves came to be call'd Ἄγορῆ, and to make a Speech, ἀγορεύειν, as Harpocration observes.

Πνύξ, was a Place near the Citadel, so call'd, διὰ τὸ πεπυκῶσθαι τοῖς λίθοις, ἢ ταῖς καθέδραις, ἢ διὰ τὸ πεπυκῶσθαι ἐν αὐτῇ τὸς βυλάδας, because it was fill'd with Stones, or Seats set close together, or from the Crowds of Men in the Assemblies, and therefore πυνυκίτης is by the Comedians taken for the thronging and pressing of a Multitude (a). It was remarkable for nothing more, than the Meanness of its Buildings and Furniture, whereby in Ages that most affected Gaiety and Splendor, it remain'd a Monument of the ancient Simplicity (b).

The Theatre of Bacchus, in later Times, was the usual Place, in which the Assemblies were held (c), but even then Pnyx was not wholly forsaken, it being against Law to decree any Man a Crown, or elect any of the Magistrates in any other Place, as Pollux; or at least, the Στρατήγοι, as Hesychius reports.

The stated Assemblies were held in the foremention'd Places, but such, as were call'd upon extraordinary Occasions, were not confined to any certain Place, being sometimes held in the Pyraeus, where there was a Forum call'd Ἰσποδαμεία ἄγορῆ, in the Munychia, or any other Place capacious enough to contain the People.

The Magistrates, that had the Care and Management of these Assemblies, were the Prytanes, Epistatai, and Proedri.

The Prytanes sometimes call'd the People together, and always, before their Meeting, set up a Πέγγαμμα in same Place of general Course, in which were contained the Matters to be consulted upon in the following Assembly, to the End that every Man might have Time to consider of them, before he gave his Judgment (d).

Περίδρασι, were so call'd from the first Places, which they had in the Assemblies. Whilst the Tribes of Athens were no more than ten, the Proedri were nine in Number, being appointed by Lots out of the nine Tribes, which at that Time were exempted from being Prytanes. Their Business was to propose to the People the Things they were to deliberate upon, and determine in that Meeting (e), at the End of which their Offices expired. For the greater Security of the Laws and Commonwealth from the Attempts of ambitious and designing Men, it was customary for the Νομοφύλακες in all Assemblies συγκαθίστασθαι τοῖς περὶδρασι, ἕνα διακαλύοντάς ἐπιχειροῦν ἐσα μὴ συμπίπτει, to sit with the Proedri, and to hinder the People from decreeing any thing contrary to the public Interest (f). By another Law it was likewise provided, that, in every Assembly, one of the Tribes should be appointed by Lots, περὶδρασίειν, to preside at the Suggestum, to defend the Commonwealth (g), viz. by preventing the Orators, and others, from propounding any thing inconsistent with the receiv'd Laws, or destructive of the Peace and Welfare of the City.

Επιτάτης, the President of the Assembly, was chosen by Lots out of the Proedri; the chief Part of his Office seems to have consisted, in granting the People Liberty to give their Voices, which they were not permitted to do, till he had given the Signal (b).

If the People were remiss in coming to the Assemblies, the Magistrates used their utmost Endeavours to compel them; they shut up all the Gates, that only excepted, thro' which they were to pass to the Assembly; they took Care that all Vendibles should be carried out of the Market, that there might be nothing to divert them from appearing; and if this was not sufficient, the Logistæ (whose Business this was) took a Cord dy'd with Vermilion, with which they detach'd two of the Τοξόται into the Market, where one of them standing on one Side, and another on that which was opposite, pursued all they found there, and mark'd with the Cord as many as they caught; all which had a certain Fine set upon them, as the Scholiast upon Aristophanes observes at this Verse,

Οιδ' ἐν ἀγορᾷ λαλῶσι, κἄνω καὶ κάτω
Τὸ σχοινίον φεύσει τὸ μεμικρωμένον (i).

They in the Forum chat, and up and down
Scamper t'avoid the Cord Vermilion-dy'd.

J. A.

Lastly, For an Encouragement to the Commonalty to frequent the Assemblies, it was decreed, at the Instance of Callistratus, that an Obolus should be given out of the Exchequer to all such as came early to the Place appointed for the Assembly. This was afterwards increas'd to three Oboli, at the Instance of Agyrrhius. The Expectation of this Reward drew many of the poorer Sort, who would otherwise have absented themselves. Whence that Saying of Aristophanes (k), where he speaks of Plutus, the God of Money;

Ἐκκλησία δ' ἔχι διὰ τῆτον γίγνεσθαι;

Is not the Assembly frequented for his Sake? They who came late to the Assembly received nothing; which is evident from the following Verses of the same Author (l):

ΒΑΕ. Ἀλλὰ πόθεν ἦκεις ἐτέον; ΧΡ. Εξ ἐκκλησίας.
ΒΑΕ. Ἡδὴ λέλυται γδ; ΧΡ. Νὴ Δί' ἄρθειον μὲν ἔν.
καὶ δ' ἦλα πολὺν ἢ μίλιθ, ὃ Ζεῦ φίλιγαι.
Γέλων παρέσκεν ἦν περσέριον κύκλω.
ΒΑΕ. Τειώβολον δ' ἦτ' ἔλαβες; ΧΡ. Εἰ γδ ἄφελον.
Ἀλλ' ὕσερθ' νῦν ἦλθον, ὡς' ἀσχύνομαι,

If boisterous and tempestuous Weather, or a sudden Storm, which they call'd Διοσημεία (m), or Earthquake happen'd, or any inauspicious Omen appear'd, the Assembly was immediately adjourned. But, if all Things continu'd in their usual Course, they proceeded in this Manner.

First, the Place, where they were appointed to meet, was purified by killing young Pigs, which, as was usual in such Lustrations, they carried round about the utmost Bounds of it; on the Outside of which no Man was permitted to stand, because those Places were accounted prophane and un sanctified, and therefore unfit for the transacting of Business of so great Consequence, as that in which the Welfare and Safety of the State was nearly concern'd; this we learn from Aristophanes, in whom the publick Crier warns the People to stand on the Inside of the καθάρμα, for so they call'd the Sacrifices offer'd at Expiations, Πάριθ', ὡς ἂν ἐντὸς ἦε τῶ καθάρματι.

The Person, that officiated in the Lustration, was call'd Καθαρευτής, and Περισίαρχος, from Περισία, another Name for Καθάρματα (n), and Εσιαρχος, according to Pollux.

The Expiatory Rites being ended, the publick Crier made a solemn Prayer for the Prosperity of the Commonwealth, and the good Success of their Counsels and Undertakings (o). For, amongst the primitive Greeks, all Things were carried on with a great Shew of Piety and Devotion; and so great a Share they thought their Gods had in the Management of human Affairs, that they never undertook any Thing of Weight or Moment, especially of publick Business, without having first invoked their Direction and Assistance.

Then he pronounced a bitter Execration against such as should endeavour any thing in that Assembly to the Prejudice of the Commonwealth, praying, that he and his whole Family might be made remarkable Examples of the Divine Vengeance (p).

Then the Crier, the Proedri giving the Command, repeated the Πεγκυλάμα, or Decree of the Senate, upon which the Assembly was then to deliberate. That being done, the Crier proclaimed with a loud Voice, τίς ἀγορεύειν βέλεται τῷ ὑπὲρ πενήτην ἢ ἄνω ἄνω γέροντων; which of the Men above 50 Years old will make an Oration? Then the old Men propounded whatever they thought convenient. After which, the Crier by a second Proclamation gave them to understand, λέγειν ἕβ Αθληαίων τὸν βυλόμδιον οἷς ἔξει, That every Athenian might then speak, whom the Laws allow'd so to do (q). For as they judg'd it unreasonable, that any Man's Quality or Age (so he were not under 30) should debar him from uttering what he had conceiv'd for the Good of the Commonwealth; so, on the other Hand, it was thought very indecent and unbecoming for young Men to give their Opinions, before they had heard the Sentiments of such, as Years and Experience had render'd more fit and able to judge.

But the Wisdom of the Law-giver thought it not expedient to permit every Man, without Distinction, to deliver his Opinion; for such as were convicted of any heinous Crime, of Impiety, Prophaneness, or Debauchery, had fled from their Colours, or were deeply indebted to the Commonwealth, he excluded from having any thing to do in such Consultations (r); it being scarce probable that Persons of wicked Lives, or desperate Fortunes, should endeavour any thing conducive to the Peace and Prosperity of the State, but rather that they should design the Confusion and Ruin of it, that themselves might be enrich'd with the Spoils of honest Men, and be at Liberty to take their full Career in their unlawful Pleasures, without the Restraint of Laws, and Fear of Punishments. Wherefore, if any Man was thought by the Prytanes to be unfit to make an Oration to the People, they enjoin'd him Silence. Thus in the Assembly of Women in Aristophanes (s), Praxagora, who is there one of the Prytanes, commands an impertinent Woman to hold her Peace;

Σὺ μὲν βιάδιζε, καὶ κάθης, ἰδὲν γὰρ εἶ.

Go you, and sit down, for you are no Body. They who refus'd Obedience to the Prytanes, were pull'd down from the Suggestum by the Lictors (τοξόλαι), as appears from another Place of the same Author (t).

When the Debates were ended, the Crier, by the Command of the Epistatai, or Proedri, as others report, ask'd the People, whether they would consent to the Decree? Permitting them to give Voices, and thereby either establish or reject it, the doing which they call'd Ἐπιτηρῆσαι τὸ ψήφισμα, or Διδόναι διαχειροποιαν τῷ δήμῳ.

The Manner of giving their Suffrages, was by holding up their Hands, and therefore they call'd it χειροποιαν, and χειροποιεῖν signifies to ordain, or establish any thing; ἀποχειροποιεῖν, to disannul by Suffrage. This was the common Method of voting, but in some Cases, as particularly when they depriv'd Magistrates of their Offices for Male-administration, they gave their Votes in private, lest the Power and Greatness of the Persons accus'd should lay a Restraint upon them, and cause them to act contrary to their Judgments and Inclinations. The Manner of voting privately was by casting Pebbles (ψήφους) into Vessels (κάδους), which the Prytanes were obliged to place in the Assembly for this Purpose. Before the Use of Pebbles, they voted with (κύαμοι) Beans (u).

As soon as the People had done voting, the Proedri, having carefully examin'd the Number of the Suffrages, pronounc'd the Decree ratified, or thrown out, according as the major Part had approv'd, or rejected it. It is observable in the last Place, that it was unlawful for the Prytanes to propose any thing twice in the same Assembly (zv). The Business being over, the Prytanes dismiss'd the Assembly, as we read in Aristophanes (x).

C H A P. XVIII.

Of the Senate of the five hundred.

BY Solon's Constitution, the whole Power and Management of Affairs were placed in the People; it was their Prerogative to receive Appeals from the Courts of Justice, to abrogate old Laws, and enact new, to make what Alterations in the State they judged convenient; and, in short, all Matters, whether publick or private, foreign or domestick, civil, military, or religious, were determin'd by them.

But because it was dangerous, that Things of such vast Moment and Concern should be, without any farther Care, committed to the Disposal and Management of a giddy and unthinking Multitude, who, by eloquent Men, would be persuaded to enact Things contrary to their own Interests, and destructive to the Commonwealth; the wise Law-giver, to prevent such pernicious Consequences, judged it absolutely necessary for the Preservation of the State, to institute a great Council, consisting only of Men of the best Credit and Reputation in the City, whose Business it should be to inspect all Matters before they were propounded to the People; and to take Care that nothing, but what had been diligently examined, should be brought before the general Assembly (z). At the same Time he instituted, at least regulated another Council, I mean that of the Areopagites, which, tho' inferior to the former in Order and Power, yet was superior to it in Dignity and Esteem, and therefore was call'd ἡ ἄνω Βουλὴ, or, the upper Council; to this he gave the Inspection and Custody of the Laws, supposing that the Commonwealth being held by these two, as it were by firm Anchors, would be less liable to be tost by Tumults, and made a Prey to such as had Knavery enough to design, and Cunning and Eloquence to entice the People to their own Destruction (a).

At the first Institution of the former Council, it consisted only of four hundred Senators, one hundred of which were appointed out of each Tribe, for the Tribes in Solon's Time were only four in Number (b).

They were elected by Lots, in drawing of which they made Use of Beans, and therefore Thucydides calls them Βουλῆτας ἀπὸ κνιάμυ, and the Senate, Βουλὴν ἀπὸ κνιάμυ. The Manner of their Election was thus; on a certain Day, before the Beginning of the Month Hecatombæon, the President of every Tribe gave in the Names of all the Persons within his District, that were capable of this Dignity, and had a Mind to appear for it; these were engraven upon Tables of Brass, call'd Πινάκια (c), and cast into a Vessel set there for that Purpose; into another Vessel were cast the same Number of Beans, an hundred of which were white, and all the rest black. Then the Names of the Candidates, and the Beans were drawn, one by one, and those, whose Names were drawn out together with the white Beans, were received into the Senate (e).

About eighty-six Years after Solon's Regulation of the Commonwealth, the Number of Tribes being increased by Clisthenes from four to ten; the Senate also received an Addition of one hundred, which, being added to the former, made it to consist of five hundred, and from that Time it was call'd Βελή ἢ πεντακοσίων.

Afterwards two new Tribes were added to the former in Honour of Antigonus, and his Son Demetrius, from whom they received their Names, and then the Number of the Senators were augmented by the Accession of another hundred (f); for, in both these last Alterations, it was order'd, that out of every Tribe fifty should be elected into the Senate. As to the Manner of Election, that continued the same, excepting only, that, instead of an hundred white Beans drawn by each Tribe, they had now only fifty, according to the Number of their Senators.

After the Election of Senators, they proceeded in the next Place to appoint Officers to preside in the Senate, and these they call'd Πρυσάνεις. The Manner of their Election was thus; the Names of the Tribes being thrown into one Vessel with nine black Beans, and a white Bean cast into another, the Tribe, whose Fortune it was to be drawn out together with the white Bean, presided first, and the rest in the Order in which they were drawn out of the Vessel; for every Tribe presided in its Turn, and therefore, according to the Number of Tribes, the Attick Year was divided into ten Parts, each of which consisted of thirty-five Days; only the four first Parts contained thirty-six, thereby to make the Lunar Year compleat, which, according to their Computation, consisted of one hundred and fifty-four Days (g). Others are of Opinion, that those four supernumerary Days were employed in the Creation of Magistrates, and that, during that Time, the Athenians had no Magistrates at all (h), and therefore they call'd them Αναρχοὶ ἡμέρας, and Αρχαρχήσιοι. Afterwards, when the Tribes were increased to twelve, every one of them presided a full Month in the Senate, as we learn from Pollux (i). The Time that every Company of Prytanes continued in their Office, was termed Πρυσανεία, during which they were excused from all other publick Duties.

For the avoiding of Confusion, every Πρυσανεία was divided into five Weeks of Days, by which the fifty Prytanes were rank'd into five Decuria, each Decuria being to govern their Week, during which Time they were call'd Πρίεδροι; out of these, one, whom they elected by Lots, presided, over the rest, each of the seven Days; so that, of the ten Proedri, three were excluded from presiding.

(e) Sigonius & Emnius de Rep. Athen. & ubique in hac parte hujus libri. (f) Stephan. Byzant. de Urb. & Populis. (g) Harpocrat. (h) Liban. Argument. in Androtian. (i) Lib. VIII, cap. 9.

The President of the Proedri was term'd Ἐπιτάτης. To his Custody was committed the publick Seal, and the Keys of the Citadel, and the publick Exchequer. This therefore being an Office of so great Trust and Power, no Man was permitted, by the Laws, to continue in it above one Day, nor to be elected into it a second Time (k).

There are said to have been nine Proedri distinct from the former, and chosen by the Epistata at every Convention of the Senate, out of all the Tribes, except that of which the Prytanes were Members (l). Both of these were different from the Ἐπιτάτης, and Πρύτασι, in the popular Assemblies.

One thing more there is remarkable in the Election of Senators, that, besides those who were immediately admitted into the Senate, they chose Subsidiaries, who, in Case any of the Senators were deposed for Male-Administration, or died before the Expiration of their Offices, should, without any farther Trouble, supply their Places; and these they call'd Ἐπιλαχόντες (m).

The Authority of the Prytanes consisted chiefly in assembling the Senate, which, for the most Part, was done once every Day (Festivals only excepted) and oftener if Occasion required. And that they might be ready to give Audience to all such as had any Thing to propose, that concern'd the Commonwealth, they constantly resorted to a common Hall, near the Senate-house, call'd Prytaneum, in which they offer'd Sacrifices, and had their Diet together (n).

Every Time the Senate was assembled, they offer'd Sacrifices to Jupiter, Βελαι, and Minerva Βελαια, the Counsellors, who had a Chapel near the Senate-house (o). This they term'd εἰσιτήσια θύων (p).

If any Man offer'd any Thing, that deserved to be taken into Consideration, they engraved it upon Tablets, that all the Senators might beforehand be acquainted with what was to be discuss'd at their next Meeting, in which, after the Prytanes, or Epistata, had propounded the Matter, every Man had Liberty to declare his Opinion, and give his Reasons either for, or against it. This they did standing, for it is every where observable in ancient Authors, that no Person, of what Rank or Quality soever, presumed to speak sitting; and therefore, whenever a poetical Hero makes an Oration, he is always first said to rise:

Τοῖσι δ' ἀνιστάμενος μετέφη πόδας ὠκύς Ἀχιλλεύς, saith Homer; and Ovid, to trouble you with no more Instances, mentions the same Custom, Surgit ad hos clypei Dominus septemplex Ajax.

When all had done speaking, the Business, design'd to be pass'd into a Decree, was drawn up in Writing by any of the Prytanes, or other Senators, and repeated openly in the House (q); after which, Leave being given by the Epistata, or Prytanes, the Senators proceeded to vote, which they did in private, by casting Beans into a Vessel placed there for that Purpose. The Beans were of two Sorts, black and white, and if the Number of the former was found to be the greatest, the Proposal was rejected; if of the latter, it was enacted into a Decree (r), which they call'd Ψήφισμα, and Πεσβέλισμα, because it was agreed upon in the Senate with a Design to have it afterwards propounded to an Assembly of the People, that it might receive from them a farther Ratification, without which it could not be pass'd into a Law, nor have any Force or obligatory Power, after the End of that Year, which was the Time that the Senators, and almost all other Magistrates, laid down their Commissions.

The Power of this Council was very great, almost the whole Care of the Commonwealth being devolved upon them; for the Commonalty being, by Solon's Constitutions, invested with supreme Power, and entrusted with the Management of all Affairs, as well publick as private, it was the peculiar Charge of the Senate to keep them within due Bounds, and to take Cognizance of every Thing before it was refer'd to them, and to be careful that nothing should be propounded to them, but what they, upon mature Deliberation, had found to be conducive to the publick Good. And beside the Care of the Assembly, there were a great many Things that fell under the Cognizance of this Court, as the Accounts of Magistrates at the Expiration of their Offices (s), and the Care of poor Persons, that were maintain'd by an Allowance out of the publick Exchequer (t). It was their Business to appoint Gaolers for the publick Prisons, and to examine and punish Persons accused of such Crimes as were not forbidden by any positive Law (u), to take Care of the Fleet, and to look after the Building of new Men of War (w), with several other Things of great Consequence.

Now, because these were Places of great Trust, no Man could be admitted to them till he had undergone a strict Δοκιμασία, or Probation, whereby the whole Course of his Life was enquired into, and found to have been managed with Credit and Reputation, else he was rejected (x).

And to lay the greater Obligation upon them, they were required to take a solemn Oath, the Substance whereof was this; "That they would in all their Councils endeavour to promote the publick Good; and not advise any Thing contrary to the Laws. That they would sit as Judges in what Court soever they were elected to by Lots, (for several of the Courts of Justice were supply'd with Judges out of the Senate.) "That they would never keep an Athenian in Bonds, that could give three Sureties of the same Quality, except such as had bought or collected, or been engaged as a Surety for the publick Revenues, and did not pay the Commonwealth, and such as were guilty of treasonable Practices against the Government." But this (as Demosthenes interprets it) must be understood only of Criminals before their Condemnation (y), for to put them in Fetters, after Sentence pass'd upon them, was no Breach of the Laws. But the highest Punishment, which the Senate was allow'd to inflict upon Criminals, was a Fine of five hundred Drachmæ. When this was thought not enough, they transmitted the Criminal to the Theſmōthetæ, by whom he was arraign'd in the usual Method *. It muſt not be omitted, that, after the Expulſion of the thirty Tyrants, they took an Oath to obſerve τὴν ἀμνηſίαν, the Act of Oblivion, whereby all the Diſorders, committed during the Government of the Tyrants, were remitted.

After the Expiration of their Truſt, the Senators gave an Account of their Management: And therefore, to prevent their being expoſed to the Rage and Malice of the Multitude, they ſeverely puniſh'd whatever Offences were committed by any of their own Members. If any of the Senators was convicted of breaking his Oath, committing any Injuſtice, or behaving himſelf otherwiſe than as became his Order, the reſt of his Brethren expell'd him, and ſubſtituted one of the Ἀντιλαχόνες in his Place. This they call'd Ἐκφυλλοροῦναι, from the Leaves which they made Uſe of in giving their Suffrages, in the ſame Manner that the Ὀσρακα were uſed by the Commonalty in decreeing the Oſtraciſm. But this Cuſtom was not very ancient, being invented upon the Account of one Xenotimus, an Officer, that, by changing the Beans (which till that Time were always made Uſe of) was found to have corrupted the Suffrages (z). It was lawful τὰς ἐκφυλλορορηθέντας ἐν τῷ δικαſτείῳ καὶ ἀδέχεται, to admit thoſe Men to be Judges, who had been expell'd out of the Senate. Whence we may conclude, that it was cuſtomary to deprive Senators of their Office for very ſmall Offences.

On the contrary, ſuch, as had behaved themſelves with Juſtice and Integrity, were rewarded with an Allowance of Money out of the publick Exchequer (a). Every Senator receiv'd a Drachm by the Day for his Maintenance. Whence ἐκλῆς λαχεῖν, to be elected by Lots into the Senate, is all one, according to Hefychius's Explication, with δραχμὴν τῆς ἡμέρας λαχεῖν, to obtain a Drachm every Day. And if any Men of War had been built during their Regency, the People, in their publick Aſſembly, decreed them the Honour of wearing a Crown; if not, the Law prohibited them from ſuing for this Privilege, as having been wanting to the Commonwealth, whoſe Safety and Intereſt depended upon nothing ſo much, as the Strength and Number of their Ships (b). This ſeems to have been enacted after the Fight near Salamis, that being the firſt Occaſion that moved the Athenians to think of increaſing their Fleet.

Of the Senate and Court of Areopagus.

TH E Name of this Senate was taken from the Place in which it was wont to be aſſembled, being an Hill not far diſtant from the Citadel (c), call'd Ἀρειοπάγος or Ἀρεῖοπάγος, that is, Mars's Hill, from Mars, the God of War and Blood, because all wilful Murders came under the Cognizance of this Court (d); or, as Fables tell us, from the Arraignment of Mars, who was the first Criminal that was try'd in it (e); or, lastly, because the Amazons, whom the Poets feign to have been the Daughters of Mars, when they besieged Athens, pitch'd their Camps, and offer'd Sacrifices to the God of War in this Place (f).

When this Court was first instituted is uncertain. Some make it as ancient as Cecrops, the first Founder of Athens; others think it was begun in the Reign of Cranæus; and, lastly, others bring it down as low as the Times of Solon. But this Opinion, tho' defended by Authors of no less Credit than Plutarch (g), and Cicero (h), is, in express Terms, contradicted by Aristotle (i), and one of Solon's Laws cited by Plutarch himself, wherein there is Mention of Judgments made in this Court, before Solon had reform'd the Commonwealth. What seems most probable is, that the Senate of Areopagus was first instituted a long Time before Solon, but was continued, regulated, and augmented by him; was by him made superior to the Ephetae, another Court instituted by Draco (k), and invested with greater Power, Authority, and larger Privileges, than ever it had enjoy'd before.

The Number of the Persons that compos'd this venerable Assembly is not agreed upon; by some it is restrain'd to nine, by others enlarged to thirty-one, by others to fifty-one, and by some to no more. Maximus tells us it consist'd of fifty-one, πλὴν ἕξ εὐπατριδῶν καὶ πλετω καὶ βίῳ σώφρονι διαζερύων, besides such of the Nobility as were eminent for their Virtue and Riches; by which Words he seems to mean the nine Archons, who were the constant Seminary of this great Assembly, and, having discharged their several Offices, pass'd every Year into it (l); others affirm, that not all the nine Archons, but only the Thesmothetae were admitted into the Areopagus (m). This was the Reason why their Number was not always the same, but more, or less, according as those Persons happen'd to continue a greater, or lesser Time in the Senate. Therefore when Socrates was condemn'd by this Court, (as the Nature of his Crime makes it evident he was) we find no less than two hundred fourscore and one giving their Votes against him, besides those who voted for his Absolution: And in an ancient Inscription upon a Column in the Citadel at Athens, erected to the Memory of Rufus Festus, Proconsul of Greece, the Senate of Areopagus is said to consist of three hundred.

All, that had undergone the Office of an Archon, were not taken into this Senate, but only such of them, as had behaved themselves well in the Discharge of their Trust; and not they neither, till they had given an Account of their Administration before the Logista, and obtain'd their Approbation, after an Enquiry into their Behaviour, which was not a mere Formality, and a Thing of Course, but extremely severe, rigorous, and particular (n). This being done, after the Performance of certain Sacrifices at Limnæ, a Place in Athens dedicated to Bacchus, they were admitted upon set Days (o). Thus it was ordered by Solon's Constitutions, which were nicely and punctually observed for many Ages; but towards the Declination of the Athenian Grandeur, together with many other useful and excellent Ordinances, were either wholly laid aside and abrogated, or, which was all one, neglected and not observed. And then not the Archons only, but others, as well those of loose Lives and mean Fortunes, as Persons of high Quality, and strict Virtue, nay, and even Foreigners were taken into this Assembly; as appears by several Instances produced by the learned Meursius, and particularly that of Rufus Festus, mentioned in the aforesaid Inscription, as a Member of it.

Aristides tells us, this Court was ἡ ἐν τοῖς Ἑλλησι Δικαστηρίων τιμιώτατον ἢ ἀγιώτατον, the most sacred and venerable Tribunal in all Greece; and if we consider the Justice of their Sentences and judicial Determinations, the Unblameableness of their Manners, their wise and prudent Behaviour, and their high Quality and Station in the Commonwealth, it will easily appear that this Character was not unreasonable or undeserved. To have been sitting in a Tavern or publick House, was a sufficient Reason to deny an Archon's Admission into it (p); and though their Dignity was usually continued to them as long as they liv'd, yet, if any of the Senators was convicted of any Immorality, he was, without Mercy or Favour, presently expell'd. Nor was it enough that their Lives were strictly innocent and unblameable, but something more was required of them, their Countenances, Words, Actions, and all their Behaviour must be composed, serious, and grave to a Degree beyond what was expected from other (the most virtuous) Men. To laugh in their Assembly was an unpardonable Act of Levity (q); and for any of them to write a Comedy, was forbidden by a particular Precept of the Law (r).

Nay, so great an Awe and Reverence did this solemn Assembly strike into those that sat in it, that Isocrates (s) tells us, that in his Days, when they were somewhat degenerated from their primitive Virtue, however otherwise Men were irregular and exorbitant, yet, once chosen into this Senate, they presently ceased from their vicious Inclinations, and chose rather to conform to the Laws and Manners of that Court, ἢ ταῖς αὐτῶν κακίαις ἐμυθεῖν, than to continue in their loose and debauch'd Course of Life: And so exactly upright and impartial were their Proceedings, that Demosthenes (t) tells us, that to his Time there had never been so much as one of their Determinations, that either Plaintiff or Defendant had any just Reason to complain of. This was so eminently remarkable in all Parts of Greece, that even foreign States, when any Controversies happened among them, would voluntarily submit to their Decision: Pausanias (u) reports in particular of the Meffenians, that, before their first Wars with the Spartans, they were very desirous that their Quarrel should be referr'd to the Areopagites, and both Parties stand to their Determination.

It is reported, that this Court was the first that sat upon Life and Death* ; and in later Ages, a great many capital Causes came under its Cognizance ; before it were brought all Incendiaries, all such as deserted their Country, against whom they proceeded with no less Severity, than was used to those that were convicted of Treason, both being punish'd with Death (w) ; such also as had laid wait for any Person's Life, whether their wicked Contrivances were successful or not ; for the very designing to murder a Man was thought to deserve no less than capital Punishment ; others are of Opinion, that such Causes were try'd at the Tribunal of the Palladium (x). However that be, it is certain, that all Wounds given out of Malice, all wilful Murders, and particularly such as were effected by Poison, came under the Cognizance of this Court (y). Some say that there was no Appeal from the Areopagites to the People ; but others, amongst whom is Meursius, are of a contrary Opinion, and assure us, that not only their Determinations might be call'd in Question, and, if need was, retracted by an Assembly of the People (z), but that themselves too, if they exceeded the due Bounds of Moderation in inflicting Punishments, were liable to account for it to the Logistæ (a). The same Author tells us afterwards, that this Court had Power to cancel the Sentence of an Assembly, if the People had acquitted any Criminal that deserved Punishment (b), and to rescue out of their Hands such innocent Persons, as were, by Prejudice or Mis-information, condemned by them. Perhaps in both these Opinions there is something of Truth, if you understand the former of the Areopagus in its primitive State ; and the other, when its Power was retrench'd by Pericles.

Their Power in the Commonwealth was very great, for, by Solon's Constitution. the Inspection and Custody of the Laws were committed to them (c), the publick Fund was disposed of and managed according to their Discretion (d), the Care of all young Men in the City belong'd to them, and it was their Business to appoint them Tutors and Governors (e), and see that they were educated suitably to their several Qualities (f). Nor did they only superintend the Youth, but their Power was extended to Persons of all Ages and Sexes ; such as lived disorderly, or were guilty of any Impiety, or Immorality, they punish'd according to the Merit of their Offences ; and such as were eminent for a virtuous Course of Life, they had Power to reward. To this End, they went about with the Gynæconomi to all publick Meetings, such as were Marriages, and solemn Sacrifices, which were usually concluded with a Banquet, to see that all Things were carried on with Decency and Sobriety (g). Idleness was a Crime that came more especially under their Cognizance, and (which seems to have been an Institution peculiar to Solon) they were obliged to enquire strictly after every Man's Course of Life, and to examine by what Means he maintain'd himself in the Station he was in, that so there might be no Room for such as liv'd by unlawful Arts, by Cheating and Couzenage, or Theft or Rapine (b). Beside this, Matters of Religion, Blasphemy against the Gods, Contempt of the holy Mysteries; and all Sorts of Impiety, the Consecration also of new Gods, Erektion of Temples and Altars, and Introduction of new Ceremonies into Divine Worship, were refer'd to the Judgment of this Court; therefore Plato, having been instructed in the Knowledge of one God in Agypt, was forc'd to dissemble or conceal his Opinion, for Fear of being called to an Account for it by the Areopagites (i); and St. Paul was arraign'd before them, as a Setter forth of strange Gods, when he preached unto them Jesus, and 'Ανάστασις, or the Resurrection (k). These were the chief Busineses that this Senate was employed about; for they seldom intermeddled in the Management of public Affairs, except in Cases of great and imminent Danger, and in these the Commonwealth usually had Recourse to them, as the last and safest Refuge (l).

They had three Meetings in the Areopagus every Month, upon the twenty-seventh, twenty-eighth, and twenty-ninth Days (m). But if any Business happened that requir'd Dispatch, it was usual for them to assemble in the Βασιλική Στοά, or Royal Portico, which they encompass'd with a Rope, to prevent the Multitude from thronging in upon them (n), as was usual also in other Courts of Justice.

Two Things are very remarkable in their Judgments: First, that they sat in the open Air (o), a Custom practis'd in all the Courts of Justice, that had Cognizance of Murder; partly, because it was unlawful for the Accuser and Criminal in such Cases to be under the same Roof; and partly, that the Judges, whose Persons are esteem'd sacred, might contract no Pollution from conversing with Men profane and unhallowed, for such they were accounted, that had been guilty of so black and heinous a Crime (p). Secondly, they heard and determin'd all Causes at Night, and in the Dark, to the End that having neither seen the Plaintiff, nor Defendant, they might lie under no Temptation of being by-assed or influenced by either of them (q). And of what Consequence this was, may be learn'd from the Example of the Harlot Pbryne, who being accused of Impiety for feigning herself to be Minerva, the Protectress of Athens, when Sentence was going to pass against her, so changed the Minds of her Judges, by uncovering her Breasts, that she was immediately acquitted*.

Actions about Murder were usher'd into the Areopagus by the Βασιλεύς, who was allow'd to sit as Judge amongst them, laying aside the Crown, which was one of the Ornaments of his Office (r).

The common Method they proceeded in, was this; the Court being met, and the People excluded, they divided themselves into several Committees, each of which had their Causes assigned to be heard and determin'd by them severally, if the Multitude of Business was so great, that the whole Senate could not take Cognizance of them together. Both these Designations were performed by Lots, to the End that every Man coming into the Court before it was determined what Causes would fall to his Share, none of them might lie under any Temptation of having his Honesty corrupted with Bribes (f).

Before the Trial began, the Plaintiff and Defendant took solemn Oaths upon the Testicles of a Goat, a Ram, and a Bull, by the Σεμναὶ Θεοὶ, or Furies. The Plaintiff, in Case of Murder, swore that he was related to the deceased Person, (for none but near Relations, at the farthest a Cousin, were permitted to prosecute the Murderer) and that the Prisoner was the Cause of his Death. The Prisoner swore that he was innocent of the Crime laid to his Charge. Both of them confirmed their Oaths with direful Imprecations, wishing, that, if they swore falsely, themselves, their Houses, and their whole Families, might be utterly destroy'd and extirpated by the Divine Vengeance (t); which they look'd upon to be so dreadful and certain, that the Law inflicted no Penalty upon those that at such a Time were guilty of Perjury, remitting them, as it were, to be punished by an higher Tribunal.

Then the two Parties were placed upon two silver Stools; the Accuser was placed upon the Stool of Ἰβεις, or Injury; the Prisoner upon the Stool of Ἀναδεία, or Impudence; or, according to Adrian Junius's Correction, of Ἀναυτία, or Innocence; these were two Goddesses, to which Altars, and afterwards Temples, were erected in the Areopagus (u.) The Accuser in this Place propos'd three Questions to the Prisoner, called by Æschylus τρία παλαιόμαλα (w), to each of which he was to give a distinct Answer. The first was, εἰ κατέκτονας, Are you guilty of this Murder? To which he made Answer, ἔκτονα, or, οὐκ ἔκτονα, Guilty, or Not Guilty? Secondly, Ὅπως κατέκτονας, How did you commit this Murder? Thirdly, Τίν' βελεύμασι κατέκτονας, Who were your Partners and Accomplices in the Fact?

In the next Place, the two Parties impleaded each other, and the Prisoner was allow'd to make his Defence in two Orations, the first of which being ended, he was permitted to secure himself by Flight, and go into voluntary Banishment, if he suspected the Goodness of his Cause; which Privilege if he made use of, all his Estate was confiscated, and expos'd to Sale by the Πωληταί (x). In the primitive Times both Parties spoke for themselves (y), but in later Ages they were permitted to have Council to plead for them. But, whoever it was that spoke, he was to represent the bare and naked Truth, without any Preface or Epilogue, without any Ornament, Figures of Rhetorick, or other insinuating Means to win the Favour, or move the Affections of the Judges (z).

Both Parties being heard, if the Prisoner was resolv'd to stand the Trial, they proceeded to give Sentence, which they did with the most profound Gravity and Silence; hence Ἀρεοπαγίτες σιωπηλότεροι, and Ἀρεοπαγίτες σεγανώτεροι came to be proverbial Sayings; tho' some derive them from the Reservedness and severe Gravity of their Manners; whence also Ἀρεοπαγίτης is usually taken for a grave, majestick, rigid Person; and others, from the great Care they took to conceal the Transactions of the Senate, of which the Poet speaks, Ergo occulta tegetes, ut Curia Martis Athenis (a).

The Manner of giving Sentence was thus; there were plac'd in the Courts two Urns, one of which was of Brass, and call'd ὀμίπεροθεν, from the Place it stood in; κύβητος, because the Votes cast it into it pronounc'd the Accusation valid; and θανάτου, because they decreed the Death of the Prisoner. The second Urn was of Wood, being plac'd behind the former; into it they, that acquitted the Prisoner, were to cast their Suffrages; for which Reason it was call'd ὁ ὕσερτος, or ὁ ὀπίσω, ὁ ἄκυρος, and ὁ ἐλέος (b). Afterwards the 30 Tyrants, having made themselves Masters of the City, order'd them to give their Voices in a Manner more publick and open, by casting their Calculi upon two Tables; the former of which contain'd the Suffrages which acquitted, the latter those which condemn'd the Prisoner: To the End that it might be known, which Way every Man gave his Voice, and how he stood affected to their Interest and Proceedings (c).

Besides the Crimes that came peculiarly under their Cognizance, there were sometimes others brought before them, in which their Sentence was not final or decretory, for there lay an Appeal to the Courts to which they properly belong'd, as Sigonius observes.

The Senators of Areopagus were never rewarded with Crowns for their Services, being not permitted to wear them (d); but receiv'd a Sort of Maintenance from the Publick, which they call'd Κρέας (e); and Meursius has observ'd out of Lucian (f), that they had the same Pension that was allotted to some other Judges, viz. three Oboli for every Cause they gave Judgment upon.

Their Authority was preserv'd entire, till the Time of Pericles, who, because he could not be admitted amongst them, as never having borne the Office of an Archon, employ'd all his Power and Cunning against them; and, having gain'd a great Interest with the Commonalty, so embroil'd and routed their Senate by the Assistance of Ephialtes, that most of the Causes and Matters, which had been formerly tried there, were discharg'd from their Cognizance (g). From this Time the Athenians, being, in a great Measure, freed from the Restraint that had been laid upon them, began sensibly to degenerate from their ancient Virtue, and in a short Time let loose the Reins to all Manner of Licentiousness (h); whence they are compar'd by Plutarch to a wild unruly Horse, that, having flung his Rider, would be govern'd and kept in no longer. The same Vices and Excesses, that were practis'd in the City, crept in by Degrees among the Areopagites themselves: and therefore Demetrius, one of the Family of the Phalerean, being censur'd by them as a loose Liver, told them plainly that, if they design'd to make a Reformation in the City, they must begin at Home, for that even amongst them there were several Persons of as bad, and worse Lives, than himself, and, which was a more unpardonable Crime, than any that he had been guilty of, several, that debauch'd and corrupted other Mens Wives, and were themselves corrupted and seduc'd by Bribes*.

Of some other Courts of Justice.

SOLON intending to make the Athenians a free People, and wisely considering that nothing would more conduce to secure the Commonalty from the Oppression of the Nobility, than to make them final Judges of Right and Wrong; enacted, that the nine Archons, who till that Time had been the supreme and last Judges in most Causes, should thence have little farther Power than to examine the Causes brought before them, which they were oblig'd to refer to the Determination of other Judges in the several Courts hereafter to be mention'd.

The Judges were chosen out of the Citizens without Distinction of Quality, the very meanest being by Solon admitted to give their Voices in the popular Assembly, and to determine Causes, provided they were arriv'd at the Age of thirty Years, and had never been convicted of any notorious Crime.

The Courts of Justice were ten, beside that in Areopagus. Four had Cognizance ἐπὶ τῶν φονικῶν πραγμάτων, of Actions concerning Blood. The remaining six ἐπὶ τῶν δημοτικῶν, of Civil Matters. These ten Courts were all painted with Colours, from which Names were given them; whence we read of Βατραχιῶν, Φοινικῶν, and others. And on each of them was engraven one of the ten following Letters, A, B, Γ, Δ, Ε, Ζ, Η, Θ, Ι, Κ: Whence they are likewise call'd Alpha, Beta, &c. Such therefore of the Athenians, as were at Leisure to hear and determine Causes deliver'd in their Names, together with the Names of their Father and Borough inscrib'd upon a Tablet, to the Thesmothetæ: who return'd it to them with another Tablet, whereon was inscrib'd the Letter of one of the Courts, as the Lots had directed. These Tablets they carried to the Crier of the several Courts, signify'd by the Letters, who thereupon gave to every Man a Tablet inscrib'd with his own Name, and the Name of the Court, which fell to his Lot, and a Staff or Scepter. Having receiv'd these, they were all admitted to sit in the Court (i). If any Person sat among the Judges, who had not obtain'd one of the foremention'd Letters, he was fin'd. It may not be improper to mention in this Place, that σκῆπτρον, the Scepter, or Staff, was always the Ensign of Judicial and Sovereign Power:

* Athenæus Δειπνοσοφ. (i) Aristophanis Scholiastes in Pluto.

whence in Homer it is accounted sacred, and the most solemn Oaths are sworn by it :

Ἄλλ' ἔκ τοι ἔρέω, καὶ ὅτι μέγαν ὄρκον ὀμῶμαι,
 Ναὶ μὰ τὸδε σκῆπτρον, τὸ μὲν ἔπολε φύλλα καὶ ὄζυς

But this I do with solemn Oath declare,
 An Oath, which I'll by this same Scepter swear,
 Which in the Wood hath left its native Root,
 And sapless ne'er shall boast a tender Shoot,
 Since from its Sides relentless Steel has torn
 The Bark, but now by Grecian Chiefs is born, Chiefs that maintain the Laws of mighty Jove,
 Committed to their Charge. ———

Mr. Hugh Hutchin, of Linc. Coll.

Sometimes we find the Scepters of Kings, and great Persons adorn'd with Studs of Silver, or Gold :

——— Ποτὶ δ' ἐ σκῆπτρον βάλε γαίῃ Χρυσείοις ἦλοισι πεπαρμύρον ——— (λ).

——— He cast his Scepter on the Ground
 Emboss'd with Studs of Gold. ———

To return, the Athenian Judges, having heard the Causes they were appointed to take Cognizance of, went immediately and deliver'd back the Scepter to the Prytanes, from whom they receiv'd the Reward due to them. This was term'd δικασικόν (m), or μισθὸς δικασικός. Sometimes it was an Obolus for every Cause they decided ; sometimes three Oboli, being sometimes rais'd higher than at others, by the Instance of Men, who endeavour'd by that Means to become popular (n). No Man was permitted to sit as Judge in two Courts upon the same Day (o), that looking like the Effect of Covetousness. And if any of the Judges was convicted of Bribery, he was fin'd (p).

Ἐπὶ Παλλάδιῳ was a Court of Judicature instituted in the Reign of Demophoon, the Son of Theseus, upon this Account ; some of the Argives under the Conduct of Diomedes, or, as others say, of Agamemnon, being driven in the Night upon the Coasts of Attica, landed at the Haven of Phalerus, and, supposing it to be an Enemy's Country, went out to spoil and plunder it. The Athenians presently took the Alarm, and having united themselves into one Body, under the Conduct of Demophoon, repuls'd the Invaders with great Loss, killing a great many of them upon the Place, and forcing the rest to retire into their Ships; but, upon the Approach of Day, Acamas, the Brother of Demophoon, finding amongst the dead Bodies the Palladium, or Statue of Minerva brought from Troy, discover'd that the Persons they had kill'd were their Friends and Allies; whereupon (having first advis'd with an Oracle) they gave them an honourable Burial in the Place where they were slain, consecrated the Goddess's Statue, erected in a Temple to her, and intituted a Court of Justice, in which Cognizance was taken of such as were indicted for involuntary Murders. The first, that was arraign'd in it, was Demophoon, who, in his Return from the fore-mention'd Conflict, kill'd one of his own Subjects by a sudden Turn of his Horse. Others report, that Agamemnon being enrag'd at the Loss of his Men, and dissatisfied at Demophoon's rash and hasty Attempt upon them, referr'd the Quarrel to the Decision of fifty Athenians, and as many Argians, whom they call'd Ἐρέται, διὰ τὸ παρ' ἀμοιβῶν ἐφεσθῆναι αὐτῆς τὰ τῆς κείσεως, because both Parties committed the Determination of their Cause to them.

Afterwards, the Argians were excluded, and the Number of the Ephetae reduc'd to fifty one by Draco, whom some affirm to have been the first Institutor of them; but others, with more Probability, report, that he regulated and reform'd them, augmented their Power, honour'd them with many important Privileges, and made them superior to the Senate of Areopagus. In this State they continu'd till Solon's Time, by whom their Power was lessen'd, and their Authority restrain'd; the Causes, which had formerly been try'd by them, were discharg'd from their Cognizance, and only those about Man-slaughter, and Chance-medley, and, as some say, Conspiracies against the Lives of the Citizens, that were discover'd before they took Effect, left to them.

Fifty of them were appointed by Election, five being chose out of every Tribe; but the odd Man was appointed by Lots; all of them were Men of good Characters, and virtuous Lives, of severe Manners, and a settled Gravity, and no Person under the Age of fifty Years was admitted into their Number.

Causes were entered in this Court by the Βασιλεὺς, and the Proceedings were in some things agreeable to those of the Areopagus, for both Parties, the Plaintiff and Defendant, were oblig'd to confirm their Allegations by solemn Oaths and Curses, and then, the Orators having perform'd their Parts, the Judges proceeded to give Sentence (q).

Ἐπι Δελφίνῳ was a Court of Justice in the Temple of Apollo Delphinus, and Diana Delphinia. Under its Cognizance came all Murders wherein the Prisoner confess'd the Fact, but pleaded that it was committed by Permission of the Laws, as in the Case of Self-preservation, or Adultery, for it was allow'd any one to kill an Adulterer, if he caught him in the Act (r). The first Person, that was try'd in this Court, was Theseus, who, in his Journey to Athens, had slain the Robbers that infested the Ways between Traxen and that Place; and afterwards the Sons of Pallas, that raised a Rebellion against him (f).

Επί Πρωτανείῳ, was a Court of Judicature, which had Cognizance of Murders committed by Things without Life, or Sense, as Stones, Iron, Timber, &c. which, if they kill'd a Man by Accident, or by the Direction of an unknown Hand, or of a Person that had escaped; had Judgment pass'd upon them in this Place, and were ordered to be cast out of the Territories of Athens by the Φυλοβασιλεῖς. This Court was as ancient as Erechtheus, and the first Thing, that was brought to Trial in it, was an Ax, wherewith one of Jupiter's Priests kill'd an Ox, (an Animal accounted very sacred in those Days) that had eaten one of the consecrated Cakes, and, as soon as they committed the Fact, secured himself by Flight (t). This Place also was the Common-Hall, in which publick Entertainments were made, and the sacred Lamp, that burn'd with a perpetual Fire, was kept by Widows, who, having passed the Years and Desires of Marriage, were devoted to the Mother of the Gods; which Lamp, as Plutarch, in the Life of Numa, tells us, was extinct under the Tyranny of Aristion; it was always managed with the same Rites and Ceremonies that were used at Rome, about the Vestal Fire, which, he saith, was ordained and instituted after the Pattern of this, and another holy Fire of the same Nature amongst the Delphinians.

Εν Φρεατσοῖ, Εν Φρεάτῳ, was seated upon the Sea-shore in the Pyræus, and receiv'd its Name ἀπὸ τοῦ φρέατος, because it stood in a Pit, and therefore Pollux calls it Εν Φρεάτει, or, as is more probable, from the Hero Phreatus. The Causes, heard in this Court, were such as concern'd Persons that had fled out of their own Country for Murder; or those that fled for involuntary Murder, and had afterwards committed a wilful and deliberate Murder. The first Person that was tried in this Place, was Teucer, who, as Lycophron, reports, was banish'd out of Salamis by his Father Telamon, upon a groundless Suspicion, that he had been accessary to Ajax's Death. The Criminal was not permitted to come to Land, or so much as to cast Anchor, but pleaded his Cause in his Bark, and, if found guilty, was committed to the Mercy of the Winds and Waves; or, as some say, suffered there condign Punishment; if innocent, was only clear'd of the second Fact, and (as 'twas customary) underwent a Twelve-month's Banishment for the former (u).

And thus much may suffice concerning the Courts for capital Offences; it remains that I give you an Account of those, which had the Cognizance of Civil Affairs.

C H A P. XXI.

Of some other Courts of Justice, their Judicial Process, &c.

Παράβυσον, was either so call'd, as being a Court of no great Credit or Reputation, having Cognizance only of trivial Matters, whose Value was not above one Drachm; or because it was situate ἐν ἀφανῇ τόπῳ τῆς πόλεως in an obscure Part of the City. Pollux reports, there were two Courts of this Name, one of which was called Παράβυσον μείζον, and the other Παράβυσον μέσον. The Persons, that sat as Judges in the latter of these, were the 11 Magistrates, call'd οἱ Ἐνδεκά (τω). On which Account, it is, by some, not placed among the ten Courts, the Commons of Athens being all permitted to judge in them; and instead hereof, another Court is reckon'd into the ten, called Τὸ Καυδόν, the new Court, which is mentioned by Aristophanes * :

— Ο δ' αὐτῷ τυμπάνῳ
Αἴξας, ἐδίκαζεν εἰς τὸ Καυδόν ἐμπεσών.

Τεῖσιγον, was, in all Probability, so call'd, because it was triangular (x).

Τὸ ἐπὶ Λύκῃ, received its Name from the Temple of the Hero Lycus, in which it was erected. The same Person had a Statue in all the Courts of Justice, by which he was represented with a Wolf's Face, and therefore Λύκῃ δεκάς, signifies Sycophants, and τῶς δώροδοκῆνίας, those who took Bribes, who, by Tens, that is, in great Numbers, frequented those Places (y).

Τὸ Μητίχῃ, was called from one Metichus, an Architect, by whom it was built (z).

The Judges in all these Courts were obliged to take a solemn Oath, by the Paternal Apollo, Ceres, and Jupiter the King, that they would give Sentence uprightly, and according to Law, if the Law had determin'd the Point debated; or, where the Law was silent, according to the best of their Judgments. Which Oath, as also that which was taken by those that judged in the Helicea, was given in a Place near the River Ilissus, called Ardeus, from a Hero of that Name, who, in a publick Sedition, united the contesting Parties, and engaged them to confirm their Treaties of Peace by mutual Oaths in this Place. Hence common and prophane Swearers came to be call'd Ἄρδητῆροι (a).

Of all the Judicial Courts that handled Civil Affairs, Ἡλιαία was far the greatest, and most frequented, being so call'd ἐπὶ τῷ ἀλίζεαθ, from the People's thronging together (b), or rather ἐπὶ τῷ Ἡλίῳ, because it was an open Place, and expos'd to the Sun (c).

The Judges, that sat in this Court, were at least fifty, but the more usual Number was two or five hundred. When Causes of great Consequence were to be try'd, it was customary to call in all the Judges of other Courts. Sometimes a thousand were call'd in, and then two Courts are said to have been join'd : Sometimes fifteen hundred or two thousand, and then three or four Courts met together (a). Whence it appears, that the Judges were sometimes five hundred in other Courts.

They had Cognizance of civil Affairs of the greatest Weight and Importance, and were not permitted to give Judgment till they had taken a solemn Oath, the Form whereof was this, as we find it in Demosthenes (b); "I will give Sentence according to the Laws, and the Decrees of the People of Athens, and the Council of five hundred; I will not consent to place the supreme Power in the Hands of a single Person or a few; nor permit any Man to dissolve the Commonwealth, or so much as to give his Vote, or make an Oration in Defence of such a Revolution: I will not endeavour to discharge private Debts, nor to make any Division of Lands or Houses: I will not restore Persons sent into Banishment, nor pardon those that are condemn'd to die, nor expel any Man out of the City, contrary to the Laws and Decrees of the People, and Council of five hundred, nor permit any other Person to do it. I will not elect any Person into any publick Employ, and particularly I will not create any Man Archon, Hieromnemon, Ambassador, publick Herald, or Synedruss, nor consent that he shall be admitted into any of those Offices, which are elected by Lots upon the same Day with the Archons, who has undergone any former Office, and not given in his Accounts; nor that any Person shall bear two Offices, or be twice elected into the same Office in one Year. I will not receive Gifts myself, nor shall any other for me; nor will I permit any other Person to do the like by any Means, whether direct or indirect, to pervert Justice in the Court of Heliæa. I am not under thirty Years of Age. I will hear both the Plaintiff and Defendant without Partiality, and give Sentence in all the Causes brought before me. I swear by Jupiter, Neptune, and Ceres, if I violate this Oath, or any Part of it, may I perish with my whole Family; but, if I religiously observe it, may we live and prosper."

These were the ten publick Courts at Athens. There were others of less Note, where particular Magistrates, or the Διαιτηταί, or the Τεσσαράκοντα, took Cognizance of Causes belonging to their several Offices; such were the Courts at Cynofsarges, Odeum, Theseus's Temple, Bucoleum, and some others.

The Method of judicial Process was thus: First of all, the Plaintiff deliver'd in the Name of the Person against whom he brought his Action, together with an Account of his Offence, to the Magistrate, whose Concern it was (εισαγγεῖν) to introduce it into the Court, where Causes of that Nature were heard. The Magistrate then examin'd, whether the Cause was one of those which belong'd to his Cognizance,

(a) Pollux, lib. VIII, cap. 10, Harpocrat. Stephan. Byzantin. v. Ηλίαα.

(b) Orat. in Timocrat.

and then εἰσάγειν χρή whether it be deserv'd to be try'd in a Court of Justice? This Enquiry was term'd ἀνάκρισις. Then by the Magistrates Permission, the Plaintiff summon'd his Adversary to appear before the Magistrate, which was term'd κλητεύειν (c). This was sometimes done by Apparitors or Bailiffs, whom they call'd κλήτορες, or κληῖτες (d); sometimes by the Plaintiff himself, who always carry'd with him sufficient Witnesses to attest the giving of the Summons, and these were also term'd κλήτορες or κληῖτες (e). An Example of this Method we find in the Vespa of Aristophanes (f);

———— Περσκαλῆμαί σ' ὅσις εἶ,
Πρὸς τὸς Αγορανόμους ἐλάδης τῶν φορτίων,
Κληῖτῆς ἔχουσα Χαιρεζῶντα τέλονι.

I summon thee, whosoever thou art, to answer before the Agoranomi for the Damage done to my Goods; this Chærephon is Witness. This therefore was the Form, in which the Plaintiff himself summon'd his Adversary: Περσκαλῆμαί τὸν δῆνα τῶδε ἀδικήματι πρὸς τὴν Ἀρχὴν ἵνυγε, κληῖτες ἔχων τὸν δῆνα. I summon such a Person to answer for this Injury before this Magistrate, having such a one for my Witness (g). When the Plaintiff employ'd an Apparitor, the Form was thus vary'd; Καθηγορῶ τὸν δῆνα τῶδε, καὶ Προσκαλῆμαι τέλον, διὰ τῶ δῆν εἰς τὴν Ἀρχὴν ἵνυδε, I accuse such a Person of this Injury, and summon him by such an one to answer before this Magistrate. For it was necessary to mention the Name of the κληῖτῆς in the Summons. Lastly, When a marry'd Woman was cited to appear before a Magistrate, her Husband was also summon'd in this Form, Τὴν δῆνα καὶ τὸν Κύριον, Such a Woman and her Lord, &c. because Wives, being under the Government of their Husbands, were not permitted to appear in any Court without them. If the Criminal refus'd to appear before the Magistrate, he was carried thither by force. Whence the following Dialogue in Terence's Phormio (h).

Sometimes the Criminal was not summon'd to appear immediately, but upon a certain Day, which was always mention'd in the Form of his Citation. This Custom is mention'd by Aristophanes (i).

I summon Pifsthetærus to answer the next Month of Munychion for the Injury done me. When the Plaintiff and Defendant were both come before the Magistrate, he enquir'd of the Plaintiff, whether all his Evidence was ready, or whether he needed any other Witnesses to be summon'd? This was the second ἀνόκεισις, to which the Plaintiff was oblig'd to offer himself under the Penalty of (ἀ)λιμία Infamy. If any of his Witnesses were not ready, or any other Necessaries were wanting, he desir'd farther Time to make his Prosecution, swearing, that this Delay was not on his Part voluntary; to do which was term'd ἑορμυδαί, and the Thing itself Προμοσία (k). The same Excuse was likewise admitted in Behalf of the Defendant, who had also another Plea term'd παραστρατή, or παραμαρτυρία, when he alledg'd by sufficient Witnesses, that the Action brought against him was not δίκηνέσα γάγλιμϑ, a Cause which could then lawfully be try'd: Which happen'd on several Accounts; When the Injury had been committed five Years before the Accusation; for, that Time being expir'd, the Laws permitted no Action to be preferr'd. When the Controversy had been formerly compos'd before credible Witnesses. For any voluntary Agreement before Witnesses was valid, provided it was not about Things unlawful. When the Defendant had been formerly either punish'd for, or legally try'd and acquitted of the Fact. Lastly, It was a just Exception, that the Cause was not one of those, whereof that Magistrate was impower'd to take Cognizance. To this παραστρατή, the Plaintiff was oblig'd to give his Answer prov'd by sufficient Evidence: And both the Exception and the Answer together, as sworn by the Witnesses, were term'd διαμαρτυρία (l). But if the Defendant, without alledging any Plea or Excuse, was willing to proceed to a speedy Trial, he was said εὐθυσδικεῖν, and the Trial was term'd εὐθυσδικία. Then an Oath was requir'd of both Parties. The Plaintiff swore, that he would ἀληθῆ καλῆγορεῖν, prefer no Accusation that was untrue; And if the Crime was of a publick Nature, he farther swore, that he would not be prevail'd with, either by Bribes or Promises, or any other Temptation, to desist from the Prosecution. The Defendant swore, ἀληθῆ ἀπολογίσειν, that his Answer should be just and true: Or ἢ δίκην, that he had not injur'd the Plaintiff. The Plaintiff's Oath was term'd προωμοσία, the Defendant's ἀνωμοσία, and, as some think, ἀνίστρατή, and both together δωμοσία. These Oaths, together with those of the Witnesses, and all other Matters relating to the Action, being wrote upon Tablets, were put into a Vessel term'd ἐχίνϑ, and deliver'd afterwards to the Judges (m).

This being done, the Magistrate proceeded to the Election of Judges, which was perform'd by Lots; and they upon the κνεία ἡμέρα, or appointed Day, came to the Tribunal and took their Places; the publick Crier having before commanded all those that had no Business, to depart, in these Words, Μέγιστε ἕξω. Then, to keep the Crowds from thronging in upon them, the Court was surrounded with a Rope, by the Command of the Magistrate, and Serjeants appointed to keep the Doors, which they call'd Κιρκλίδες, being the same with those which the Romans call'd Cancellatæ (n). Now lest any of the Judges should be wanting, Proclamation was made in this Manner, Εἴ τις Φύρασιν Ηλιασῆς, εἰσίτω, If any Judge be without Doors, let him enter; for if any Man came, after the Cause began to be discuss'd, he could not have Admission, as not being capable of giving Sentence, because he had not heard all that both Parties could say for themselves (o).

Then the Magistrate propos'd the Cause to the Judges, and gave them Power to determine it; the doing which they call'd εἰσαῖν τὴν δίκην εἰς τὸ δικαστήριον, the Cause itself Δίκη εἰσαγωγίμου, and the Person that enter'd it Εἰσαγωγεύς. For, by the Laws of Athens, there were certain Causes brought before several of the Magistrates, who had no Power to determine 'em by a final Decision, but were only to examine into the Matter, and, if it deserv'd to be heard in the Court, refer it to the Cognizance of the Judges appointed for that Purpose, upon a Day fix'd by himself; and this is what they call'd Ἡμερομία δικαστηρίων.

Then the Indictment was read by the publick Crier, in which were contain'd the Reasons of the Accusation, with an Account of the Injury said to be received, the Manner also of it, and the Damage suffer'd by the Plaintiff; the Heads of which the Judges took in Writing (p).

If the Person accus'd did not make his Appearance, Sentence was given against him without any farther Trouble, and this they call'd Ἐξ ἐρήμης καταδικαθῆναι and ἐρήμῳ ὀφλισκάνειν. But if, in the Space of ten Days, he came and presented himself, proving, that he had been detain'd by Sicknesh, or any other extraordinary and unavoidable Necessity, the former Sentence was disannull'd, and therefore this Proceeding they call'd Δίκη μὴ ἔσα. Then the Trial was to be brought on afresh within the Space of two Months by the Defendant, and this they call'd Ἀντίληξις, and the doing it ἀντίλαχῆν δίκην; but if he neglect-ed to have the Cause decided in that Time, the former Sentence was to stand good, and be put in Execution upon him (q). And hence appears the Reason for which they were always oblig'd to insert the Name of the Person, who was Witness to the Citation of the Criminal. But if any Man falsly pretended that his Adversary was legally cited, and could not produce any κλήτορες, who were present at the Citation, he was prosecuted by an Action term'd γραφὴ ψευδοκλητείας (r).

Before the Trial began, both Parties were oblig'd to deposit a certain Sum of Money, which they call'd Πρυτανεῖα, into the Hands of the Magistrate that enter'd their Cause into the Court, who, upon Failure of the Payment, immediately expung'd the Cause out of the Roll. If the Cause in Debate was concerning the Value of an hundred Drachms, or upwards, to a thousand, they deposited three Drachms; if its Value was more than a thousand, and not above ten thousand, they deposited thirty, which, after the Decision of the Cause, were divided among the Judges, and the Person that was cast was oblig'd, beside the Payment of other Charges, to restore the Money to his Adversary (s).

Παρακαταβολή, was a Sum of Money deposited by those that sued the Commonwealth for confiscated Goods, or any others that were claimed by the publick Exchequer, or by private Persons for the Inheritances of Heireses; the former deposited the fifth, the latter the tenth Part of the Estates contended for (t).

Παράστασις, was a Drachm deposited in Law-suits about small and private Matters, which were decided by the Διαιτησίαι (u).

Επωβολία, was a Fine laid upon those that could not prove the Indictment they had brought against their Adversaries; so call'd, because they were oblig'd to pay the sixth Part of the Value of the Thing they contended for, from ὀβολός, because out of every Drachm, they deposited one Obolus, which is the sixth Part of a Drachm (w). Some of these Sums were deposited in all Law-suits, a very few excepted, before the Trial could proceed.

Then the Witnesses were produc'd, and if any of them refus'd to make his Appearance, he was summon'd by a Serjeant, whom they call'd Κλητήρ, and, if he seem'd unwilling to be an Evidence, had three Things propos'd to him, viz. to swear the Fact; to abjure it, or deny that he was privy to it; or lastly, to pay a Mulct of a thousand Drachms. He that was fin'd for refusing the Oath, or that took it out of Fear, was said ἐκκλητεύεσθαι; he that was only summon'd, and took it voluntarily, κλητεύεσθαι (x). The Oath was taken at the Altar with all the Solemnity imaginable, to which End they erected Altars in all the Courts of Judicature.

The Persons that gave Evidence were to be Men of Credit, free-born, and disinterested; for no Man's Oath was taken in his own Cause, and such as by their ill Behaviour had forfeited their Privileges, and were ἄτιμοι, infamous, were not thought to deserve Belief; the Slaves were not permitted to have any Concern in publick Business, and therefore could not be Evidences, except they were examin'd upon the Rack, nor plead in any Court of Justice (y). Nevertheless the Testimony of the μέτοικοι and ἀπελεύθεροι, Sojourners and Freed-Men, seems to have been receiv'd in all Causes, except the διαμαρτυρία, in the Actions call'd ἀπερσασίς δίκαι, as the Grammarians inform us from Hyperides.

There were two Sorts of Evidences; the first of which they call'd Μαρτυρία, when the Person that swore was an Eye-witness of the Fact. The other Εκμαρτυρία, when the Juror receiv'd what he testify'd from another Person that had been an Eye-witness of it, but was at this Time either dead, or in a foreign Country, or detain'd by Sickness, or hinder'd by some other unavoidable Accident from making his Appearance; for, except in such Cases, the Allegations of absent Persons were never taken for lawful Evidence (z). The Witnesses were requir'd by the Laws to deliver their Testimony in Writing; whereby it became impossible to recede from what they had once sworn, and such as had borne false Witness were convicted with less Difficulty. But the Tablets of those Witnesses, who, upon a Citation before given, came from Home with an Intention to give their Testimonies, were different from the Tablets of such as casually came into the Court. The latter being only compos'd of Wax; and order'd in such a Manner, as gave the Witnesses Opportunity to make such Alterations in the Matter of his Evidence, as afterwards, upon better Considerations, appear'd to be necessary (a).

When the Witnesses were sworn, the Plaintiff being plac'd upon the left Hand of the Tribunal, and the Defendant on the Right (b), both of them spoke set Orations in their own Behalf. These were, for the most Part, compos'd by some of the Orators, which Custom was first introduced by Antiphon, a Rhannusian (c). Sometimes, if they desir'd it, the Judges granted them Συνήγοροι, or Advocates, to plead for them, the doing which they call'd ἐπιμίσθω συνηγορεῖν, to plead for a Fee (d). And lest by the Length of their Orations they should weary the Judges Patience, and hinder them from proceeding to other Business, they were limited to a certain Time, call'd διαμεμετηρημένη ἡμέρα (e), which was measur'd by a Κλέψυδρα, or Hour-glass, differing from ours in this, that, instead of Sand, they made use of Water; and to prevent all Fraud and Deceit, there was an Officer appointed to distribute the Water equally to both Sides, whom, from his Business, they call'd Ερῦδωρ, or Ερ' ὕδωρ. When the Glass was run out, they were permitted to speak no farther, and therefore we find them very careful, not to lose or mispend one Drop of their Water, and whilst the Laws quoted by them were reciting, or if any other Business happen'd to intervene, they gave Order that the Glass should be stopp'd (f). Yet if any Person had made an End of speaking, before the Time allotted him was expir'd, he was permitted to resign the remaining Part of his Water to any other that had Occasion, and this is meant by the Orator, when he saith, τῷ ὕδωτι τῷ ἐμῷ λάβτω, let him speak till what remains of my Water be run out.

When both Parties had made an End of speaking, the publick Crier, by the Command of the Magistrate that presidid in the Court, order'd the Judges to bring in their Verdict; and in such Cases as the Laws had made Provision, and appointed Penalties for, (which were call'd Αγῶνες ἀτιμῆσι) a single Verdict, whereby the Person was declar'd guilty, or, not guilty, was sufficient; but in those Cases that the Laws were silent in, (which they call'd Αγῶνες τιμητοί) a second Sentence was requir'd, if the accus'd Person was brought in guilty, to determine what Punishment was due to his Offence (g). And here before they proceeded to give Sentence, the condemn'd Person was ask'd, what Damage he thought his Adversary had receiv'd from him, and what Recompence he ought in Justice to make him? And the Plaintiff's Account, which, together with the Indictment he had deliver'd in before, was taken into Consideration; and then the Circumstances on both Sides being duly weigh'd, the decretory Sentence was given. Sometimes the Judges limited the Punishment in criminal, as well as civil Causes, where the Laws were silent. This happen'd in the Case of Socrates, "who, to " apply the Words of Cicero (h), was not only condemn'd by the first Sen-

The most ancient Way of giving Sentence, was by black and white
 Sea-shells, call’d Χοιρίναι; or Pebbles, call’d Ψῆφοι. Ovid has taken Notice of this Custom,

*Mos erat antiquis, niveis atrisque Lapillis,
 His damnare reos, illis absolvere culpa (i).*

Black and white Stones were us’d in Ages past,
 These to acquit the Pris’ner, - those to cast.

H. H.

After them, πρόνδοιοί, which were Pellets of Brass, came into Use; which, when laid aside, κύαμοι, or Beans, succeeded; they were of two Sorts, White and Black; the White were whole, and were made use of to absolve; the Black were bor’d through, and were the Instruments of Condemnation (k).

Hence it is, that in Aristophanes (l), Judges that liv’d upon the Gifts they receiv’d for doing Justice, are call’d Κυαμοτρώγες, Eaters of Beans; and λευκή Ψῆφος is a Proverb not much different from αἰὲς ἐραμία, or Amalthea capra, being usually apply’d to Things that bring in large Gains, and are a Maintenance to their Masters (m).

These Beans the Judges took from the Altar, and two Urns, which they call’d Κάδοι, or Καδίσκοι, being plac’d, they cast in their Beans through a little Tunnel call’d Κημὸς, holding them only with three Fingers, viz. the Fore-finger, Middle, and Thumb, that it might be impossible for them to cast in above one at a Time. The rest of their customary Rites are much what the same with those I have already described in the Judgments of the Court of Areopagus, except that in private Causes there were four Urns plac’d in the Court, as Sigonius has observ’d out of Demosthenes (n).

But this, perhaps, was occasion’d by the Number of the Persons concern’d in the Trial; for if there were more than two Competitors that laid Claim to an Estate, each of them had a distinct Urn, into which those, that pass’d Sentence on his Side, were to cast their Beans, and he that had the greatest Number obtain’d the Victory, which Sigonius seems not to have observ’d,

When all had given over Voting, lest any Man, out of Favour, should suspend his Suffrage, the Crier made Proclamation in this Manner, Εἰ τις ἀψήφισθῃ, ἀνιστάτω If there be any that has not given his Voice, let him now arise and give it.

Then the Urns were open'd, and the Suffrages number'd in Presence of the Magistrate, who stood with a Rod in his Hand, which he laid over the Beans as they were number'd, lest any Person should, thro' Treachery or Mistake, omit any of them, or count the same twice. If the Number of the black Beans were greatest, he pronounc'd the Person guilty; and, as a Mark to denote his Condemnation, drew a long Line, whence ἀπασι τιμᾶν μακρὰν, in the Comedian, signifies to condemn all; on the contrary, he drew a short Line in Token of Absolution, if the white Beans exceeded, or only equall'd the Number of the black(o); for such was the Clemency of the Athenian Laws, that, when the Case seem'd equally disputable on both Sides, the severe and rigorous Commands of Justice gave Place to the milder Laws of Mercy and Compassion; and this Rule seems to have been constantly observed in all the Courts of Athens. Euripides, to omit a great many others, has mention'd this Custom in several Places:

Ἴσαι δὲ σ' ἐπισώζουσι μὴ θανάην δίκη
 Ψῆφοι τεθεῖσαι· Λοξίας γὰρ αἰτίαν
 Εἰς αὐτὸν οἴσει, μητέρος· χρήσας φόνον.
 Καὶ τοῖσι λοιποῖς ὃ δὲ νόμος τεθήσεται,
 Νικᾶν ἴσας ψήφοισι τὸν φεύγονα αἰεὶ (p).

Courage, Orestes, if the Lots hit right;
 If the black Pebbles don't exceed the white,
 You're safe; and, since it awful Phæbus was
 The Parricide advis'd, your tottering Cause
 He'll on himself transfer; and hence shall be
 This Law transmitted to Posterity;
 That Lots, if equal, shall the Pris'ner free.

 H. H.

And again to the same Purpose in another Tragedy,

Γνώμης δικαίας ἕνεκ' ἐξέσωσα σε,
 Καὶ πρὶν γ' Ἀρείοις ἐν πάγοις ψήφους ἴσας
 Κεῖνασ', Ὀρέσα, καὶ νόμισμ' εἰς ταυτὸ γέ
 Νικᾶν, ἰσῆρεις ὅστις ἀν' ψήφους λάβη (q)

Since you with equal Suffrages I freed,
 When Justice ample Vengeance had decreed,
 And once before, when we debating fate
 At Areopagus on your dubious Fate,
 And there the dooming Sentence must have pass'd,
 Had I not you with equal Lots releas'd:
 On this Account shall After-Ages save
 Such Criminals, as equal Voices have.

(o) Aristophan. ejusque Schol. Ran. & Vespr. (p) Electra v. 1265. (q) Iphigenia Taurica v. 1469.

The Plaintiff was call'd Διώκων; the whole Suit Δίωξις; and the Defendant Φεύγων. The Indictment, before Conviction, was named Αἴτια; after Conviction Ἐλεγχῶ; and after Condemnation Ἀδίκημα. All the Time the Cause was in Suspense, and undetermin'd, it was expos'd to publick View, being engraved in a Tablet, together with the Name of the Person accused, and hung up at the Statue of the Heroes, firm'd Επάνωμοι, than which there was not a more publick Place in the whole City; this they call'd Εκκεῖσθαι (r), and it seems to have been done with a Design that all Persons, who could give any Information to the Court, having sufficient Notice of the Trial, should come and present themselves.

If the convicted Person was guilty of a capital Crime, he was deliver'd into the Hands of the Ἐνδεια, to receive the Punishment due to his Offence: But if a pecuniary Mulct was laid upon him, the Ταμίαι τῶ ὄρει took Care to see it paid; but in Case his Estate was not able to make Payment, they confin'd him to perpetual Imprisonment (f).

If, on the contrary, the Plaintiff had accused his Adversary unjustly, and produced false Evidence against him, he was in some Places oblig'd to undergo the Punishment due by Law to the Crime, of which he had falsely accused an innocent Person; but at Athens had only a Fine laid upon him. And both the Villain that had forsworn himself, and he that suborn'd him, were severely prosecuted; the former by an Action of Ψάδομαρτυρία, the latter of Κακοτεχνία. Of these, and the Punishment due to such Offenders, I shall speak farther in another Place.

When the Trials were over, the Judges went to Lycus's Temple, where they return'd their Πάβδοι, Staffs, or Scepters, which were Ensigns of their Office, and receiv'd from certain Officers, call'd Κωλακρέτῃ, a Piece of Money for their Service, which at the first was only one Obolus, afterwards it was increased to two, then to three, and at length to a Drachm, which was six Oboli, as we have before observed from the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (t). And tho' these Rewards may seem trifling and inconsiderable Expences, yet the troublesome Temper of the Athenians, and their nice Exaction of every little Duty, or Privilege, occasion'd so great a Number of Law-suits, that the frequent Payment of these small Sums by Degrees so exhausted the Exchequer, that they became a Burden to the Commonwealth, and are particularly reflected upon by Aristophanes (u), who takes Occasion every-where to ridicule this litigious Humour, which was then grown to such a Height, that every Corner of the Streets was pester'd with Swarms of turbulent Rascals, that made it their constant Business to pick up Stories, and catch at every Occasion to accuse Persons of Credit and Reputation; these they call'd Συκοφάνται, which Word sometimes signifies false Witnesses, but is more properly taken for what we call common Barretors, being derived ἀπὸ τῶ σῦκα φαίνειν, from indicting Persons that exported Figs; for amongst the primitive Athenians, when the Use of that Fruit was first found out, or in the Time of a Dearth, when all Sorts of Provisions were exceeding scarce, it was enacted, that no Figs should be exported out of Attica; and this Law not being actually repeal'd, when a plentiful Harvest had rendered it useleſs, by taking away its Reason, gave Occaſion to ill-natur'd and malicious Men, to accuſe all Perſons they caught tranſgreſſing the Letter of it; and from them all buſy Informers have ever ſince been branded with the Name of Sycophants (ω). Others will have the Stealing of Figs to have been prohibited by a particular Law, and that thence Informations grew ſo numerous, that all vexatious Informers were afterwards term'd Sycophants.

Of the Τεσσαράκοντα, and Διαιτηταί.

OΙ Τεσσαράκοντα, were forty Men, that went their Circuits round the ſeveral Boroughs, and had Cognizance of all Controverſies about Money, when the Sum exceeded not ten Drachms; alſo, as Demosthenes reports (x), had Actions of Assault and Battery brought to their Hearing. Pollux tells us, that, at their firſt Inſtitution, they were no more than thirty in Number; but Hefychius reports, the Magiſtrates or Judges call'd Οἱ Τεράκοντα, were thoſe that amerced the People for abſenting themſelves from the publick Aſſemblies.

Διαιτηταί, or Arbitrators, were of two Sorts.

1. Κληρώσι, were forty-four Men in each Tribe, above the Age of ſixty, as Pollux, or fifty, as Suidas reports, drawn by Lots, to determine Controverſies in their own Tribe about Money, when the Sum was above ten Drachms. Their Sentence was not final, ſo that, if either of the conteſting Parties thought himſelf injur'd by it, he might appeal to the ſuperior Court of Juſtice (y). At their firſt Inſtitution, all Cauſes whatſoever that exceeded ten Drachms were heard by them, before they could be received into the other Courts (z). They paſſ'd Sentence without obliging themſelves by any Oath, but in other Things acted in the ſame Manner with the reſt of the Judges; they received a Drachm of the Plaintiff, which was call'd Παράδοσις or Διάδοσις, and another of the Defendant when they adminiſtered the Oath to him, which was term'd ἀνλωμοσία. And in Caſe the Parties did not appear at the appointed Time and Place, they ſtaid expecting till the Evening, and then determin'd the Cauſe in Favour of the Party there preſent. Their Office continued a whole Year, at the End of which they gave up their Accounts, and if they were proved to have reſuſed to give Judgment, or to have been corrupted (a), they were puniſh'd with (ἀτιμία) Infamy. Under them were certain Officers call'd Εἰσαγωγῆς, whoſe Buſineſs it was, εἰσάγειν τὰς δίκας, to receive the Complaints that fell under the Cognizance of the Διαιτηταί, and enter them into their Court (b).

2. Διαλλακῆναι or κατ' ἐπιτροπὴν Διαιτηταί, or Compromissarii, were such as two Parties chose to determine any Controversy betwixt them; and these the Law permitted any Person to request, but obliged him to stand to whatever they determin'd without any farther Appeal; and therefore, as a greater Obligation to Justice, they took an Oath, that they would give Sentence without Partiality (c).

The Determination of the Διαιτηταί, was call'd Δίαιταί, and ἐπιτροπὴ, and to refer any Thing to them, δίασαν ἐπιτρέψαι (d).

C H A P. XXIII.

Of the Publick Judgments, Actions, &c.

THE Athenian Judgments were of two Sorts, δηματικά and ἰδιωτικά, Publick and private; the former were about such Crimes as tended to the Prejudice of the State, and these Actions were call'd Κατηφοίαι; the latter comprehended all Controversies that happen'd between private Persons, and were call'd Δίκαι (e). Nor did they only differ as to their Matter, but in their Process and Management, and particularly in this, that in private Actions no Man could prosecute the Offender, beside the Party injur'd, or some of his near Relations; whereas in the Publick, the Laws encouraged all the Citizens to revenge the publick Wrong, by bringing the Criminal to condign Punishment (f).

The publick Judgments were these.

1. Γραφή, was an Action laid upon such as had been guilty of any of the following Crimes (g).

Φόνος, Murder.

Τραῦμα ἐν παρονοίας, a Wound given out of Malice.

Πυρκαϊά, Firing the City.

Φάρμακον, Poison.

Βέλδσις, a Conspiracy against any Person's Life; or the Crime of the City-Treasurers, that enter'd into the publick Debt-book Persons not indebted to the City (h). Wherein it differs from ψευδέγγραφή, whereby the Treasurers charged Men with Debts, which were already discharged (i).

Ιεροσυλία, Sacrilege.

Ασέβεια, Impiety.

Πελοδοσία, Treason.

Εταιρησις, Fornication.

Μοιχεία, Whoredom; this was punish'd with a Μυλά (k).

Αγαμίον, Coelibacy.

Ασρατεία, Refusing to serve in the Wars. They, who were convicted of this Crime, were punish'd with ἀτιμία Infamy.

Λειπώσεταιιον, Desertion of the Army. This drew only a Fine on the Criminal (1).

Λειπώσεταιξιοιον, Desertion of a Man's Station, as when any Person refused to serve on Foot, and listed himself amongst the Horsemen, which by Solon's Laws was esteem'd as great a Crime as a total Desertion of the Army.

Δειλία, Cowardice. The convicted were punished with Infamy.

Λειπώνωτιον, Desertion of the Fleet. The Punishment was only a Fine.

Αναυμάχιον, Refusing to serve in the Fleet. The Punishment was (ἀτιμία) Infamy.

Τὸ ῥίψαι τὴν ἀσπίδα, Losing a Man's Shield. This was likewise punished with Infamy.

Ψεῦδος ἔγγραφη, Ψεῦδος ὁμογραφη, or Ψεῦδος ἐγγραφη, was the Crime of those that falsely charged others, and sued them for publick Debts, which Harpocration calls Ψεῦδοκλήσια; but this seems rather to have been an Action for false Arrests, according to Pollux. The Punishment was only a Mulct.

Συκοφαντία, Barretery or frivolous Accusation. This was punished also with a Mulct. It differ'd from Ψεῦδομαρτυρία, or false Witness, the third Act whereof was punish'd with (ἀτιμία) Infamy.

Δωροῦ or Δωροδοκία, taking Bribes to manage any publick Affair, or pervert Justice; it was not thought enough to punish the Receiver, but the Person also that offer'd Bribes was prosecuted, and the Action against him call'd Δεκασμός. The same Action, in Causes about Freedom of the City, was, by a peculiar Name, term'd Δωροξενία. All, who had been guilty of receiving Bribes, were fin'd ten Times the Value of what they had gain'd, and punish'd with the highest Degree of (ἀτιμία) Infamy.

Ἰβρις, Beating a Freeman, or binding him as they used to do Slaves.

Αγράριον, Erasing a Name out of the publick Debt-book, before the Debt was discharged.

Ἀγροπον μέγαλλον, Digging a Mine without acquainting the publick Officers; for, before any Person could dig a Mine, he was obliged to inform certain Officers appointed by the People, of his Design, to the End that the twenty-fourth Part of the Metal might be reserved for the publick Use.

Αλόγιον, was against Magistrates that had neglected to give up their Accounts.

Παρανόμων γραφή, against such as, proposing a new Law, acted contrary to the old and established Laws.

Εὐθύνη, was against Magistrates, Ambassadors, or other Officers that had mis-employ'd the publick Money, or committed any other Offence in the Discharge of their several Trusts. That against Ambassadors was sometimes, by a peculiar Name, call'd Παραπρεσβεία.

(1) Thucydidis Scholiastes loco citato.

Δοκιμασία, was a Probation of the Magistrates, and Persons employ'd in publick Busines.

Πεβολή, was an Action against Persons disaffected to the Government, and such as imposed upon the People; against Sycophants, and such as, at the Celebration of any Festival, had caused an Uproar, or committed any Thing undecent and unsuitable to the Solemnity.

Απογραφή, was when any Person, being sued for Debts said to be due to the Publick, pleaded that they were falsely charged upon him, withal producing all the Money he was possess'd of, and declaring by what Means it came into his Hands. Suidas adds, that Απογραφή is sometimes taken for an Action against such as neither paid the Fines laid upon them, before the ninth Prytanea following their Sentence, nor were able to give sufficient Security to the City.

1. Απόφασις, was sometimes the same with Απογραφή, as we learn from Suidas; but was also usually taken for the Account of Estates given at the Exchange of them for the avoiding of publick Employment. For when any Man would excuse himself from any troublesome and chargeable Trust, by casting it upon another richer than himself, the Person produc'd by him had Power to challenge him to make an Exchange of Estates, and thereby compel him to serve the Office he had before refus'd.

2. Φάσις, was commonly taken for the Discovery of any hidden and conceal'd Injury, but more peculiarly signified an Action laid against such as exported Corn out of Attica, embezzled the publick Revenues, and converted them to their own private Use, or appropriated to themselves any of the Lands, or other Things that of Right belong'd to the Commonwealth. It is sometimes taken for an Action against those that were Guardians to Orphans, and either wholly neglected to provide Tenants for their Houses and Lands, or let them at too easy a Rate.

3. Ἐνδειξις, was against such as committed any Action, or affected any Place of which they were incapable by Law; as, when a Person disfranchis'd, or indebted to the Publick, sued for Offices in the State, or took upon him to determine Controversies in a judicial Way. Also against those that confess'd the Crimes laid to their Charge, without standing the Trial.

4. Απασγωγή, was the carrying a Criminal taken in the Fact, to the Magistrate. If the Accuser was not able to bring him to the Magistrate, it was usual to take the Magistrate along with him to the House where the Criminal lay conceal'd, or defended himself, and this they call'd Ερησιεύς, and the Action Ερήσισις.

5. Ανδραπήφειον or Ανδραπήφια, was an Action against such as protected Persons guilty of Murder, by which the Relations of the deceased were empowered to seize three Men in the City or House, whither the Malefactor had fled, till he were either surrendered, or Satisfaction made some other Way for the Murder.

6. Εισαγγελία, was of three Sorts; the first was about great and publick Offences, whereby the State was brought into Danger; such Actions were not refer'd to any Court of Justice, but immediately brought before the Senate of five hundred, or the popular Assembly, before whom it was introduced by the Thesmothetæ at the first Convention in the

Prytanea,

Prytanea, where the Delinquent was severely punish'd, but the Plaintiff underwent no Danger, altho' he could not prove his Indictment, except he fail'd of having the fifth Part of the Suffrages, and then he was fin'd a thousand Drachms. The second Sort of Εἰσαγγελία, was an Action of Κάκωσις, of which I shall speak in another Place: it was brought before the Archon, to whom the Plaintiff gave in his Accusation, but was not liable to have any Fine laid upon him, tho' Sentence was given against him. The third was an Action against the Δικαιηταί, prefer'd by Persons that thought themselves unjustly dealt with by them, who ran the Hazard of being disfranchis'd, and forfeiting their Freedom, if they were not able to make good their Accusation. Indeed in all the foremention'd Accusations, the Εἰσαγγελία only excepted, this Penalty, together with a Fine of a thousand Drachms, was inflict'd upon the Plaintiff, if he had not the fifth Part of the Suffrages.

C H A P. XXIV.

Of the Private Judgments, Actions, &c.

A Δίκης Δίκη, an Action κατὰ τῶν ὁπωσῶν ἀδικούντων, against such as had done any Sort of Injury (m). A Fine was laid on the Delinquent, which was to be doubled, if not paid within the Prytanea (n).

Κακησοείας Δίκη, was an Action of Slander, by which the Criminal was fin'd five hundred Drachms.

Αἰκίας Δίκη, was an Action of Battery, in which Case there was no set Penalty inflict'd by the Laws, but the Judges took an Account of the Damages suffer'd by the Plaintiff, and compell'd the Delinquent to make sufficient Retribution.

Βιαιῶν, or Βίας Δίκη, was an Action against such as ravish'd Women, or had used Violence towards any Man's Person.

Βλάβης Δίκη, was an Action of Trespass, being against those that had endamaged another Man's Estate, Lands, Houses, Cloaths, &c.

Κακώσεως Δίκη, γραφῆ, or εἰσαγγελία, was an Action entered by Heiresses against their Husbands, by Parents against their Children and Orphans against their Guardians, when they were ill used, or injured by them.

Αποπομπῆς Δίκη, was an Action of Divorce, when the Husband had put away his Wife. On the contrary, when the Woman fled from her Husband, the Action was call'd Απολείψεως Δίκη.

Κλοπῆς Δίκη, was against Thieves. Demosthenes (o), reports, that if any Man had stolen above fifty Drachms in the Day-time, he was to be indicted at the Tribunal of the Eleven. But if any Theft was committed in the Night, it was lawful to kill the Criminal, if he was caught in the Fact, or to pursue him, and if he made any Resistance to wound him, and so hale him to the Eleven, and this Action was term'd ἐπασωγή. He was not permitted to give Security for Restitution, but suffer'd Death.

(m) Etymologici Anctor.

(o) Timocratea.

If any Person surreptitiously convey'd any Thing of the smallest Value out of the Lyceum, Academy, Cynosarges, or any of the Gymnasia, or out of Havens above the Value of ten Drachms, he was adjudg'd to die. If any Man was convicted of Theft from a private Person, he was to make Retribution to the Person he had injur'd, by paying him double the Value of what he had depriv'd him of; nor was this Punishment alone thought sufficient to expiate his Offence, but it lay in the Judges Power to keep him in Bonds five Days, and as many Nights, and expose him in that Condition to the View of all the People. And we are farther inform'd by Andocides (p), that (ἀτιμία) Infamy was the Punishment of this Crime.

Παρακαταθήκης Δίκη, was against such as refused to restore any Thing committed to their Charge.

Χρέως Δίκη, was a Suit betwixt Debtors and Usurers.

Συμβολαίων Δίκη, was an Action against those that would not stand to their Contracts or Bargains. Not much different from this was Σωθηκῶν Δίκη, only Συμβόλαια are distinguish'd from Σωθηκῶν in this, that these chiefly imply private Contracts about the Loan of Money, Division of Inheritances, and References to the Διαίτηται, whereas the other are extended as well to publick Negotiations between publick Bodies, as to Bargains made by private Persons. Others there are, that acknowledge no-such Difference betwixt them.

Εἰς δασητῶν αἴρεσιν Δίκη, was an Action against such Persons as would not consent to make a Division of Goods or Estates, wherein other Men were Sharers with them.

Διαδικασίας Δίκη, was an Action περὶ χρημάτων ἢ περὶ κλημάτων concerning Money or Possessions, as it is defin'd by Ulpian (q), and seems to be a Term of equal Extent with ἀμφοιβήτησις, or κείσις, which are general Names for all Law-suits. But it was sometimes taken in a more limited Sense, for the Controversies of those, who being appointed to undergo some of the publick Duties (λειτεργίαι), excused themselves by informing against others more wealthy, as has been elsewhere shewn.

Επίδικασίας Δίκη, when Daughters inherited the Estates of their Parents, they were obliged by Law to marry their nearest Relation. This was the Occasion of this Suit, which was commenced by Persons of the same Family, each of which pretended to be more nearly ally'd to the Heirefs than the rest. The Virgin, about whom the Relations contested, was call'd Επίδικος. Επικληρος was a Daughter, that had no Brothers lawfully begotten, and therefore inherited her Father's whole Estate. Ἐπίφροικος was one that had Brothers, and shar'd the Estate with them.

Ἀμφοιβήτησις, was a Suit commenced by one that made Pretensions to the Estate of a deceased Person, as being his Son either by Nature or Adoption. This Term is sometimes taken in a larger Sense.

Παρακαταβολή, was an Action enter'd by the Relations of the deceased, whereby they claim'd a Right to his Estate, as belonging to them by reason of their Consanguinity, or bequeathed by Will. It was so call'd ἀποτὸ παρακαταβάλλειν, because the Plaintiff deposited the tenth

(p) De Myseriis.(q) In Timocrateum.

Part of the Inheritance, if the Cause was private, and the fifth, if it was a publick Estate he contended for; this he was to forfeit if he could not make his Plea good.

Αντιγροφή, was a Law-suit about Kindred, whereby any Person claim'd a Relation to such or such a Family, and therefore it seems to have been of the same Nature with Παρακαταβολή.

Διαμαρτυρία, was a Protestation that the deceased Person had left an Heir, made to hinder the Relations from entring upon the Estate.

Επίσημις, was an Action whereby the Διαμαρτυρία was proved be false and groundless.

Ενεπίσημημα, was when any Person claim'd some Part of another Man's Goods, which he confiscated, and sold by Auction.

Σίτη δίκη, when a Husband divorced his Wife, the Law obliged him to restore her Portion; or, in Case he refused that, to pay her for each Pound nine Oboli every Month, upon Failure of which, he was liable to have his Action enter'd against him in the Odeum by his Wife's Επίτροπος, or Guardian, whereby he was forced to allow her a separate Maintenance.

Μισθώσεως οίκου, &c. δίκη, sometimes call'd Φάσις, was an Action against Guardians that were negligent in the Management of the Affairs of their Pupils, and either let out their Houses or Estates at too small a Price, or suffer'd them to lie void of Tenants. When any House was vacant, it was customary to signify so much by fixing an Inscription upon the Door, or other Part of it, as appears from these Words of Terence,

————— Inscripti illico
Ædes mercede (r) —————
 Over the Door I wrote,
 This House is to be let.

Επιτροπής δίκη, was an Action against Guardians that had defrauded their Pupils. It was to be commenced within five Years after the Pupil was come to Age, otherwise it was of no Force.

Ενοικίε δίκη, when any Man laid Claim to an House, he enter'd an Action against the Person that inhabited it, whereby he demanded the Rent of the House. If he claim'd an Estate of Land, the Action was call'd Καρπῶς δίκη, or Χωρεῖς δίκη, because the Fruits of the Ground were demanded. If the Plaintiff cast his Adversary in either of the former Suits, he enter'd a second Action against him, whereby he laid claim to the House or Land, as being Part of his Estate, for which Reason it was call'd Ούσιας δίκη. After this, if the Person in Possession continu'd obstinate, and would not deliver up the Estate to the lawful Owner, there was a third Action commenced, which was nam'd Εξέλις δίκη, from ἐξέλλω, to reject; because the Plaintiff was ἐξελλέμενος, rejected, or hinder'd from entring upon his Estate. The same Term was used when any other Thing was unjustly detain'd from its Owner, ὡσεὶ ἀνδραπόδου καὶ παντός, ἔφησ' τις αὐτῷ μετεῖναι concerning a Slave, and every other Thing which any Person calls his own; as we are inform'd by Suidas.

Βεβαιώσεως δίκη, was an Action whereby the Buyer compell'd the Seller to confirm, or stand to the Bargains, which he before had given a Pledge to ratify.

Εἰς ἐμφανῶν καλῶσασι δίκη, was design'd as an Enquiry about something that was conceal'd, as about stolen Goods.

Ἐξαιρέσεως δίκη, was against a Freeman that endeavour'd to give a Slave his Liberty, without his Master's Consent.

Ἀπερρασίε δίκη, was an Action against Sojourners that neglected to choose a Patron, of which Custom I have spoken in another Place.

Ἀποσασίε δίκη, was an Action commenced by a Master, or Patron, against his Clients, such as were the freed Slaves, when they refused to perform those Services, they were bound to pay to him.

Ἀφορμῆς δίκη, was a Suit about Money put into the Banker's Hands, which the ancient Athenians call'd Ἀφορμή, and the modern Ενθήκη.

Ἀρεσις, was when a Person, deeply indebted, desired the People to remit Part of his Debt, upon Pretence that he was unable to make Payment.

Ψευδομαρτυριῶν δίκη, was against false Witnesses.

Κακοῦχευιῶν δίκη, was against those that suborn'd false Witnesses.

Λεπτομαρτυρεῖε δίκη, was against such as, having promised to give Evidence in a Cause, disappointed the Person that rely'd upon them.

Several other Judgments we meet with in ancient Authors, some of which I have already spoken of in other Places, and the Names of the rest are so well known, that I need not give you any Explication of them; such were Βολίτε δίκη, Ἀχαιεΐας δίκη, and some others (f).

C H A P. XXV.

Of the Athenian Punishments and Rewards.

THE most common and remarkable Punishments inflicted at Athens, on Malefactors, were these:

Ζημία which, tho' sometimes it be used, in a large and general Sense, for any Punishments, yet has often a more limited and restrained Signification, being taken for a pecuniary Multa or Fine, laid upon the Criminal, according to the Merit of his Offence.

Ατιμία, Infamy, or publick Disgrace. Of this there were three Degrees. 1. When the Criminal retain'd his Possessions, but was deprived of some Privilege, which was enjoy'd by other Citizens. Thus, under the Reigns of Tyrants, some were commanded to depart out of the City, others forbidden to make an Oration to the People, to sail to Ionia, or to some other particular Country. 2. When he was for the present deprived of the Privileges of free Citizens, and had his Goods confiscated. This happen'd to those who were indebted to the publick Exchequer, till their Debts were discharged. 3. When the Criminal, with all his Children and Posterity, were for ever deprived of all Rights of free Citizens, both sacred and civil. This was inflicted on such as had been convicted of Theft, Perjury, or other notorious Villainies (*). Out of these Men, the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (†) tells us, they appointed whom they pleased to labour at the Oars; to which Drudgery, Plutarch reports, it was usual also to put their Prisoners of War (u).

Δουλεία, Servitude, was a Punishment by which the Criminal was reduced into the Condition of a Slave. It was never inflicted on any besides the Ἀτιμοί, Sojourners and freed Servants, because it was forbidden by one of Solon's Laws, that any free-born Citizen should be treated as a Slave.

Μτίγματα, was a Severity seldom exercised upon any but Slaves, or some very notorious Malefactors, of which I have spoken more at large in another Place.

Μτήλη, was, as the Word imports, a Pillar, wherein was engraven, in legible Characters, an Account of the Offender's Crime. The Persons, thus exposed to the Laughter and Reproaches of the People, were call'd Στυλίται. Hence σηλιττικὸς λόγος is taken for any Invective or defamatory Oration.

Δεσμὸς, was a Punishment by which the Criminal was condemn'd to Imprisonment or Fetters. "The Prison was call'd by a lenitive Name Οἰκημα, or House; for the Athenians used to mitigate and take off "from the Badness of Things, by giving them good and innocent Appellations; as, a Whore, they would call a Mistress; Taxes, Rates; Garrisons, Guards; and this (saith Plutarch) seem'd at first to be Solon's Contrivance, who call'd the Releasing of the People from their "Debts Σισάχθεια, a Throwing off a Burden (w)." Plato tells us, the Athenians had three Sorts of Prisons: the first was near the Forum, and was only design'd to secure Debtors, or other Persons from running away. The second was call'd Σωφρονιστήριον, or a House of Correction, such as our Bridewell. The third was seated in an uninhabited and lonesome Place, and was design'd for Malefactors guilty of capital Crimes (x). One of their most remarkable Prisons was call'd Νομοφυλάκιον, and the Gate, thro' which Criminals were led to Execution, Χαρωνεῖον, from Charon, the infernal Ferryman. At the Prison Door was erected the Image of Mercury, the tutelar Deity of the Place, call'd Στροφαῖς, from Στροφεύς, the Hinge of a Door.

Of Fetters there were divers Sorts, the most remarkable are these; Κύρῳ, a Collar usually made of Wood, so call'd from κύρῳ, because it constrain'd the Criminal to bow down his Head. This Punishment was call'd Κυρωκισμὸς, and hence pernicious Fellows or Things are sometimes nam'd Κύρῳνες (y). Hesychius will have it apply'd ἐπὶ πάντων δυσχερῶν καὶ ἀλεθείων to all Things hurtful and destructive. Others call it κλοιὸς, or κολοῖδος, from κλείω, because the Criminal's Neck was shut or inclosed within it. Some Grammarians tell us, the Neck, Hands, and Feet were made fast in it; and therefore it is probable, it was the same with the ξύλον πεντεσύειρον, or Fetters with five Holes, mention'd by

* Andocides de Mysteriis. (†) Ranis. (u) Lysandro. (w) Plutarch. Solone. (x) Plato de Legib, lib. X. (y) Aristophan, Schol, Pluso.

Pollux, and seems to resemble the Punishment of binding Neck and Heels, used amongst our Soldiers. Aristophanes calls it ξύλον τετραμήλον, as his *Scholias*t informs us in his Comment upon these Words in Lyfistrate,

—— τὰς δ' Ἀμαζόνιας σκόπει,

Ἄς Μίκων ἔσραψεν ἐφ' ἰσπῶν μαχομένης τοῖς ἀνδράσιν,

Ἀλλὰ τέτων χρεὴν ἀπασῶν ἐς τετραμήλον ξύλον

Ἐσκαθαρμόσαι λαβόντας τετονὶ τὸν αἰχένα.

Women must have their stiff and haughty Necks

With Fetters cramp'd, lest they grow insolent,

And us of our Authority divest.

For see here, in this Canvas-pourtraiture

By skilful Micon drawn, how th' Amazons,

Mounted on prancing Steeds, with burnish'd Spears engage.

J. A.

Παυσιμάτη, a round Engine put about the Neck in such a Manner, that the Sufferer could not lift his Hand to his Head.

Χοῖνιξ, signifies the Fetters, in which the Feet or Legs were made fast, as we are inform'd by Aristophanes in his Plutus, where, speaking of an insolent Slave, he saith, he deserves to be fet in the Stocks,

—— αἰ κνήμαι δὲ σε βοῶσιν

Ἰὲ, ἰὲ· τὰς χοῖνικας, καὶ τὰςπέδας ποῶθσαι.

You're ripe, you Rogue, for Fetters, the Stocks groan for you.

Not much unlike this seems to have been the ποδοκάκη, ποδοκάκηκη, or ποδοσράβη, sometimes call'd ξύλον, from the Matter it was made of (x). But ποδοκάκηκη and ποδοσράβη seem to have differ'd in this, that in ποδοσράβη, the Feet were tortur'd; whereas in ποδοκάκηκη, they were only made fast without Pain, or Distention of Joints. Tho' perhaps this Distinction will not be found constant and perpetual (a). Σαυίς, was a Piece of Wood to which the Malefactor was bound fast, as the same Poet reports (b),

—— δῆστον αὐτὸν εἰσάγων,

Ὡ τοξότῳ, ἐν τῇ σαυίδι.

Here, Lictor, bring him in, and bind him to the Rack,

And a little after,

—— γυμνὸν ἀποδήσαντα με

Κέλευε πρὸς τῇ σαυίδι δῆσεν τὸν τοξότῳ.

Order the Executioner to strip

Me naked, and to cord me to the Rack.

(x) Aristophan. Schol. Equit. (a) Conf. Ulpianus in Timocrateam. Hesychius, Suidas. (b) Theophrastus.

Beside these, many others occur in Authors, which, barely to mention, would be both tedious and unnecessary.

Φυγή, perpetual Banishment, whereby the condemned Persons were deprived of their Estates, which were publicly expos'd to Sale, and compell'd to leave their Country without any Possibility of returning, except they were recall'd (which sometimes happen'd) by the same Power that expell'd 'em; wherein it differ'd from Οσεασιονις, which only commanded a ten Years Absence, at the End of which, the banish'd Persons were permitted to return, and enjoy their Estates, which were all that Time preserv'd entire to 'em (c). And the latter was instituted not so much with a Design to punish the Offender, as to mitigate and pacify the Fury of the Envious, that delighted to depress those who were eminent for their Virtues and glorious Actions, and by fixing this Disgrace upon them, to exhale Part of the venomous Rancour of their Minds. The first that underwent this Condemnation was, as Plutarch reports, Hipparchus the Cholargian, a Kinsman to the Tyrant of the same Name. Eusebius makes it much ancients, and carries it as high as Theseus's Time, who, he tells us out of Theophrastus and Pausanias, was the first that suffer'd it (d). Heracides will have it to have been first instituted by Hippias the Tyrant, a Son of Pisistratus (e); Photias, by one Achilles, the Son of Lycos (f); and Ælian, by Clisthenes, who also, as he tells us, was the first that underwent it (g). It was never inflicted upon any but great Persons; Demetrius the Phalerean (as Plutarch reports) will have it to have happen'd to none but Men of great Estates, and therefore, as an Argument to prove the plentiful Condition of Aristides, (whom he maintains to have been possess'd of a large Fortune, contrary to the Opinion of most other Writers) he alledg'd, that he was banish'd by Ostracism. But my Author is of another Opinion, and not without Reason, for all Persons were liable to the Ostracism, who for Reputation, Quality, Riches, or Eloquence, were esteem'd above the common Level, and expos'd to the Envy of the People, insomuch that even Damon, Præceptor to Pericles, was banish'd thereby, because he seem'd a Man of more than ordinary Sense. Afterwards, when base, mean, and villanous Fellows became subject to it, they quite left it off, Hyperbolus being the last whom they banish'd by Ostracism. This Hyperbolus was a very rascally Fellow, who furnish'd all the Writers of Comedy in that Age with Matter for their Satyrical Invectives; but he was wholly unconcern'd at the worst Things they could say, and, being careless of Glory, was also insensible of Shame; he was neither lov'd nor esteem'd by any body, but was a necessary Tool to the People, and frequently made use of by them, when they had a Mind to disgrace or calumniate any Person of Authority or Reputation. The Cause of his Banishment was this; Alcibiades, Nicias, and Phæax, at that Time, were of different Factions, and each of them, bearing a great Sway in the City, lay open to the Envy of the inferior Citizens, who, at Hyperbolus's Persuasion, were very eager to decree the Banishment of some one of them. Alcibiades, perceiving the Danger they were in, consulted with Nicias, or Phæax (for it is not agreed whether) and so contrived Matters, that, by uniting their several Parties, the Ostracism fell upon Hyperbolus, when he expected nothing of it. Hereupon the People being offended, as if some Contempt or Affront had been put upon the Thing, left off, and quite abolish'd it. It was perform'd, to be short, in this Manner; every one taking an Οστρακον, or Tyle, carried it to a certain Part of the Market-place, surrounded with wooden Rails, for that Purpose, in which were ten Gates appointed for the ten Tribes, every one of which enter'd at a distinct Gate. That being done, the Archons number'd all the Tyles in gross, for if there were fewer than six thousand, the Ostracism was void; then laying every Name by itself, they pronounced him, whose Name was written by the major Part, banish'd for ten Years, enjoying his Estate (b). This Punishment was sometimes call'd Κεραμικὴ μάστιξ, from κέραμοϑ, because the Οστρακα, by which the People gave their Suffrages, were earthen Tyles, or Pieces of broken Pots (i). The like was used at Argos, Megara, and Miletus (k); and the Syracusan Πελασμοϑς, was instituted upon the same Account, in the third Year of the eighty-sixth Olympiad, but differ'd from it in this, that this Banishment was but for five Years, and instead of Οστρακα, the People made Use of Πέλλα, or Leavis, usually those of the Olive-tree, in giving their Voices (l).

Θάνατοϑ, Death, was inflicted on Malefactors several Ways, the chief of which were these:

Ξίφοϑ, with which the Criminal was beheaded.

Βρόχοϑ, with which he was either strangled after the Turkish Fashion, or hang'd in the Manner usual amongst us; for that this was a very ancient, but withal a very ignominious Punishment, appears from Homer, in whom Ulysses and Telemachus punish the Men, that took Part with the young Gentlemen, who made Love to Penelope, only with a common and ordinary Death; but the Maid-servants that had submitted to their Lust, and behav'd themselves with Scorn and Contempt towards their Masters, as being guilty of a more notorious Crime, they order'd to be hang'd; the Manner of it the Poet has describ'd in these Words (m),

Πῆσμα νέως κυανοπράεοιο.
 Κίονϑ ἐξάφας μεγάλης, περιβαλλε θόλοιο,
 Υψύσ' ἐπεντανύσας, μή τις ποσὶν ἔδασ ἵκηται.
 Ως δ' ὅτ' ἀν' ἡ κίκλαι τανυσίπτεροι, ἢ πέλαια
 Ἐρκεσι ἐπιπλήξωσι, τό, δ' ἐσήκει ἐνὶ θαμνῶ,
 Αὐλὴν ἐσιέμεναι, συφερός δ' ὕπεδέξατο κοῖτοϑ.
 Ως αἶ γ' ἐξείης κεφαλᾶς ἔχειν, ἀμφὶ ἧ πάσαι
 Δεῖνῆσιν βρόχοι ἦσαν, ὅπως οἴκτισα θάνοισεν,
 Ἡσπαιερον ἧ πόδεςσι μίμνθά περ, ἔτι μάλα δ' ἦν.

Then young Telemachus a Cable ty'd Harden'd with Pitch t'a lofty Pillar's Side, φαρμακον, Poison ; of which there were divers Sorts ; but what they most commonly made Use of, was the Juice of the Herb, κικυειον, Cicu- sonous. A Draught of this gave Socrates his Death :

*Rem populi tractas, barbatum hoc crede Magistrum

Saith Persius, meaning Socrates *.

Κεραυός, a Precipice, from which the Malefactor was tumbled headlong.
Τύμπανα or Τύπανα, were Cudgels of Wood, with which Malefactors were beaten to Death (n), being hang'd upon a Pole, which was also call'd Τύμπανον, and therefore Τυμπανίζεῖν is by Suidas and the Ety- mologist expounded κρέματα, and ἐτυμπανισθῆσαν, ἐκρεμάσθῆσαν by Hesychius ; for their Conceit is vain and ridiculous, that would thence infer it to have been a Kind of Gallows or Cross. No less groundless is their Opinion, that imagine it to have been an Instrument, on which Criminals were distended, like the Covering of a Drum, which the Greeks call'd Τύμπανον, and to have been of the same Nature with the Roman Fideculæ, which were little Cords, by which Men were stretched upon the Rack, and seem to have resembled the Greek Ξχοῖνοι, used in the Punishment call'd Σχοινισμός.

Σταυρός, the Cross mention'd in Thucydides (o), was used in Greece, but not so frequently as at Rome. It consisted of two Beams, one of which was placed cross the other ; the Figure of it was much what the same with that of the Letter T, as Lucian tells us (p), differing only from it, because the transverse Beam was fix'd a little below the Top of the strait one. The Malefactor was hang'd upon the Beam that was erect, his Feet being fix'd to it with Nails, and his Hands to each Side of that which was transverse.

Βάραθρον, was a deep Pit belonging to the Tribe Hippothoontis, into which condemn'd Persons were cast headlong. It is sometimes call'd Ὀρυσμα, whence the publick Executioner received the Appellation of Ὁ ἐπὶ τῷ ὀρύσσει. It was a dark, noisome Hole, and had sharp Spikes at the Top, that no Man might escape out; and others at the Bottom, to pierce and torment such as were cast in (g). From its Depth and Capaciousness, it came to be used proverbially for a covetous Miser, or voracious Glutton, that is always craving, and can never be satisfied; and such an one the Latins call'd Barathro, hence Lucretius(r), Aufer abhinc lacrymas, Barathro, & compeſce querelas.

—Forbear thy Sighs,

Thou Miser, cease Complaints, and dry thine Eyes.

And Horace,

Mendici, mimæ, Barathrones, hoc genus omne (f).

Beggars, Jack-puddings, Rooksters, and such-like.

A Place of the same Nature was the Lacedæmonian Καυδάσας, into which Aristomenes the Messenian being cast, made his Escape after a wonderful Manner, as Pausanias reports (t).

Λιθοβολία, or Lapidation, was a common Punishment, and usually inflicted by the primitive Greeks upon such as were taken in Adultery, as we learn from Homer's third Iliad, where Hæctor tells Paris, he deserves to die this Death:

Λαίνον ἕσσο χιτῶνα κακῶν ἔνεκ', ὅσσα ἔοργας.

For all your Villainies you shall be ston'd to Death.

Many other Punishments there were, which they inflicted for particular Crimes, some of which I shall treat of in their proper Places.

As the Laws inflicted severe Penalties upon Offenders, thereby to deter Men from Vice and Wickedness, and from base dishonourable Designs; so again they confer'd ample Rewards upon such as merited them, thereby to incite others to the Practice of Virtue and Honesty, and the Performance of good and glorious Actions; and upon the just and equal Dispensation of these two Things, it was Solon's Opinion, that the Safety of the Commonwealth chiefly depended (u). Now not to mention publick Honours and State Preferments, to which even those of the inferior Sort might not despair of advancing themselves in a popular State, if, by their eminent Services, they approved themselves to the People; beside these, I say, there were several publick Rewards and Honours confer'd upon such as were thought worthy of them; the chief of which were these;

Προεδεία, or the Privilege of having the first Place at all Shows, Sports, Banquets, and publick Meetings (av).

Εἰκῶν, or the Honour of having a Picture, or Statue erected in the Citadel, Forum, or other publick Places of the City (x). With such Monuments of Virtue, Athens seems to have abounded more than any City in the World, as will evidently appear to any, that will be at the Pains to peruse Pausanias's accurate Description of them.

Στέφανοι, or Crowns, were conferr'd in the publick Assemblies by the Suffrages of the People, or by the Senators in their Council, or the Tribes to their own Members, or by the Δημόσιον in their own (Δημόσιον) Borough. The People were not allow'd to present Crowns in any Place beside their Assembly, nor the Senators out of the Senate-house; it being the Law-giver's Intention, that the Athenians should ἀγαπᾶν ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ πόλει τιμὰς λαβεῖν ὑπὸ δῆμος acquiesce in the Honours paid them by their own People, and not court the Favour and Esteem of other Cities. For this Reason the Athenians never rewarded any Man with Crowns in the Theatre, and at the solemn Games, where there was commonly a great Concourse of People from all the Parts of Greece: And if any of the Criers there proclaim'd the Crowns, which any Man's Tribes or Borough had presented him with, he was punish'd with (ἀτιμία) Infamy. Nevertheless ξέζανοι ξενικοί, Coronæ hospitales, were sometimes presented by foreign Cities to particular Citizens of Athens. But that could not be done, till the Ambassadors of those Cities had first obtain'd Leave from the People of Athens, and the Men, for whom that Honour was intended, had undergone a publick Examination, wherein their Course of Life was enquir'd into. Lastly, whereas the Crowns presented by the Athenians themselves, to any of their own Citizens, were kept in the Families of those who had obtain'd them, as Monuments of Honour; those, which were sent from other Cities, were dedicated to Minerva the Protectress of Athens (y). But of these, because they were, for the most Part, bestow'd upon those that had signalized themselves by their Valour, as also of other military Rewards, I shall give you a farther Account in another Place.

Ἀτέλεια, was an Immunity from all publick Duties, Taxes, and Contributions, except such as were requir'd for carrying on the Wars, and building Ships, which no Man was excused from, except the nine Archons. This Honour was very rare, but yet there want not Instances of it, as particularly those of Hermodius and Aristogiton's whole Families, which enjoy'd it for many Generations (z).

Σιτία, παρρησιτία, σίτησις ἐν Πρυτανείῳ, was an Entertainment allow'd to such as deserved well of the Commonwealth, in particular to those who had been Ambassadors in the Common-hall, call'd Prytaneum. Solon made a Law, that no Man should be entertain'd in this Place oftener than once (a). But this being afterwards abolish'd, some were ἀείσιτοι, constantly maintain'd in the Prytaneum (b). Whence Socrates being ask'd by the Court, what Punishment he thought himself to deserve? Reply'd, ut ei vitæ quotidianus in Prytaneo publice præberetur; that they should allow him a constant Maintenance in the Prytaneum, qui honos apud Græcos maximus habetur, which is reputed one of the greatest Honours amongst the Græcians, as we are inform'd by Cicero (c). And sometimes we find the Privilege granted to whole Families for the Services of their Ancestors, as particularly to those of Hippocrates, Hermodius, and Aristogiton. Their common Fare was a Sort of Cakes, or Puddings, call'd Μάζα. Upon Holidays they had an Allowance of Bread (d); which Solon appointed μιμῆναι τὸν Ὀμηρον, in Imitation of Homer, whose Heroes us'd to feast in that Manner. Beside other Provisions, the Tenths of all the Bellies of Animals, offer'd in Sacrifice, were always reserv'd for them, which, if any Man neglected to send, he was liable to be punish'd by the Prytanes, as we learn from Aristophanes (e).

Καὶ σε φανῶ τοῖς Πρυθάνεσιν,

Ἀδεκατέυτες τῶ θεῶν ἱερῶς ἔχοιτ' ἀκοιλίας.

Your Frauds I'll to the Prytanes disclose,
Since you with sacrilegious Stealth keep back
The Titles of sacred Victims Bellies.

It must not be omitted in this Place, that such, as had receiv'd any Honour or Privilege from the City, were under its more particular Care and Protection; and the Injuries, done to them, were resent'd as publick Affronts to the whole Commonwealth: Infomuch that whoever did ὕβριζεν, πατάσεν, κακῶς ἐπέειπεν, affront, strike, or speak ill of any such Person, was by the Law declar'd (ἄτιμος) infamous (f). More might be said about the Honours conferr'd after Death upon such, as had been eminently serviceable to the Commonwealth, in the Celebration of their Funerals, and the pious Care of their Memories; but this I shall leave to be spoken of in another Place, and shall only add, that not themselves only, but their Posterity, reap'd the Fruits of their Virtues; for if any of their Children were left in a poor Condition, they seldom fail'd of obtaining a plentiful Provision from the Publick: Thus Aristides's two Daughters were publickly marry'd out of the Prytaneum, the City decreeing each of them three hundred Drachms for her Portion. Nor is it to be wonder'd, saith Plutarch, that the People of Athens should take Care of those that liv'd in the City, since hearing that Aristogiton's Grand-daughter was in a low Condition in the Isle of Lemnus, and, by Means of her Poverty, like to want a Husband, they sent for her to Athens, marry'd her to a Person of considerable Quality, and bestow'd upon her a large Farm, as a Dowry. Of which Bounty and Humanity (saith he) this City of Athens, even in this Age, hath given divers Demonstrations; for which she is deservedly had in great Honour and Admiration (g).

It will not be improper to add, in the last Place, that, whilst the ancient Virtue and Glory of the Athenians lasted, it was exceeding difficult to obtain any of the publick Honours: Infomuch that when Miltiades petition'd for a Crown, after he had deliver'd Greece from the Persian Army at Marathon, he receiv'd this Answer from one of the People, that, when he conquer'd alone, he should be crown'd alone. But in Aristophanes's Age, Honours were become more common. Thus he complains (h),

Not one of the Generals in former Ages desir'd a publick Maintenance ; but now unless the Privilege of having the first Seats, and a Maintenance is given to them, they say, they'll not fight. In latter Ages, how lavish the Athenians grew of their publick Honours, may be easily known from the Stories of Demetrius Poliorcetes, and Demetrius the Phalerean (i), which have been already mention'd in another Place.

C H A P. XXVI.

Of the Athenian Laws.

IT was Tully's Observation, that most of the Arts and Inventions, which are necessary to the Management of human Life, owe their first Original to the Athenians, from whom they were derived into the other Parts of Greece, and thence carried into foreign Countries, for the common Benefit of Mankind. But of all the Inventions commonly ascrib'd to them, none has been of greater or more general Use to the World, than that of Laws, which, as Ælian (k), and others report, were first establish'd in Athens. Tho' some ascribe the first Invention of Laws to Zaleucus the Locrian, or to Minos, King of Crete (l). Most other ingenious Contrivances respect the Conveniences of human Life, but upon this depends the very Foundation of all Civil Government, and of all mutual Society amongst Men ; for by them the Magistrate is directed how to govern, and the People how far to obey ; the Magistrate by them is settled in the Possession of his Authority over the People, and the People too by them are secur'd from the arbitrary Power, and unreasonable Demands of the Magistrate, as well as from the Fraud, Violence, and Oppression of each other.

The Poets tell us, that Ceres was the first that taught the Athenians the Use of Laws ; in Memory of which Benefit they celebrated the Festival call'd Θεσμοφορία, in which she was worshipp'd by the Name of Θεσμοφορεα, which exactly answers to the Latin Name of Legifera in Virgil (m):

maestant leetas de more bidentes

Legiferæ Cereri—

To Ceres, who first shew'd the Use of Laws,
 They offer Lambs cull'd out of bleating Flocks.

The Occasion of this Opinion seems to have been, their ascribing to this Goddess the Invention of Tillage. After which, the Lands being not as yet divided into equal Portions, Controversies us'd to be rais'd :

(i) Conf. Plutarchus, Demetrio. (k) Lib. III. cap. 38. (l) Clemens Alexandrinus, Strom. I. p. 309. (m) Æneid. IV. v. 57.

For the composing whereof, Ceres gave Directions, which afterwards were imitated in all other Affairs. Some of the Laws of her Favourite Triptolemus are still extant, and I have spoken of them in another Place. But to pass by poetical Fictions, thus much is certain, viz. that the Athenians were govern'd by Laws before the Dissolution of their Monarchy, as may be observ'd from what Plutarch relates of Theseus, viz. That when he divested himself of sovereign Power, and establish'd a Commonwealth in Athens, one of the Prerogatives, that he thought fit still to retain, was the Custody or Protection of the Laws.

The first that gave Laws to the Athenians, after Theseus's Time, was Draco, who was Archon in the first Year of the thirty-ninth Olympiad. His Laws, Ælian (n) tells us, are properly call'd Θεσμῶν, but are remarkable for nothing but their unreasonable Severity; for by them every little Offence was punish'd with Death, and he, that stole an Apple, was proceeded against with no less Rigour, than he that had betray'd his Country. But these Extremities could not last long, the People soon grew weary of them; and therefore, tho' they were not abrogated, yet by a tacit Consent they were laid asleep, till Solon, the next Law-giver, repeal'd them all, except those which concern'd Murder, call'd Φονικῶν νόμοι; and, having receiv'd from the People Power to make what Alterations he thought necessary, new-model'd the Commonwealth, and instituted a great many useful and excellent Laws, which, to distinguish them from Draco's Θεσμῶν, were call'd Νόμοι. And lest, thro' the Connivance of the Magistrates, they should in Time be neglected, like those of his Predecessor, he caus'd the Senate to take a solemn Oath to observe them, and every one of the Thesmothetæ vow'd, that, if he violated any of the Statutes, he would dedicate a golden Statue as big as himself to the Delphian Apollo; and the People he oblig'd to observe them for a hundred Years (o).

But all this Care was not sufficient to preserve his Laws from the Innovations of lawless and ambitious Men: For shortly after Pisistratus so far insinuated himself into the People's Favour, that the Democracy instituted by Solon was dissolv'd, and himself invested with sovereign Power, which, at his Death, he left in the Possession of his Sons, who maintain'd it for some Years; and tho' Pisistratus himself, as Plutarch reports (p), and his Son, after him, in a great Measure, govern'd according to Solon's Directions, yet they follow'd them not as Laws, to which they were oblig'd to conform their Actions, but rather seem to have us'd them as wise and prudent Counsels, and varied from them, whenever they found them to interfere with their Interest or Inclinations.

Pisistratus's Family being driven out of Attica, Clisthenes took upon him to restore Solon's Constitutions, and enacted many new Laws (q), which continu'd in Force till the Peloponnesian War, in which the Form of Government was chang'd, first by the four hundred, and then by the thirty Tyrants. These Storms being over, the ancient Laws were again restor'd in the Archonship of Euclides, and others establish'd at the Instance of Diocles, Aristophon, and other leading Men of the City. Last of all Demetrius the Phalerean, being intrusted with the Government of Athens, by the Macedonians, was the Author of many new, but very beneficial and laudable Constitutions (r). These seem to have been the chief Legislators of Athens, before they submitted to the Roman Yoke; two others are mention'd by Suidas, viz. Thales and Æschylus.

Beside these, the Athenians had a great many other Laws enacted upon particular Exigencies by the Suffrages of the People: For I shall not in this Place speak of the Ψηφίσματα τῶν Βουλῆς, the Decrees enacted by the Authority of the Senators, whose Power being only annual, their Decrees lost all their Force and Obligation, when their Offices expir'd. The Manner of making a Law was thus: When any Man had contriv'd any thing, which he thought might conduce to the Good of the Commonwealth, he first communicated it to the Prytanes, who receiv'd all Sorts of Informations of Things that concern'd the Publick; the Prytanes then call'd a Meeting of the Senate, in which the new Project, being propos'd, after mature Deliberation was rejected, if it appear'd hurtful or unserviceable; if not, it was agreed to, and then call'd Προβέλευμα. This the Prytanes wrote upon a Tablet, and thence it was call'd Πρόγραμμα.

No Law was to be propos'd to the Assembly, except it had been written upon a white Tablet, and fix'd up, some Days before the Assembly, at the Statues of the Heroes call'd Ἐπώνυμοι, that so all the Citizens might read what was to be propos'd at their next Meeting, and be able to give a more deliberate Judgment upon it. When the Multitude was come together, the Decree was read, and every Man had Liberty to speak his Mind about the whole, or any Clause of it; and if, after due Consultation, the Assembly thought it inconvenient, it was rejected; if they approv'd of it, it pass'd into a Ψήφισμα, or Νόμος, which, as we learn from Demosthenes, were the same as to their Obligation, but differ'd in this, that Νόμος was a general and everlasting Rule, whereas Ψήφισμα respected particular Times, Places, and other Circumstances (f):

No Man, without a great deal of Caution, and a thorough Understanding of the former Laws and Constitutions, durst presume to propose a new one; the Danger being very great, if it suited not with the Customs and Inclinations of the People; Eudemus, a Cyathenian, is said to have lost his Life on that Account, being made a Sacrifice to the Rage of the Multitude. Not much unlike this Severity was the Ordinance of Zaleucus, the Locrian Law-giver, by which it was appointed, that whosoever propos'd the enacting of a new Law, or the Abrogation of an old one, should come into the Assembly, with an Halter about his Neck, and in that Habit give his Reasons for what he propos'd, and if these were thought good and sufficient, his Proposal was embrac'd; if not, he straightway pour'd out his Soul under the Hangman's Hands. But the Athenians were not quite so rigid, except upon some extraordinary Occasions, when the giddy Multitude was hurried on

(r) Plutarch. Aristide. (f) Demosthen. ejusque narrator Ulpian in Leptin. & alibi, with with unusual Rage and Vehemence, as happen'd in Eudemus's Case; yet if any Man establish'd a Law that was prejudicial to the Commonwealth, he might be call'd in Question for it any Time within the Space of one Year; but if he was let alone any longer, the Laws took no Notice of him. In these Cases especially, a Writ for transgressing the Laws, call'd Παρανομίας γραφή, might take hold of him; First, If he had not taken care to publish his Proposal in due Time. Secondly, If he propos'd it in ambiguous and fallacious Terms. Thirdly, If he propos'd any thing contrary to any of the former, and receiv'd Laws; and therefore, if any of the old Laws were found to oppose what they design'd to offer, they always took Care to have them repeal'd before-hand (r). They who had preferr'd any Law, which was παρῆνομιον, or ἀνεπίσημον, contrary to the former Laws, or the Interest of the Commonwealth, were first arraign'd before the Thesmothetæ, according to Julius Pollux: Or, as others think, they were sometimes arraign'd before the Thesmothetæ, sometimes before other Archons, according to the different Nature of their Crimes, every Archon having the Cognizance of different Affairs. The Accusation being heard, the Archon did ἐπαγγεῖν εἰς τὸ δίκασθῆναι, introduce the Cause into that Court of Justice; where such Affairs were examin'd. If the Defendant was declar'd guilty, he was usually punish'd with a Fine, according to his Offence, which he was oblig'd to pay under the Penalty of (ἀτιμία) Infamy: This last Punishment was immediately inflicted upon those, who had been thrice convicted of this Offence, who were, on that Account, ever after excluded from all publick Assemblies. Whence that Saying of Antiphanes,

Πῶς γὰρ γένοιτ' ἄν ———

Ῥήτωρ ἀφρων, ἢν μὴ ἀλώ τεις παρανόμων.

How can an Orator be silenc'd, unless he has been thrice convicted of παρῆνομιων of enacting Laws contrary to those already in Force? If the Judges acquitted the Defendant, then the Plaintiff was amerced a thousand Drachmæ, as a Punishment of his false Accusation (u). And tho' he, who had been the Occasion of enacting any unjust Law, could not be punish'd after a whole Year was expir'd, yet it was lawful to cite him before a Magistrate, and there oblige him to shew the Design and Reason of his Law, in order to prevent any Damage which might ensue from it. But because, notwithstanding all this Caution, it sometimes happen'd that new Laws were enacted contrary to the old, it was order'd, that the Thesmothetæ should once every Year carefully peruse the Laws; and if they found any of them oppose another, it was to be propos'd to the People, who were to proceed about it in the Method that was us'd in abrogating other Laws, and so one of the Laws made void. In other Cases, it was unlawful for any Man to endeavour to have any Law repeal'd, without preferring a new one in its Place.

And because the Change of Time, and other Circumstances, make great Alterations in Affairs; and Ordinances, which were formerly useful and necessary, by the different State of Things, become unprofitable, and perhaps inconvenient and prejudicial ; it was ordain'd by Solon, that once every Year the Laws should be carefully revis'd and examin'd, and if any of 'em were found unsuitable to the present State of Affairs, it should be repeal'd; this was call'd ἐπιχειροσφία τῶν νομῶν, from the Manner of giving their Suffrages by holding up their Hands. The Method of doing it was thus ; on the eleventh Day of the Month Hecatombæon, at which time the Prytanes held their first stated Assembly, after the Κῆρυξ had, according to Custom, made a solemn Prayer before the Assembly, the Laws were read over in this Order ; first, those that concern'd the Senate ; then those that respected the People, the nine Archons, and then the other Magistrates in their Order. This being done, it was demanded, whether the Laws then in being were sufficient for the Commonwealth ? And if it seem'd necessary to make any Alteration in 'em, the Consideration was deferr'd till the fourth of Metagitnion, upon which Day was the last stated Assembly, under the first Rank of the Prytanes, as the Repetition of the Laws had been at the first. In all this, the Θεσμοί, or Laws concerning such Matters, were nicely and punctually observ'd, and the Prytanes and Proedri severely punish'd, if any thing was omitted. For this was the Difference between δεσμός and νόμος, that δεσμός ἐστὶ νόμος πῶς ἐδει νομοθετεῖν. δεσμός, is a Law directing how Laws (νόμοι) are to be made (ω). Upon the first of Metagitnion, another Assembly was call'd, and the Proedri reported the Matter to the People, who did not proceed to the Determination of it themselves, but substituted the Nomothetæ to do it ; and appointed five Orators, call'd Σύνδικοι, to defend the ancient Laws in the Name of the People. If the Prytanes neglected to convene the foremention'd Assembly, they were to be fin'd a thousand Drachmæ : But if the Assembly met, and the Proedri then neglected to propound the Law to the People, they were fin'd only forty Drachmæ ; ὅτι βερότερον ἐστὶν ὅλως τὸ μὴ συναῖλαι τὸν δῆμον εἰς ἐγκλησίαν, τῆ μὴ ὑποβάλλειν. It being a greater Crime to neglect the Calling of the People together, than the propounding of any particular Business to them. Any Man was permitted to arraign the Prytanes and Proedri thus offending before the Thesmothetæ, whom the Laws obliged to impeach the Criminals in the Court of Helicæa, upon Neglect whereof they were deny'd Admission into the Senate of Arcopagus. To return, the Nomothetæ, having heard what the Orators could say in Defence of the old Law, gave their Opinions accordingly, and their Sentence was ratified by the People in the following Assembly (x).

(r) Idem. (u) Demosthene Timocratea, ibique Ulpianus,

Solon, and, after his Example, the rest of those that enacted Laws in Athens, committed their Laws to Writing, differing herein from Lycurgus, and the Law-givers of other Cities, who thought it better to imprint them in the Minds of their Citizens, than to engrave them upon Tablets, where it was probable they might lie neglected and unregarded, as Platarch hath informed us in his Life of Numa Pompilius : “ It is reported, saith he, that Numa's Body, by his particular Command, was not burn'd, but that he order'd two Stone Coffins to be made, in one of which he appointed his Body to be laid, and the other to be a Repository for his sacred Books and Writings, and

(v) Libanius in Argument. Leptineæ.(x) Idem.

“ both

“ both of them to be interr’d under the Hill Janiculum; imitating “ herein the Legislators of Greece, who having wrote their Laws in “ Tablets, which they call’d Κύβειαι, did so long inculcate the Contents
 “ of them, whilst they liv’d, into the Minds and Hearts of their Priests, “ that their Understanding became, as it were, living Libraries of those “ sacred Volumes, it being esteem’d a Prophanation of such Mysteries “ to commit their Secrets unto dead Letters.” In some Places, especially before the Invention of Letters, it was usual to sing their Laws, the better to fix them in their Memories; which Custom, Aristotle tells us, was us’d in his Days amongst the Agathyrsi, a People near the Scythians; and this he fancies was the Reason, why musical Rules for keeping Time were call’d Νόμοι *.

But Solon was of a contrary Opinion, esteeming it the safest Way to commit his Laws to Writing, which would remain entire, and impossible to be corrupted, when the unwritten Traditions of other Lawgivers, thro’ the Negligence and Forgetfulness of some, and the Cunning and Knavery of others, might either wholly perish in Oblivion, or by continual Forgeries and Alterations be render’d altogether unprofitable to the Publick, but abundantly serviceable to the Designs and Innovations of treacherous and ambitious Men. Whence we find an express Law, ἀγγεῖον νόμον τὰς ἀρχὰς μὴ χρῆσθαι μηδὲ πρῶσι ἐνός. That no Magistrate should in any Case make use of an unwritten Law †. The Tablets in which Solon pen’d his Laws, Plutarch tells us, were of Wood, and call’d Ἀξόβειαι, and so fashion’d, that they might be turn’d round in oblong Cases; some of ’em, he saith, remain’d till his Time, and were to be seen in the Prytaneum at Athens, being, as Aristotle affirms, the same with the Κύβειαι. But others are of Opinion, that those were properly call’d Κύβειαι, which contain’d the Laws concerning Sacrifices, and the Rites of Religion; and all the rest Ἀξόβειαι. Thus Plutarch (y). But Apollodorus, as he is quoted by the *Scholias*t upon Aristophanes (z), will have Κύβειαι to be of Stone, and to signify any Tablets, wherein Laws, or publick Edicts were written, and to have receiv’d their Name παρὰ τὸ κερουφῶδες εἶς ὑψος, because they were erected up on high; or from the Corybantes, the first Inventers of them, as Theopompus reports in his Treatise of Piety.
Aristotle adds, that they were triangular, in his Account of the Republick of Athens, and is seconded herein by Pollux (a), who farther remarks, that the Ἀξόβειαι were quadrangular, and made of Brass. Ammonius (b), to trouble you with no more Opinions about them, will have the Distinction to consist in this, that the Ἀξόβειαι were four-square, containing the Laws that concern’d civil Affairs; whereas the Κύβειαι were triangular and contain’d Precepts about the Worship of the Gods. What Number there was of ’em, ’tis impossible to divine, since none of the ancient Authors have given us any Light in this Particular. They were kept in the Citadel, but afterwards remov’d to the Prytaneum, that all Persons might have Recourse to them upon any Occasion (c); though some report, that only Transcripts of them were carry’d thither, and that the Original, written by Solon's own Hand, remain'd still in the Citadel. Hence, as Pollux is of Opinion, the Laws came to be distinguish'd into τὰς κάτωθεν, and τὰς ἀνωθεν νόμους, the former signifying the Laws that were in the Prætorium, which was in the lower City; the latter, those that were kept in the Citadel, or upper City. Others are of Opinion, that by ὁ κάτωθεν νόμος, Demosthenes, whose Expression it is, meant no more, than the lower Part of the Tablet: But then, without Dispute, he would have mention'd the Number of the Tablets, as in other Places he, and others usually do, and not have left us in the dark which of the Tablets he meant. Again, the lower Part of the Tablet might sometimes happen to contain the first Part of the Law, which it is improper to call τὸν κάτωθεν, because that Word seems to import something beneath the rest, and towards the latter End; for one Tablet was not always large enough to contain a whole Law, as appears from *Plutarch, in whom we find, that the eighth Law was engrav'd in the thirteenth Table. Petitus will have Demosthenes to mean no more by ὁ κάτωθεν νόμος, than the Law which beneath, or afterwards in the same Oration, is cited by him. Others understand it of the lower Line, because the Laws are said to have been written ἐστροφηθῆν, which is, as Pausanias explains it (d), when the second Line is turn'd on the contrary Side, beginning at the End of the former, as the Husbandmen turn their Oxen in ploughing, in this Manner,

It was against the Law, for any Man to erase a Decree out of any of the Tablets, or to make any Alterations in them; and for their greater Security, there were certain Persons call'd, from their Office, Γραμματεῖς, whose Business it was to preserve them from being corrupted (e), and, as their Name imports, to transcribe the old, and enter the new ones into the Tablets; they were elected by the Senate, and, to render their Office more creditable, had several Marks of Honour confer'd upon them, of which in their proper Places. Lastly, That no Man might pretend Ignorance of his Duty, the Laws were all engrav'd on the Wall in the Βασιλικῇ σάλ, Royal Portico, and there expos'd to publick View. But this Custom was not begun till after the thirty Tyrants were expell'd (f). Thus much of the Athenian Laws in general: Their particular Laws, most of which have been collected by Samuel Petitus, were these which follow:

The Decree.

T Ijamenus hath established, with the Consent and by the Authority of the People, that Athens shall keep her ancient Form of Government, and make Use of Solon's Laws, Weights, and Measures, with Draco's Sanctions, as hitherto; if new ones shall seem requisite, the Nomothetæ, created by the Senate for that Purpose, shall engross them on a Tablet, and hang 'em up at the Statues of the Eponymi, that they may be expos'd to the publick View of all Passers-by; the same Month they are to be given up to the Magistrates, after they have pass'd the Estimation of the Senate of five hundred, and the delegated Nomothetæ. Be it also farther enacted, that any private Man may have free Access to the Senate, and give in his Sentiments concerning them. After their Promulgation, the Senate of Areopagus is required to take Care that the Magistrates put these Laws into Execution, which, for the Conveniency of the Citizens, are to be engraved on the Wall, where before they had been expos'd to publick View (x). This Law was enacted after Thrasybulus had expell'd the thirty Tyrants. See the former Part of this Chapter.

He that propounds a Law contrary to the common Good, shall be indicted (y). See as before.

The Theſmothetæ shall yearly assemble in the Repository of the Laws, and cautiously examine whether one Law bears any Contradiction to another; whether there be any Law unratified, or Duplicates about the same Things; if any of these shall occur in their Examination, it shall be written on a Tablet, and publish'd at the Statues of the Eponymi. Which done, by the Epistata's Order, the People shall vote which of them shall be made void; or ratified (a). See as before.

It shall be a capital Crime for any Man to cite a fictitious Law in any Court of Justice (c).

The Laws shall be in Force from the Archonship of Euclides (d). This Law was enacted after the Expulsion of the thirty Tyrants, and intimates, that what had been done, under their Usurpation, should not thenceforth be enquir'd into, an Act of Amnesty having been pass'd.

Diocles hath enacted, that the Laws enacted during the Freedom of the Commonwealth, before Euclides was Archon, and also those which were made in his Archonship, shall be in full Force henceforward. Those, which have been enacted since the Archonship of Euclides, or hereafter to be enacted, shall be in Force from the Day, wherein each of them shall be enacted, unless a particular Time, wherein their Force shall begin, is specify'd in the Law. Those, which are now in Force, shall be transcrib'd into the publick Records by the Notary of the Senate within thirty Days. C H A P. I.

Of the first Authors of Religious Worship in Greece.

HERODOTUS, in the second Book of his History, is of Opinion, that the Greeks derived their Religion from the Egyptians: But Plutarch (who loves to contradict that Author) peremptorily denies it (a) as being neither mention'd by Homer, nor any of the Ancients. Aristophanes (b) and Euripides (c) say, that Orpheus was the first that instructed the Grecians in all the Rites and Ceremonies of their Worship: He was a Thracian, and therefore, says Nonnus (d), Devotion was call'd Θρησκεία ἢ Θρησκία, because it was invented by a Thracian.

These, I think, were neither altogether in the Right, nor yet wholly mistaken; for as the exact Agreement betwixt some of the Grecian Ceremonies, and the religious Worship of Thrace, makes it probable that one was derived from the other; so, on the other Side, the Conformity of some other Parts of the Grecian Religion to that of the Egyptians doth plainly argue, that they were fetch'd from Egypt; but, that the whole System of the Grecian Religion should be borrow'd from either

(a) De Herodot. malevol. (b) Ranis. (c) Rheso. (d) Ξωαγγ. ἰς σφ. in Stel. I. Thrace,

Thrace, or Egypt, or any one Country, is improbable, if not impossible; as will evidently appear to every one that considers the great Variety of Religions in Greece, where almost every City had different Gods, and different Modes of Worship. 'Tis much more probable, that Greece, being inhabited by Colonies from divers Nations, did borrow from every one of these some Part of their religious Ceremonies: Thus the Thebans, being descended from the Phœnicians, retain'd a great Part of their Worship, and the Argives are thought to have been instructed in the Egyptian Religion by Danaus, and his Followers. Cecrops, the Founder of Athens, who was the first that worship'd Jupiter by the Name of Ὑπαίθε, the Supreme(e), and introduced Civility among the barbarous Athenians, was likewise an Egyptian; whence some think he had the Title of διδυμῆς, one with two Natures; ὅτι Αἰγυπτίῳ ἂν τὰς δύο γλώσσας ἤπισατο, because, being an Ægyptian, he spoke two (that is, the Egyptian and Athenian) Languages. Phoroneus, who is by some (f) reported to have brought the Use of Temples, Altars, and Sacrifices into Greece, was of the same Nation. And so many of the Egyptian Ceremonies and Customs were receiv'd at Athens, that one of the Comedians upbraids the Athenians, that Αἰγυπῖον τὴν πόλιν ἑαυτῶν πεποιήκασιν ἀντὶ Ἀθηνῶν.

They had made their City to be Ægypt instead of Athens. Add to this, that the Grecians in general, and the Athenians in particular, were so excessively superstitious, that they would not be content to worship their ancient Deities, but frequently consecrated new ones of their own making; and, beside these, assum'd into the Number of their own the Gods of all the Nations with whom they had any Commerce; inso-much that even in Hesiod's Time they were τρεῖς μύριοι, thirty thousand,

Τρεῖς γὰρ μύριοι εἰσὶν ἐπὶ χθονὶ περικυβερτήεσσι
 Ἀθάνατοι Ζηνὸς, ρύλακες μερόπων ἀνθρώπων.

There are thirty thousand Gods inhabiting the Earth, who are Subjects of Jupiter, and Guardians of Men (g); and tho', as Isocrates informs us (h), the ancient Athenians thought their Religion consisted chiefly in the Observation of the Rites and Ceremonies deliver'd to them by their Ancestors, yet there was a Custom that oblig'd them to entertain a great many strange Gods; whence it was that they religiously observed the Θεοξένια, or Feast of all the strange Gods; which was also celebrated at Delphos, as Athenæus witnesseth (i). Nay, so fearful were the Athenians of omitting any, that, as Pausanias (k) tells us, they erected Altars to unknown Gods. It may be objected, that they condemn'd Socrates for no other Crime than worshipping strange Gods, for that this was his Accusation Laertius witnesseth in his Life. But to this it is reply'd, that tho' they were so desirous of new Deities, yet none were worship'd, till they had been approved, and admitted by the Areopagites, as Harpocration(l) has observed; and thence was it, that when St. Paul preach'd among them Jesus and the Resurrection, he was summon'd to appear before this Council, to give an Account of his new Doctrine.

C H A P. II.

Of the Temples, Altars, Images, Groves, Asyla, and Sacred Fields.

THE first Generations of Men had neither Temples, nor Statues, for their Gods, but worship'd towards Heaven in the open Air. The Persians, even in Ages, when Temples were common in all other Countries, ὅτι ἐκ ἀνθρώπου φύσεως ἐνόμισαν τὰς Θεούς, καὶ θάπνη οἱ Ἕλληνες. not thinking the Gods to be of human Shape, as did the Greeks, had no Temples(m); which was the Reason, as some think, why Xerxes burn'd and demolish'd the Temples of Greece. For the Persians thought it absurd to confine the Gods within Walls, quorum hic Mundus omnis Templum esset ac Domus; whose House and Temple was this whole World, to use the Words of Cicero(n). The Greeks, and most other Nations, worship'd their Gods upon the Tops of high Mountains. Hence, Jupiter, in Homer, commends Hector for the many Sacrifices, which he had offer'd upon the Top of Ida (o):

— ὅς μοι πολλὰ βωῶν ἐπ' ἠμεῖ' ἔκηεν
 Ἰδῆς ἐν κορυφήσιν πολλυπύρχα, ἀλλοίε δ' αὐτῆ
 Ἐν βόλει ἀκροτάτῃ—

Strabo observes, that the Persians had neither Images nor Altars, but only sacrific'd to the Gods ἐν ὑψηλῷ τόπῳ, upon some high Place(p). Thus Cyrus, in Xenophon(q), sacrificeth to Paternal Jupiter, the Son, and the rest of the Gods, upon the Summits of Mountains, ὡς Πέρσαι θύουσιν, as the Persians are wont to sacrifice. The Nations, which liv'd near Judæa, sacrific'd also upon the Tops of Mountains. Balak, King of Moab, carry'd Balaam to the Top of Bahal, and other Mountains, to sacrifice to the Gods, and curse Israel from thence(r). The same Custom is attested in almost innumerable Places in the sacred Scriptures: But I shall only add one Testimony more, whence the Antiquity of this Custom will appear. Abraham was commanded by God, to offer Isaac his Son for a Burnt-Offering upon one of the Mountains in the Land of Moriab (f). In the latter Ages, the Temples were often built upon the Summits of Mountains. Thus it is observ'd of the Trojan Temples, in which the foremention'd Sacrifices are suppos'd to have been offer'd by Hector. And both at Athens and Rome, the most sacred Temples stood in the most eminent Part of the City. It is farther observable, that very high Mountains were commonly held sacred to Saturn or Jupiter, and sometimes to other Gods, particularly to Apollo, as we are inform'd by Homer, who thus addresseth to him :

Πᾶσαι ἢ σκοπιαί τε φίλαι, καὶ πρόωρον ἀνεσι
 Ἰηλῶν ὄρεων (f). —————

Concerning this Custom, I have more copiously treated in my Commentary upon Lycophron (t). What was the Occasion and Original of it may be disputed. However, it appears to have been continued in the Heathen World; because the Tops of Mountains approach'd nearest to the Heavens, the Seat of the Gods. Hence Tacitus, in his Annals, speaks of certain Mountains, which did maxime caelo appropinquare, presesque mortalium à Deo nusquam proprius audiri, come exceedingly near to the Heavens, and that there was in no Place a nearer Passage for the Prayers of Men to the Gods, than from them. And Lucian expressly affirms, that the Priests chiefly frequented such Places, Ὅτι ἤδη εὐχῶν ἀσχύθον ἐπαύεσιν οἱ Θεοὶ, because the Gods did thence more easily hear their Prayers. Who it was that erected the first Temple, is not agreed by ancient Writers. Some ascribe it to Phoroneus, the Egyptian, others to Morops, others, among whom is Varro, to Æacus, the Son of Jupiter (u). Some will have Jupiter to have been the first who built Temples, and on that Account to be reputed the first and principal God. The Egyptians refer the Invention to Isis, the Phrygians to Ufo. Others rather chuse to derive it from Cecrops, the Founder of Athens, or Dionysus, otherwise call'd Bacchus. Some mention the Arcadians, or Phrygians, or Thracians, or Cretans, as the first Founders of Temples. Others name, in particular, Melisseus, King of Crete. Lastly, That I be not farther tedious, many are of Opinion, that Temples owe their first Original to the superstitious Reverence and Devotion, paid by the Ancients to the Memory of their deceased Friends, Relations, and Benefactors (w); and, as most of the Gods were Men consecrated upon the Account of some publick Benefit conferr'd on Mankind, so most of the Heathen Temples are thought to have been, at first, only stately Monuments, erected in Honour of the Dead. Thus the Temple of Pallas, in the Tower of the City Larissa, was the Sepulchre of Acrisius; Cecrops was interr'd in the Acropolis of Athens, and Erichthonius in the Temple of Minerva Polias, to mention no more. A farther Confirmation of this is, that those Words, which, in their proper Acceptation, signify no more than a Tomb, or Sepulchre, are by ancient Writers applied to the Temples of the Gods. Thus Lycophron, a noted Affecter of obsolete Words, has us'd (x) Τύμβῳ:

————— Τύμβῳ δ' αὐτὴν ἐκώσσει μέγας
 Ὀπλοσμίας, σφασαῖσιν ἠνυρεπτεσμήνον.

'Twas now, when, fatigu'd with the Toil of War,

Where he speaks of Diomedes, who, at his Return from Troy, was laid in Wait for by his Wife Ægialea, and forc'd to take Sanctuary in the Temple of Juno. I will give you but one Instance more, and that out of Virgil (a):

————— Tumulum antiquæ Ceresis, sedemque sacratam

The Temple and the hallow'd Seat
Of ancient Ceres we approach'd. —————

Nor is it any Wonder, that Monuments should at length be converted into Temples, when, at every common Sepulchre, it was usual to offer Prayers, Sacrifices, and Libations; of which more hereafter.

Temples were built and adorn'd with all possible Splendor and Magnificence, no Pains, no Charge was spar'd upon them, or any Part of Divine Worship. This they did, partly out of the great Respect they had for the Gods, to whom they thought nothing more acceptable than costly Ornaments; and partly, that they might create a Reverence of the Deities in those, who came to pay their Devotions there. The Lacedæmonians only had a Law amongst them, that every one should serve the Gods with as little Expence as he could, herein differing from all other Grecians; and Lycurgus being ask'd, for what Reason he made this Institution, so disagreeable to the Sentiments of all other Men; answer'd, Lest at any time the Service of the Gods should be intermitted; for he fear'd, that if Religion should be as expensive, as in the other Parts of Greece, it might some Time or other happen, that the Divine Worship, out of the Covetousness of some, and Poverty of others, would be neglected; And wisely considered, that magnificent Edifices, and costly Sacrifices, were not so pleasing to the Gods, as the true Piety, and unfeign'd Devotion of their Worshipers. This Opinion of his was confirm'd by the Oracle of Hammon (b); for the Athenians being worsted by the Lacedæmonians in many Encounters, both at Land and Sea, sent to Jupiter Hammon, to enquire what Means they had best use to obtain Victory over their Enemies; and withal to ask him, why the Athenians, who, said they, serve the Gods with more Pomp and Splendor than all the Grecians beside, should undergo so many Misfortunes, whilst the Lacedæmonians, whose Worship is very mean and slovenly, are always crown'd with Success and Victory? The Oracle made them no other Answer, than that the honest, unaffected Service of the Lacedæmonians was more acceptable to the Gods, than all the splendid and costly Devotions of other People. The Reader will pardon this Digression, since it doth so fully and clearly set forth the Temper of two of the most flourishing States of Greece.

Sometimes the same Temple was dedicated to several Gods, who were thence terni'd σύνναοι, or συνοικέτας, as they, who had the same Altar in common, were call'd ὁμοβόμιοι. Thus we find in the Medal mention'd by Saulertus (c), with the following Inscription:

(a) Æneid. II. v. 742. (b) Plato Alcib. II. (c) Libro de Sacrificiis veter.

ΔΙ ΗΛΙΩ
ΜΕΓΑΛΩΙ
ΣΑΡΑΠΙΔΙ
ΚΑΙ ΤΟΙΣ ΚΥΝΝΑ
ΟΙΣ ΘΕΟΙΣ.

To Jupiter, the Sun, Great Serapis, and the Gods who cohabit in the same Temple. Thus also were join'd in one Temple Isis and Apis. In another, Ceres, Bacchus, and Phæbus. In another at Rome, Jupiter Capitolinus, Juno, and Minerva. In another, Apollo Palatinus, Latona, and Diana. In another, Hercules and the Muses. In another, Venus and Cupid. In another, Castor and Pollux. In another, Æsculapius and Apollo. In another, the Sun and Moon. In another, Mars and Venus. In another, Pan and Ceres: To mention no more Examples.

Temples were built after that Manner, which they thought most agreeable to the Gods, to whom they design'd they should be dedicated: For, as Trees, Birds, and other Animals were thought sacred to particular Deities, so almost every God had a Form of Building peculiar to himself, and which they thought more acceptable to him, than any other. For Instance, the Dorick Pillars were sacred to Jupiter, Mars, and Hercules; the Ionick, to Bacchus, Apollo, and Diana; the Corinthian, to Vesta the Virgin. I deny not, but that sometimes all these were made use of in the same Temple; but this was either in those Temples which were sacred to more Gods than one, or to some of those Gods, who were thought to preside over several Things; for the Ancients, believing that the World was govern'd by Divine Providence, ascrib'd the Management of every particular Affair to this, or that Deity; thus Mars was thought to preside over War, Venus over Love; and to some of their Gods they assign'd the Care over divers Things; so Mercury was the God of Merchants, Orators, and Thieves; Minerva was the Goddess of Warriors, Scholars, and Artificers, &c. and therefore, 'tis no Wonder, that in some of the Temples dedicated to her, there were three Rows of Pillars, the first of the Dorick, the second of the Corinthian, the third of the Ionick Order.

As to the Places of Temples, it being the common Opinion, that some of the Gods delight in Woods, others in Mountains, others in Vallies, others in Fields, others in Rivers or Fountains; it was customary to dedicate the Temples in Places most agreeable to the Temper of the Deities, who should inhabit them. Hence the People hop'd for fruitful Seasons, and all Sorts of Prosperity, wherever the Temples stood. Hence Libanius makes heavy Complaints against the Christians, who demolish'd the Pagan Temples, whereby, as he imagin'd, the Fields became unfruitful, the Temples being the very Life of the Fields; and the Husbandmen, whose only Confidence for themselves, their Wives, their Children, their Corn, their Cattle, their Plantations, was plac'd in Temples, were miserably disappointed of their Expectations (d). The Temples in the Country were generally furrounded with Groves sacred to the tutelar Deity of the Place, where, before the Invention of Temples, the Gods were worship'd; but when these could not be had, as in Cities and large Towns, they were built amongst, and even adjoining to the common Houses, only the Tanagræans thought this inconsistent with the Reverence due to those holy Mansions of the Gods, and therefore took Care to have their Temples founded in Places free from the Noise and Hurry of Business; for which (e) Pausanias commends them. Wherever they stood, if the Situation of the Place would permit, it was contrived, that, the Windows being open, they might receive the Rays of the rising Sun (f). The Frontispiece was placed towards the West, and the Altars and Statues towards the other End, that so they, who came to worship, might have their Faces towards them, because it was an ancient Custom among the Heathens to worship with their Faces towards the East, of which hereafter. This is affirm'd by Clemens of Alexandria (g), and Hyginus the Freedman of Augustus Cæsar (h), to have been the most ancient Situation of Temples, and that the placing the Front of Temples towards the East was only a Device of later Ages. Nevertheless, the Way of building Temples towards the East, so as the Doors being open'd should receive the rising Sun, was very ancient (i), and in later Ages almost universal; Almost all the Temples were then so contrived, that the Entrance and Statues should look towards the East, and they, who paid their Devotion, towards the West; as we are expressly told by Porphyrus (k). Thus the Eastern Nations commonly built their Temples, as appears from the Temple of the Syrian Goddess in Lucian, the Temple at Memphis, built by Psammetichus King of Ægypt in Diodorus the Sicilian, that of Vulcan, erected by another Ægyptian King, in the second Book of Herodotus, and (to mention no more) the Temple at Jerusalem (l). If the Temples were built by the Side of a River, they were to look towards the Banks of it (m); if near the Highway, they were to be so order'd, that Travellers might have a fair Prospect of them, and pay their Devotions to the God as they pass'd-by.

Temples were divided into two Parts, the Sacred and Profane; the latter they call'd τὸ ἕξω περιεῖραντήριον, the other τὸ ἔσω. Now this περιεῖραντήριον, was a Vessel (usually of Stone or Brass) fill'd with holy Water (n), with which all those, that were admitted to the Sacrifices, were besprinkled, and beyond which it was not lawful for any one that was βέβηλον, or profane, to pass. Some say it was placed in the Entrance of the Ἀδυτον, which was the inmost Recess of the Temple, into which none enter'd but the Priest, call'd also Ἀνάκτορον, saith Pollux; whence βέβηλον, τὸ πᾶν, is, by Phavorinus, said to be call'd in Opposition to this Adytum. But Casaubon (o) tells us, that the περιεῖραντήριον was placed at the Door of the Temple: And this Opinion seems the more probable, because all Persons that were ἀβέβηλοι, or unpolluted, were permitted to pass beyond it, which they could not have done, had it been placed at the Entrance of the Adytum.

(e) Bæticis. (f) Vitruv. lib. IV. cap. 5. (g) Strom. VIII. (h) De agrorum limit. conf. lib. I. (i) Dionysius Thrax. (k) Libro de antro Nympharum. (l) Conf. hujus Archæologiæ edit. Lat. p. 199, 200. (m) Ibidem. (n) Suidas, Phavorin. (o) In Theopb. Charact.

The Word $\Sigma\eta\kappa\delta\varsigma$ is variously used. Ammonius (p) and Pollux (q) say, that it properly signifies a Temple dedicated to an Hero, or Demi-god: By Hefychius and Suidas, it is expounded, $\delta\ \epsilon\upsilon\delta\omicron\tau\epsilon\rho\ \Theta\ \tau\acute{\omega}\ \Theta\ \tau\delta\ \iota\epsilon\zeta\epsilon\iota$, the inner Part of the Temple, so that it should seem to have been the same with Αδυτον . The Word, in its most proper Acceptation, is used for a Sheepfold; and because the Images of the Gods were, according to most ancient Custom, placed in the Middle of the Temple, and close rail'd in on every Side, this Place, as some are of Opinion, from the Likeness it has to a Sheepfold, was call'd $\Sigma\eta\kappa\delta\varsigma$, which in Time came to signify the whole Temple, the Part being put for the Whole. In the same Manner was Εσία , i. e. the Fire-place, or Hearth, used for the whole House.

Furthermore, belonging to Temples there was a Place term'd in Greek Αρχεϊον , by some translated sumnum templum, which was a Repository or Treasury both for the Service of the Church, and others who desir'd to secure Money or other Things there, as was done by Xenophon, who committed his Treasure to the Custody of the Priest of Diana at Ephesus. Hence those Epithets are given it by Pollux (r), $\mu\epsilon\gamma\alpha\lambda\omicron\omega\lambda\omicron\sigma\tau\omicron\nu$, $\pi\omicron\lambda\upsilon\chi\rho\upsilon\sigma\omicron\nu$, $\alpha\rho\chi\alpha\iota\omicron\pi\lambda\epsilon\tau\omicron\nu$, &c.

The old Scholia upon Sophocles (s), and out of them Phavorinus, thus describes the Temples: Ναος , and Ιερόν , or the whole Edifice, in which are contain'd, Βωμόν , the Altar, on which they offer'd their Oblations: Περίναον , the Porch, in which usually stood an Altar, or Image: And Τέμεν\Theta , the Place upon which the Image of the chief God was erected.

As, among the most ancient Egyptians, $\alpha\zeta\omicron\lambda\omicron\nu\omicron\iota\ \nu\omicron\iota\ \eta\sigma\alpha\nu$, the Temples were without Statues; if Lucian (t) may be credited; so also the Greeks worship'd their Gods without any visible Representation till the Time of Cecrops, the Founder of Athens, who, according to Eusebius's Account, lived about the Age of Moses. The most ancient Representations of the Gods were exceedingly rude and agreeable to the Ignorance of those Ages. The Scythians worship'd a Sort of Sword call'd $\alpha\kappa\iota\nu\acute{\alpha}\nu\eta\varsigma$; the Arabians a Stone, the Persians a River (u).

The Idol was at first commonly a rude Stock, whence it is call'd $\Sigma\alpha\nu\iota\varsigma$ by St. Clemens of Alexandria (w). Such an one was that of Junio Samia, which was afterwards in the Magistracy of Procles turn'd into a Statue. Sometimes it was a Stone. Pausanias (x) tells us, that in Achaia there were kept very religiously thirty square Stones, on which were engraven the Names of so many Gods, but without any Picture, or Effigies. In another Place he speaks of a very ancient Statue of Venus at Delos, which, instead of Feet, had only a square Stone. No Sort of Idol was more common than that of oblong Stones erected, and thence term'd $\kappa\iota\omicron\nu\omicron\epsilon\varsigma$, Pillars. Several Examples are mention'd by the foremention'd Clemens, as also by Eusebius (y). In the Eastern Countries these sort of Representations seem to have been exceedingly frequent. In some Parts of Aegypt they were to be seen on each Side of the Highways (z). In the Temple of Heliogabalus, i. e. the Sun, in Syria, there was one pretended to have fall'n down from Heaven (a). Such a Stone is feign'd by the Poets to have been swallow'd by Saturn instead of his Son Jupiter. Hence came the Worship paid to them. Others rather derive it from the Appointment of Uranus, the first God, and Father of Saturn (b). One Thing is remarkable, both in these Stones, and others of different Figures, as particulatly in the square Stone, which represented the God Mars at Petra in Arabia, that their Colour was most commonly black (c), which seems to have been thought in those Times most solemn and becoming Things dedicated to religious Uses. They were call'd Βασιλίαι or Βασιύλοι (d), which Name seems to be derived from the Phœnician Language, wherein Bethel signifies the Hcuse of God. And some are of Opinion, that their true Original is to be derived from the Pillar of Stone, which the Patriarch Jacob erected at Bethel (e). Most of the Barbarous Nations worship'd Mountains, or rude Stocks of Trees, or unform'd Stones (f). Thus Tacitus affirms, that in Germany the Images of the Gods consisted è stipibus rudibus, & impolito robore, of rude Trunks, and unpolish'd Oak (g). Thus Lucan also describes the Gods of Mossilia:

————— Simulacraq; mista Deorum
Arte carent, cæsiq; extant informia truncis.

And Themistius (b) hath told us, that all the Grecian Images till Dædalus's Time were unform'd; he it was that first made two separate Feet, whereas before they were but one Piece; whence it was reported (saith Palæphatus) that Dædalus form'd moving and walking Statues. At the first therefore they were only call'd (i) Ἐόανα, διὰ τὸ ἀποξέειδαι, because they were shaven; and this Word properly denotes an Idol, that is, ἐξεσμένον, or shav'd out of Wood, or Stone, says Hesychius (k). In After-ages, when the Art of Graving and Carving was invented, they changed the rude Lumps into Figures resembling living Creatures, generally Men, and then an Image was call'd Βῆτας, διὰ τὸ βροτῶ ἰοικένας, because it was like a Man (l). Nevertheless, in more refin'd Ages, such of the unform'd Images, as were preserv'd, were reverenc'd for their Antiquity, and prefer'd to the most curious Pieces of modern Art (m).

The Matter of which Statues were made was, amongst the ancient Greeks, generally Wood, as Plutarch and Pausanias inform us; the latter of which reports, that he observ'd these Trees, for the most Part, to be made Use of for this Purpose, viz. the Eben, Cypress, Cedar, Oak, Yew, and Box-trees. To these Theophrastus (n) adds the Root of the Olive-tree, of which, he says, the lesser Images were usually compos'd. It is also observ'd, that those Trees, which were sacred to any God, were generally thought most acceptable to him, and therefore Jupiter's Statue Statue was made of Oak, Venus's of Myrtle, Hercules's of Poplar, Minnerva's of the Olive-tree, &c. These Observations are (I think) for the most Part true, but not so universally, as that they should never fail: Sometimes they were made of Stone, and not only of common, but also of precious Stones; sometimes of black Stone, whereby was signified the Invisibility of the Gods. Marble and Ivory were frequently made Use of, and sometimes also Clay and Chalk, and last of all, Gold, Silver, Brass, and all other Metals were put to this Use. The Forms and Postures of the Statues are uncertain, being commonly made in Imitation of the poetical Descriptions of the Gods, especially those in Homer, whose Authority was most sacred.

The Place of the Images was in the Middle of the Temple, where they stood on Pedestals raised above the Height of the Altar, and were inclosed with Rails; whence this Place was call'd $\Sigma\eta\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$. And that the Images were placed thus, Virgil bears me Witness, when he saith, Tum foribus Divæ, media testudine templi.

Then at the Chancel Door, where Juno stands.

Where, by the fores Divæ, is to be understood the Entrance of the $\Theta\omega\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$: And another of the Poets, where he talks of erecting a Temple, saith,

In medio mihi Cæsar erit——

I'll Cæsar's Statue in the midst erect.

More Instances might be produced, were not this Custom too well known, to stand in need of any farther Confirmation.

$\Theta\omega\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$, among the Greeks, is a Word of larger Extent than Altare among the Latins; for this, in its proper Signification, only denotes the Place, on which they sacrificed to the Celestial Gods, being raised up high from the Ground, and therefore call'd Altare, ab altitudine, from its Height; but $\Theta\omega\mu\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$ is used to signify not only this high Altar, but those lower ones call'd in Latin, Aræ. These Altars differ'd according to the Diversity of the Gods to whom they were consecrated, for the $\Theta\epsilon\omega\iota\ \kappa\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\sigma\tau\iota\omega\iota$, or Celestial Gods, had their Altars raised up a great Height from the Ground, insomuch that Pausanias(o) tells us, the Altar of Olympian Jupiter was almost twenty-two Feet high. Porphyrus makes no Distinction betwixt these and the Altars of the $\Theta\epsilon\omega\iota\ \chi\epsilon\tau\epsilon\sigma\tau\iota\omega\iota$, or Terrestrial Gods. But though they are both signified by the same Word, yet they seem not to have been of equal Height. To the Heroes they sacrificed upon Altars close to the Ground, which the Greeks call'd Ἐχάστει , being only one Step high (p). The subterranean, or infernal Gods, call'd Ἰσοχθόνιοι , had, instead of Altars, little Ditches or Trenches digged or ploughed up for that Purpose; these the Greeks call'd Λάκκοι , and Βόθρεσι . Porphyrus adds a fifth, telling us, that the Nymphs, and such-like Deities, instead of Altars, had Ἀντραί , or Caverns, where religious Worship was paid to them: $\text{διὰ τὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς καταλειβόμενα ὕδατα; ὡς αἱ Ναιάδες περὶ τὴν Νύμφαν, by reason of the Waters, which are distill'd into the Caverns, and whereof the Nymphs call'd Naiades are Presidents.$

The Altars were always lower than the Statues of the Gods. They were made commonly of Earth heap'd together, sometimes of Ashes, as was that of Olympian Jupiter beforementioned, which, Pausanias (a) saith, was made of the Ashes of burnt Sacrifices. Another of Ashes was dedicated at Thebes to Apollo, who had hence the Name of $\Sigma\pi\acute{o}\delta\iota\textcircled{G}$, as we learn from the same Author. Lastly, any other durable Materials. As Horn in the famous Altar at Telos; Brick in one mention'd by Pausanias (b); but chiefly and most commonly Stones. Before Temples were in Use, Altars were sometimes erected in Groves, sometimes in other Places; and Eustathius (c), upon the second Iliad, tells us, that they were often erected in the Highways, for the Convenience of Travellers. The Terrestrial Gods had their Altars in low Places, but the Celestial were worshipp'd on the Tops of Mountains. And as for want of Temples they built their Altars in the open Air; so for want of Altars they anciently us'd to sacrifice upon the (d) bare Ground; and sometimes upon a Turf of green Earth; which is call'd cespes vivus, a living Turf, by Horace. And the Sacrifices, offer'd without Altars, were term'd $\acute{\alpha}\pi\omicron\upsilon\acute{\omega}\mu\omicron\iota$ $\delta\upsilon\sigma\iota\alpha\iota$, as we are inform'd by Hesychius and Phavorinus.

The Form of Altars was not always the same. Pausanias (e) in one Place mentions an oblong ($\acute{\omicron}\mu\mu\acute{\eta}\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$) Altar dedicated to the Parcæ: In another (f), a square Altar upon the Top of Mount Citheron. And from ancient Medals it appears, that other Altars were of a round Figure. The most ancient Altars were adorn'd with Horns. Nonnus (g) introduces Agave offering a Sheep by the Direction of Cadmus $\epsilon\upsilon\kappa\epsilon\rho\alpha\alpha\omega\ \pi\alpha\epsilon\zeta\ \acute{\omega}\mu\acute{\omega}$, upon an Altar beautified with Horns. The Figures of Roman Altars upon Medals are never without Horns (h); and the Altars which remain in the Ruins of old Rome have the same Ornament (i). And Moses was commanded to erect an Altar with four Horns (k). These Horns serv'd for various Uses. The Victims were fasten'd to them. Suppliants, who fled to the Altar for Refuge, caught hold of the Horns. Yet it is not certain they were chiefly and originally intended for these Purposes. Some derive them from a Practice of the first Age, wherein Horns were an Ensign and Mark of Power and Dignity. Hence the Pictures of the most ancient Gods and Heroes, as also those of Rivers, were commonly adorn'd with Horns. The same are often found upon the Medals of Serapis, Isis, Jupiter Hammon, and Bacchus; as also upon the Coins of the Persian Kings, and of Alexander and his Successors. We are inform'd by Clemens of Alexandria (l), that Alexander sometimes wore Horns, as a Token of his Divine Extraction. And the Phœnician Accounts relate, that Astarte, one of the most ancient Phœnician Queens, us'd to wear upon her Head Bulls Horns, $\acute{\omega}\varsigma$ $\beta\alpha\sigma\iota\lambda\epsilon\acute{\iota}\alpha\varsigma$ $\pi\alpha\epsilon\zeta\acute{\omicron}\sigma\eta\mu\omicron\nu$, as an Ensign of Royalty (m).

It was customary to engrave upon Altars the Name or proper Ensign or Character of the Deity, to whom they belong'd. This we find done to the Athenian Altar, upon which St. Paul observ'd this Inscription, Αγνωστῷ Θεῷ, To the unknown God. Sometimes the Occasion of the Dedication, with other Circumstances, was express'd. Thus in the Roman Altar, upon which was found this Inscription,

C. JULIUS ANICETUS
SOLI DIVINO SUSCEPTO VOTO
ANIMO LUBENS DD.

Caius Julius Anicetus willingly dedicates this Altar to the Divine Sun in Performance of a Vow.

Some Altars were ἔμπυρσι, design'd for Sacrifices made by Fire. Others ἄπυρσι, without Fire, and ἀναιμάκτοι, without Blood: Upon which neither Fire nor Blood could lawfully be placed, but only Cakes, Fruits of the Earth, and inanimate Things. An Example of these Altars we find in the following Verse of Orpheus (n):

Πρῶτα μὲν ἐν ἀπεύδοντας, ἀναιμάκταν ἐπὶ βωμῶν.

Another, near the Altar of Horn at Delos, sacred to Apollo Genitor, upon which Pythagoras, who thought it unlawful to put Animals to Death, us'd to sacrifice, is mention'd by Diogenes Laertius (o). Another dedicated to Jupiter Ὑπατός, the Supreme, in the Time and by the Order of Cecrops, King of Athens, we find in Pausanias (p). Lastly, To forbear the Mention of any more Examples, Paphian Venus had an Altar, which was ἀναιμάκτος, free from Blood, it being unlawful to offer Animals upon it: But not ἄπυρτος, void of Fire; for the Goddess was worship'd solis precibus & igne puro, only with Prayers, and pure Fire, as Tacitus affirms (q).

The Manner of consecrating Altars and Images was the same, and is thus described by the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (r); a Woman, dress'd in a Garment of divers Colours, brought upon her Head a Pot of sodden Pulse, as Beans, Pease, or the like, which they gratefully offer'd to the Gods, in Remembrance of their ancient Diet. But this Custom seems to have been more especially practis'd in the Consecration of the Ἑρμῆς, or Statues of Mercury, and then only by the poorer Sort, as the Comedian intimates, when he speaks of the Consecration of another Image in his Play entitled, Peace (s):

Χο. Ἀγε δὴ τίνων ἔντευθενὶ ποιητέον;
 Τρ. Τί δ' ἄλλα γ', ἢ ταύτην χύτρας ἰδρυτέν;
 Χο. Χύτρασιν, ὥσπερ μεμψύφων Ἑρμίδιον,

Where the *Scholias*t observes, that sometimes their Consecrations were more expensive, being perform'd with more sumptuous Offerings, and Ceremonies. But these, like the other Parts of Divine Worship, were varied according to the Condition of the Worshipers, and the Nature or Humour of the Deities. To give one Instance; Athenæus, in the IXth Book of his Deipnosophists, tells us, that Jupiter Ctesias's Statue was consecrated in this Manner: They took a new Vessel with two Ears, upon each of which they bound a Chaplet of white Wool, and another of yellow upon the fore Part of it, and cover'd the Vessel; then they pour'd out before it a Libation call'd Ambrosia, which was a Mixture of Water, Honey, and all Sorts of Fruit. The Truth of the Matter is this; The primitive Greeks, according to their usual Frugality, consecrated the Statues of the Gods with very little Expende. Afterwards when they increased in Wealth, and fell into a more sumptuous Way of living, more pompous and costly Ceremonies were, by Degrees, introduc'd in their religious Worship. Only the poorer Sort, out of Necessity, still adher'd to the ancient Customs: Especially when the meaner Sort of Statues, such as were those of Mercury, which stood in the publick Streets, were to be dedicated. In former Ages, even the Images and Altars of Jupiter were consecrated in the same Manner with the Mercuries. This is plain from the Verses cited by the *Scholias*t of Aristophanes (t), out of the Danaïdes of that Poet:

Μαρτύρομαι δὲ Ζηνὸς Ἐρκίῃ χύτρας,
Παρ' αἷς ὁ βωμὸς ἔτ' ἰδρύθη ποτὲ.
Πορφυροῖς δὲ καὶ ποικίλοις ἱματίοις
Ἐπόμπευον —————

But the most usual Manner of Consecration was perform'd by putting a Crown upon them, anointing them with Oil, and then offering Prayers and Oblations to them. Sometimes they added an Execration against all that should presume to prophane them, and inscribed upon them the Name of the Deity, and the Cause of their Dedication. In this Manner the Spartan Virgins, in Theocritus's eighteenth Idyllium, promise to consecrate a Tree to Helena; for it was customary to dedicate Trees, or Plants, after the same Manner with Altars and Statues:

Πρῶταί τοι σήφανον λωτῶ χαμαὶ αὐξομένοιο
Πλέξασαι, σκιερὰν καταδήσομαι ἐς πλατάνισον,
Πρῶται δ' ἀργυρέας ἐξ ὀλπίδ' ἔγχεθ' ὑγρὸν ἄλειπας
Λασδόμενοι, σαξέῃμες ὑπο σκιερὰν πλατάνισον, Γέφυρατα δ' ἐν φλοιῷ γεγράψεται (ὡς παριῶν τις Ἀγνοίῃ) Δωρισι, Σέβευ μ'. Ἐλένας φυτόν εἰμί.

(t) In Plur. loc. cit.

We'll search the Meads where humble Lotus grows,
 Then Chaplets weave, and twine them on the Bows ;
 On chequer'd Grass beneath the shady Bower,
 From costli'ft Vials sweetest Oils we'll pour ;
 And then in spreading Letters this indite,
I'm Helen's Plant, and Worship is my Right.

Ovid likewise, in the eighth Book of his Metamorphoses, speaks of adorning them with Ribbands,

*Stabat in his ingens annofo robore quercus
 Una nemus ; vittæ mediam, memoresque tabellæ,
 Sertaque cingebant, voti argumenta potentis.*

In these a well-grown Oak majestick stood,
 Whose spreading Arms alone compos'd a Wood,
 With Ribbons grac'd, and Crowns th' undoubted Proof
 Of Vows obtain'd.———

H. H.

The Act of Consecration chiefly consisted in the Unction, which was a Ceremony derived from the most primitive Antiquity. The sacred Tabernacle, with all the Vessels and Utensils, as also the Altar and the Priests themselves were consecrated in this Manner by Moses at the Divine Commands (u). It is well known, that the Jewish Kings and Prophets were admitted to their several Offices by Unction. The Patriarch Jacob, by the same Rite, consecrated the Altars which he made Use of (w); in doing which it is more probable, that he follow'd the Tradition of his Forefathers, than that he was the Author of this Custom. The same, or something like, was also continued down to the Times of Christianity. We find that in Theodoret's Time, superstitious Women anointed the Balisters (υγυλιδες) of the Churches, and the Repositories of Martyrs (x). And in the primitive Ages of the Church, Oil was used upon some other Occasions, which do not belong to this Place (y).

At the Time of Consecration it was customary to offer great Numbers of Sacrifices, and to make sumptuous Entertainments. Thus the Ægyptians consecrated their God Apis, which was an Ox (z). In the same Manner we find the Temple of Solomon dedicated. At the Consecration of Moses's Tabernacle, an Oblation was presented by all the Jewish Princes (a). And when the golden Calf, and the Altar erected before it, were to be consecrated, Aaron made Proclamation and said, Tomorrow is a Feast of the Lord. And they rose up early on the Morrow, and offer'd Burnt-offerings, and brought Peace-offerings; and the People sat down to eat and drink, and rose up to play (b).

The Consecration of single Trees hath been already mention'd. It may here be farther observ'd, that Altars were often erected under the Shade of Trees. Thus we find the Altar of Jupiter Hercens placed within the Court of Priamus King of Troy.

(u) Exod. XI. 9, 10. Num. VII. 1. (w) Gen. XXVIII. 18. XXXV. 14. (x) Quæst. LXXIV. in Gen. (y) Jacob, (z) Suidas. (a) Num. VII. (b) Exod. XXXII. 5, 6.

But where Groves of Trees could be had, they were preferr'd before any other Place. It was so common to erect Altars and Temples in Groves, and to dedicate them to religious Uses, that ἅλα καλῆσι τὰ ἱερὰ πάλαι, all sacred Places, even those where no Trees were to be seen, were call'd Groves; as we learn from Strabo (d). And it seems to have been a general Custom, which prevail'd not only in Europe, but over all the Eastern Countries, to attribute a Sort of Religion to Groves. Hence, among other Precepts whereby the Jews were kept from the Imitation of the Pagan Religion, this was one; Thou shalt not plant thee a Grove of any Trees near unto the Altar of the Lord thy God(e). This Practice is thought to have been introduced into Greece from Phœnicia by Cadmus. And some are of Opinion, that hence Asora, a Village in Bœotia, where Hesiod was born, received its Name: For in the Scripture ΠΤΩΝ is the Name of a Grove; and ἄσκηγ is, by Hesychius, interpreted δρῦς ἀκαρπύη, a barren Oak. Several Causes are assign'd why Groves came into so general Request.

As, first, the Pleasantness of such Places was apt to allure the People, and to beget in them a Love for the religious Worship, which was paid there; especially in hot Countries, where nothing is more delightful and refreshing than cool Shades. For which Cause the sacred Groves consisted of tall and beautiful Trees, rather than such as yield Fruit. Hence Cyril does expressly distinguish τὸ ἀλωῶδες ξύλον, the Tree fit for Groves, from τὸ καρποφόρον, that which bears Fruit, it being the Custom to plant Groves, not with Vines or Fig-trees, or others which produce Fruit; but only with τὰ ἀκαρπύη ξύλα, Trees which afford no Fruit for human Use, τῶν ἱερῶν χάριν, merely for the Sake of Pleasure (f). Thus one of the Temples of Diana is described by Hærodotus (g) to stand within a Grove δένδρων μεγίστων, of the largest Trees. And the Way to Mercury's Temple was set on both Sides with δένδρα ἀφ' ἄστρου μύκτα, Trees reaching up to Heaven, as we are told by the same Historian. The same is farther confirm'd by the Description of Groves, which remain in the ancient Poets.

Secondly, The Solitude of Groves was thought very fit to create a religious Awe and Reverence in the Minds of the People. Thus we are told by Pliny, that in Groves, ipsa silentia adoramus, the very Silence of the Place becomes the Object of our Adoration (h). Seneca also observes, that when we come into such Places, illa proceritas sylvæ, & secretum loci, & admiratio umbræ, fidem Numinis facit: The Height of the Trees, the Solitude and Secrecy of the Place, and the Horror which the Shade strikes into us, does possess us with an Opinion that some Deity inhabits there (i). It may not be impertinent to add one Testimony more from Ovid, who speaks thus (k):

(c) Virg. Æneid. lib. II. ver. 512. (d) Geograph. lib. IX. (e) Deuteron. XVI. 21. (f) Cyrillus Homil. in Jerem. (g) Euterp. cap. 138. (h) Nat. Hist. lib. XII. cap. 1. (i) Lib. V. Epist. 4. cap. 4. (k) Fæstor. Lib. III.

Lucus Aventino suberat niger ilicis umbra, Quo possis viso dicere, Numen inest.

Thirdly, Some are of Opinion that Groves derived their Religion from the primitive Ages of Men, who lived in such Places before the Building of Houses. Thus Tacitus (l) reports of the ancient Germans, that they had no other Defence for their Infants against wild Beasts, or the Weather, than what was afforded ramorum nexu, by Boughs of Trees compacted together. All other Nations lived at first in the same Manner; which was derived from Paradise, the Seat of the first Parents of Mankind. And it is not unworthy Observation, that most of the Ceremonies used in Religion were at first taken from the Customs of human Life. Afterwards the Manners and Customs of Men changed, but the same Rites still were preserved in religious Worship, which it was thought a Sort of Irreverence to alter. Thus, from the Houses of Men, were derived the Temples and Habitations of the Gods; which were not built in the most primitive Ages, as hath been before observ'd, Men having not then invented the Art of making Houses. The Altars serv'd instead of Tables, and the Sacrifices were the Entertainments of the Gods. And it is farther observable, that the several Sorts of Things offer'd in Sacrifice were taken from their Use in human Food. The Animals most commonly eaten by Men were made Victims to the Gods: And those Ages, which were reported to have lived only on the Fruits of the Earth, are likewise said to have refrain'd from sacrificing Animals; which will farther appear in the fourth Chapter of this Book (m).

In latter Ages, when Cities began to be fill'd with People, and Men to delight in magnificent Edifices and costly Ornaments more than the Country and primitive Way of Living, Groves by Degrees came into Disuse. Yet such of the Groves as remain'd from former Times were still held in great Veneration, and reverenc'd the more for the Sake of their Antiquity. As in the early Times it was accounted an Act of Sacrilege to cut down any of the consecrated Trees, which appears from the Punishment inflict'd by Ceres upon Eriichonius for this Crime, whereof there is a prolix Relation in Callimachus (n); so in latter Ages, the same was thought a most grievous Wickedness; whereof it will be sufficient to mention this one Example, where Lucan speaks of Cæsar's Servants, in Allusion to the Fable of Lycurgus, who, endeavouring to destroy the Vines of Bacchus, cut off his own Legs;

*Sed fortes tremuere manus, motique verenda
Majestate loci, si robora sacra ferirent,
In sua credebant redituras membra secures.*

The Temples, Statues, and Altars were accounted so sacred, that to many of them the Privilege of protecting Offenders was granted; so that, if any Malefactor fled to them, it was accounted an Act of Sacrilege to force him thence, and they thought his Blood would be upon them that should do it; infomuch that those who kill'd the Followers of Cylon, who had plunder'd the Temple of Minerva, because they executed them hanging on the Altars, were ever after call'd Αλιτήσιοι, profane and impious (*). And in Ætolia, when Laodamia, who had fled for Protection to Diana's Altar, was kill'd in a Tumult of the People, there ensued a dreadful Famine, with civil and foreign Wars, till the whole Ætolian Nation was quite destroy'd. Milo, who kill'd Laodamia, fell into Distraction and Madness, and, having torn out his own Bowels with his Teeth, died on the twelfth Day after the Fact was committed (o). Hence, and from other Examples of the like Nature, it came to pass, that the Privileges of the Asyla were preserved inviolable; whence Tacitus complains, that the Græcian Temples were fill'd with the worst of Slaves, with insolvent Debtors, and Criminals who fled from Justice; and that no Authority was sufficient to force them thence (p). And that this was a very ancient Cause of Complaint, may be learn'd from the following Words of Ion in Euripides (q):

Φεῦ Δεινόν γέ, θνητοῖς τὸς νόμους ὡς οὐ καλῶς ἔθηκεν ὁ Θεός, οὐδ' ἀπὸ γνώμης σοφῆς,
 Τὸς μὲν γὰρ ἀδίκους βωμὸς οὐχ ἔζειν ἐχεῖν,
 Ἀλλ' ἐξελαύνειν· οὐδ' ἐ γὰρ φαίμεν καλὸν
 Θεῶν πονηρῶν χεῖρα· τοῖσι δ' ἐνδίκους
 Ἰερὰ καδίζειν, ὅστις ἠδίκητ' ἐχεῖν.
 Καὶ μὴ πῖ ταῦτ' οὗτ' ἴοντ' ἔχεν ἴσον,
 Τὸν τ' ἐδλὸν ὄντα, τὸν τὲ μὴ, Θεῶν πάρα.

How infinitely more wisely were the Jewish Asyla, or Cities of Refuge, order'd, in which they, who had been guilty of Manslaughter, were protected only till their Cause was brought to a fair Hearing, and then, if they appear'd to deserve Punishment, deliver'd up to Justice? When Pausanias King of Sparta, who had held a Correspondence with the King of Persia, and conspired against his native Country, fled to the Temple of Minerva Chalciaecus, the Lacedæmonians, unwilling both to offend the Goddess, and to let the Criminal escape, permitted him to remain in the Temple, but uncover'd it, and so left him to perish with Cold and Hunger. But how unusual this Way of Proceeding was, may appear from Pausanias (r), who informs us, μένον αὐτὸν ἱκετευσόντων τὴν Χαλκίοικον ἀμαρτεῖν ἀδείας· that of all who had fled for Protection to the Goddess Chalciaecus, he was the only Person who fail'd of it. Nevertheless, there are Instances in other Places, where the Doors of the Temples were shut, and the Roof uncover'd, in order to starve Criminals, who had taken Sanctuary there. Sometimes they were forced away by Fire, as hath been observed by the Scholiast of Euripi- des, where Hermione threatens Andromache, who had fled for Refuge to Thetis to drive her away by that Means (f) :

Πῦρ σοι περσοίσω, καὶ τὸ σὸν περσκέψομαι.

In the same Manner Lycus treats the Relations of Hercules (t) :

Αγ' οἱ μὲν Ἐλικῶν, εἰ δὲ Πιταρνασοῦ πηυχᾶς
 Τέμνεν ἄνωχθ' ἐλθόντας ὑλευγῆς δρυὸς
 Κορυμῆς· ἐπειδὴν εἴσκομιδῶσιν πύλαι,
 Βομὸν πᾶσιξ νήσαντες ἀμύρηξ ξύλα
 Ἐπιπύρατ' αὐτῶν, καὶ πυρῶτε σώματα.

In Imitation, and as an Improvement of this Passage, Lycus is introduced by Seneca, commanding not only the Family of Hercules, but the very Temples to be burnt. Which is an Exaggeration very agreeable to the Genius of that Poet, but quite contrary to the Manners of the Times he describes. His Words are these (*) :

Congerite fides ; templa supplicibus suis
 Injesta flagrent ; conjugem & totam gregem
 Consumat unus igne subjecto rokus.

There are several Examples of the same Custom in Plautus. When Tranio, the Slave of Theuropides, had fled to a Sanctuary, his Master threatens him thus (u), Jam jubebo ignem & sarmenta, carnifex, circumdari.

In another Place of that Author, Labrax, in the same Manner, bespeaks his Damsels, who had betaken themselves to the Protection of Venus (w) :

Vulcanum adducam, is Veneris est adversarius.

And it being a direct Act of Sacrilege to take away Suppliants from the Sanctuary, whither they had fled for Protection, this Method was used to constrain them to leave it, as it were, of themselves, and by their own Consent. Nevertheless, this Evasion of the sacred Privileges was not thought free from Impiety. Whence the foremention'd Words of Hermione are thus answer'd by Andromache (x) in Euripides ;

Σὺ δ' εἴν κατὰ θεοῦ· θεοὶ γὰρ ἴσονται τὰ δει.

Burn me then, for the Gods will see it.

From the frequent Mention of Suppliants securing themselves in the Temples, and at the Altars and Images of the Gods, it may be thought that all of them were Asyla, according to the general Expression of Euripides (y) :

 Δοῦλοι δὲ βωμὸς θεῶν.—

The wild Beast is secured by the Rocks, and Slaves by the Altars of the Gods. Nevertheless, it is most certain, to use the Words of Ser-vius (a), non fuisse asylum in omnibus Templis, nisi quibus consecrationis lege concessum est: That all Temples were not Sanctuaries, but only such as receiv'd that Privilege from the Manner of their Consecration. Whence, at the Dedication of such Places, particular Mention is often made by Authors, that they were appointed to be Sanctuaries; which would have been needless, if all Temples had been invested with that Privilege. The same farther appears from this, that some of the Asyla were free for all Men, others appropriated to certain Persons, or Crimes. Thus the Temple of Diana, at Ephesus, was a Refuge for Debtors; the Tomb, or Temple of Theseus, was a Sanctuary for Slaves, and all those of mean Condition, that fled from the Severities and hard Usage of their Masters, and Men in Power; in Memory that Theseus was an Assister and Protector of the distressed, and never rejected the Petitions of the afflicted, that fled to him for Succour and Defence, as Plutarch (b) reports. Nor was this Honour only granted to the Gods, but also to the Statues or Monuments of Princes, and other great Persons (c). So the Sepulchre of Achilles, on the Sigean Shore, was, in after Ages, made an Asylum; and Ajax had the like Honour paid his Tomb on the Rhætean.

The first Asylum, some say, was built at Athens by the Heraclidæ, and was a Refuge for those, that fled from the Oppression of their Fathers; Others will have this to be a Sanctuary for all Sorts of Suppliants (d). Others affirm, that the first was erected at the building of Thebes by Cadmus, where the Privilege of Sanctuary was granted to all Sorts of Criminals; and in Imitation of these, they say, the Asylum at Rome was open'd by Romulus (e). This is certain, that Sanctuaries were common in the heroical Times. Hence, Troy being taken, Priamus fled for Protection to the Altar of Jupiter Herceus, as we are inform'd by Pausanias (f): Virgil (g) adds farther, that he was accompanied by his Wife Hecuba, and his Children. And Polyxena, who was to be sacrific'd to appease Achilles's Ghost, is thus advis'd by one in Euripides (h):

Ἀλλ' ἴθι πρὸς ναῦς, ἴθι πρὸς βωμὸς.

Go to the Temples, go to the Altars.

The Sacredness of these Places was held entire till the Reign of Tiberius Cæsar, who, upon Consideration of the many Inconveniencies, which must necessarily be the Effect of tolerating so many Villains, as were always harbour'd in them, dissolv'd them all, preserving only to Juno Samia and one of Æsculapius's Temples their ancient Privileges. Suetonius indeed reports, that he did abolere jus moremque asylorum, quæ usquam erant, abolish the Privileges and Customs of Asyla in all Parts of the World (i). But from Tacitus, who has more exactly reported this Matter, we learn, that the Privileges of Sanctuaries were not then wholly taken away, but only regulated and reform'd (k).

Before the Conclusion of this Chapter, it will not be improper to mention the Fields dedicated to religious Uses. These were call'd Τεμένη. Τέμεν ⊕ is interpreted by the Scholiast upon Homer (l) to be Ἱερὸν χωεῖον, ἀφορισμένον Θεῷ κατὰ τιμὴν, ἢ ἥρωϊ a sacred Portion of Land set apart in Honour of some God or Hero. Several of these Places are mention'd by Homer, Pausanias, and other Authors. Sometimes their Product was carefully gather'd in, and reserv'd for the Maintenance of the Priests, or other religious Purposes (m). For, as has been already observ'd, it was customary to pay the same Offices to the Gods, which Men stand in Need of. The Temples were their Houses, Sacrifices their Food, Altars their Tables, Images represented their Persons, and Portions of Land were also set apart for the Maintenance of their Families. The same Respect was paid to Kings, and Men who had done eminent Service for their Country. Thus Tarquinius Superbus had a Portion of Ground in the Campus Martius at Rome. King Latinus's Field is mention'd by Virgil (n):

Insuper id campi, quod Rex habet ipse Latinus.

This was also call'd Τέμεν ⊕, which Word, according to Hesychius, signifies whatever is set a-part Θεῷ ἢ βασιλεῖ for a God or a King. Thus, the Lycians assign'd τέμεν ⊕, a Portion of Land, for the private Use of Bellerophon (o). The same was promis'd by the Ætolians to Meleager (p); and in Lycia enjoy'd by the two Kings Sarpedon and Glaucus, the former of which thus speaks to the latter in Homer (q):

Καὶ τέμεν ⊕ νεμόμεθα μέγα ξανδοῖο παρ' ὄχθας, καλὸν ψύαλις κ' ἀρίστης πυροφόροιο.

C H A P. III.

Of the Grecian Priests, and their Offices.

IT has been the Custom of all Nations to pay a peculiar Honour to their Priests; which was partly done out of Respect to the Gods, whom they represented; and partly (as Plutarch in his Morals tells us) because they did not pray for a Blessing on themselves, their own Families and Friends only, but on whole Communities, on the whole State of Mankind. They were accounted Mediators between Gods and Men, being oblig'd to offer the Sacrifices and Prayers of the People to their Gods, as will farther appear in the following Chapter; and on the other Side, ἐρμηνεύσαι παρὰ θεῶν ἀνθρώποις deputed by the Gods to be their Interpreters to Men, to instruct them how to pray for themselves, what it was most expedient to ask, what Sacrifices, what Vows, what Gifts would be most acceptable to the Gods; and, in short, to teach them all the Ceremonies used in the divine Worship, as Plato informs us (r). On this Account, the Priests were honour'd with the next Places to their Kings and chief Magistrates, and in many Places wore the same Habit. In most of the Grecian Cities, and particularly at Athens, as we are inform'd by Plato (s), and several others, the Care of divine Worship was committed to the chief Magistrates: And these were often consecrated to the Priesthood. Thus Anius in Virgil was King of Delos, and Priest of Apollo (t):

Rex Anius, Rex idem hominum, Phœbique Sacerdos.

In Ægypt the Kings were all Priests; and if any one, who was not of the Royal Family, usurp'd the Kingdom, he was oblig'd to be consecrated to the Priesthood, before he was permitted to govern (u). In some Places of Greece, ἀντίρροπον ἦν τὸ τῆς ἱερωσύνης ἀξίωμα πρὸς τὸ τῆς βασιλείας: the Dignity of Priests was equal to that of Kings, as we are assured by Plutarch (w). At Sparta, the Kings, immediately after their Promotion, took upon them the two Priesthoods of the Heavenly, and the Lacedæmonian Jupiter (x), which was rather esteemed an Accession to their Honour, than any Diminution of it. And all the publick Sacrifices, for the Safety of the Commonwealth, were offer'd by them only; it being the common Opinion, that the Gods were more ready to hear the Prayers of them than other Men. Neither was this a Privilege peculiar to Royal Priests, but common to all others, even in the most ancient Times; they being all accounted the immediate Ministers of the Gods, and by them commission'd to dispense their Favours to Mankind. Hence, tho' at other Times it was not unlawful for other Men to offer Sacrifices, yet when any publick Calamity was to be averted, or any great and uncommon Blessing to be obtain'd, they had Recourse to some of those, who were consecrated to the Office of Priesthood. Thus the Pestilence could not be removed from the Grecian Army by any Prayers or Sacrifices, till they did carry a sacred Hecatomb to Chryses, the Priest of Apollo. At other times, and in the Absence of Priests, it was customary for others to offer Prayers and Sacrifices. Thus Eumæus is said to have done in Homer's Odyssey, and the same is frequently done in other Places by the Heroes, Princes, or Masters of the Family: It being customary for the most honourable Person in the Company, to perform the religious Rites. The same Method was observ'd by the Patriarchs in the holy Scriptures, where we find Oblation made by Cain, Abel, Noah, Abraham, Job, Ja- cob, and others till the Time of Aaron's Consecration to the Priesthood, after which it was reputed an Act of Sacrilege for private Persons to intermeddle with any of the sacred Rites.

Some of the Priests obtain'd their Office and Dignity by Inheritance. This was the constant Method in Ægypt(a), amongst the Jews, the sacred Families at Athens, and in many other Places. Some were appointed by Lots, others by the Designation of the Princes, and others by popular Elections. And that this last Method was very ancient, appears from Homer (b), where he speaks of Theano's being appointed Priestess of Minerva by the Trojans :

Τὴν μὲν Τρῶες ἔθνησαν Ἀθηναίης ἱέρειαν.

Her the Trojans appointed to be Priestess of Minerva. Where Eustathius observes, that she was ἔτε κληρώσῃ, ἔτε ἐκ γένους, ἔτε ἐνὸς ψήφου, ἀλλ' ἦν, ὡς παλαιοὶ φασί, τὸ πλῆθ' εἰλέσθαι. Neither appointed by Lots, nor by Right of Inheritance, nor by the Designation of a single Person, but, as the Ancients say, elected by the People. By which Words he describes the several Ways of appointing Priests, which were us'd by the ancient Greeks.

It was required, that whoever was admitted to this Office, should be found and perfect in all his Members, it being thought a Dishonour to the Gods to be serv'd by any one that was lame, maim'd, or any other Way imperfect ; and therefore, at Athens, before their Consecration, it was examin'd, whether they were ἀφελῆς, that is, perfect and entire, neither having any Defect, nor any thing superfluous (c). In the same Manner it was commanded by one of the Jewish Laws, which in many things agree with those of Athens, that no Man that had a Blemish of the Seed of Aaron, shall come nigh unto the Altar (d).

Nor ought they to be perfect in Body only, but upright in Mind ; Nothing ought to approach the Gods, but what is pure and uncorrupt ; therefore the Priests liv'd temperately and chastly, abstaining even from those Pleasures which were allowable to other Men ; insomuch that Euripides tells us, that in Crete the Prophets of Jupiter did not only deny themselves the Use of Flesh-meat, but forbore to eat any thing that was boiled. Some were so rigid Observers of the Rules of Chastity, that, like the Priests of the Mother of the Gods at Samos, they dismember'd themselves. The Hierophantæ at Athens, after their Admission, enfeebled themselves by a Draught of the Juice of Hemlock : In short, 'twas very customary for those, that attended on the more sacred and mysterious Rites, by using certain Herbs and Medicaments, to unman themselves, that they might worship the Gods with greater Chastity and Purity. They also generally retir'd from the World, to the End, that, being free from Business and Cares, they might have the more Leisure to attend on the Service of the Gods, and wholly devote themselves to Piety, and the Exercise of Religion. One of the Herbs, commonly made use of by them, was the Agnus-castus, in Greek λύγος, or ἄσνος, so call'd from being ἀγῶνος, an Enemy to Generation; this they were wont to strew under the Bed-cloaths, believing it had a certain natural Vertue, whereby it was able to preserve their Chastity, as Eustathius (f), besides many others, hath observ'd. But tho' most of them were oblig'd to strict Chastity and Temperance, and some to practise these Severities upon themselves, yet were others allow'd to marry; and Eustathius (g) tells us, that it was but an Institution of latter Ages, that the Priestesses should be Virgins; to confirm which, Homer gives us an Instance in Theano, who was Priestess of Minerva, and Wife of Antenor the Trojan,

— Οὐρανὸν καλλιπάρησιν

H. H.

In Homer's first Iliad, Mention is made of Chryseis, the Daughter of Chryses, Apollo's Priest. And to omit many other Examples, in the fifth Iliad, Dares, the Priest of Vulcan, is said to have two Sons. Nevertheless, second Marriages were not reputed creditable. Hence Dido in Virgil, speaking of being marry'd to Aeneas, after the Death of a former Husband, calls it Culpam, a Fault (i):

Huic uni forsan potui succumbere Culpa.

Where Servius has made this Remark, Quod antiqui à Sacerdotio repellent bis nuptas: That the Ancients us'd to exclude those, who had been twice marry'd, from the Priesthood. By which Words it is imply'd, that in the latter Ages, such Persons were admitted to this Office. And in some Places, to have several Husbands, or several Lovers, was a necessary Qualification for the Priestess. Alia sacra coronat univira, alia multivira, & magna religione conquiritur quæ plura possit adulteria numerare, saith Minutius Felix (k). This we find reported concerning the Priestesses in Lydia by Herodotus (l), and those in Armenia by Strabo (m).

At Athens, all the Priests and Priestesses, with the sacred Families, and all others, who were entrusted with the Care of Religion, were oblig'd to give Account before certain Officers, how they had discharged their several Functions (n).

In small Cities, all the sacred Offices were commonly executed by one Person, who both offer'd Sacrifices, had the Care of the Temple, collected the Revenues belonging to it, and had the Management of other Things, which any way related to the Worship of the Gods. But where the Worshipers were numerous, and by Consequence, the religious Services too burthensome for one Priest, several Priests were appointed, and other Officers κεχωρισμένοι τῆς ἱερωσύνης, distinct from the Priesthood, as Ἱερεῖοι, ναοφύλακας, ταμίαι ἢ ἱερῶν χρημάτων. Saerificers, Keepers of the Temple, Treasurers of the sacred Revenues (o), and others.

Of the different Orders of Priests nothing exact can be deliver'd; for not only every God had a different Order of Priests consecrated to him, but even the Priests of the same Gods were very different, according to the Diversity of Place, and other Circumstances. I shall not therefore trouble the Reader with an Account of the particular Priests belonging to every Deity in the many Cities of Greece, which would be both unpleasant, and not very useful, but only briefly mention the general Orders, and Offices of them. First, in every Place they seem to have had an Ἀρχιερωσύνης, or High-Priest, whose Office it was to superintend over the rest, and execute the more sacred Rites and Mysteries of Religion. Amongst the Opuntians (p) there were two Chief-Priests, one of which belong'd to the chief and celestial Gods, the other to the Δαίμονες, or Demi-gods. At Athens they had a great many, every God almost having a Chief-Priest that presided over the rest; as the Dadouchus over the Priests of Hercules, and the Stephanophorus over those of Pallas. The Delphians had five Chief-Priests, who help'd to perform the holy Rites with the Prophets, and had the chief Management of all Parts of divine Worship; these were call'd Οσίοι, i. e. Holy, and the chief of them that presided at Sacrifices, Οσιώτης, i. e. Purifier, one that makes holy; and another that had the Care of the Oracle, call'd Ἀφίτης, which is a Sirname of Apollo, given him by Homer, and signifies one that gives Oracles.

Another holy Order was that of the Parasiti (q), which Word, saith Clearchus the Solentian, one of Aristotle's Scholars, in its first Acceptation signified τὸν ἔφοιμον, a Man quick and expeditious, but was afterwards taken for a Table-Companion; tho' Polemon is of Opinion, that this was its ancient Signification, and that they were so call'd, because they were allow'd Part of the Sacrifices, together with the Priest, as is evident from an Inscription on a Pillar in the Anaceum:

ΤΟΙΝ ΔΕ ΒΟΟΙΝ ΤΟΙΝ ΗΓΕΜΟΝΟΙΝ ΤΟΙΝ
ΕΞΑΙΡΟΥΜΕΝΟΙΝ ΤΟ ΜΕΝ ΤΡΙΤΟΝ ΜΕΡΟΣ ΕΙΣ
ΤΟΝ ΑΓΩΝΑ ΤΑ ΔΕ ΔΥΟ ΜΕΡΗ ΤΟ ΜΕΝ ΕΤΕΡΟΝ ΤΟ ΙΕΡΕΙ ΤΟ ΔΕ ΤΟΙ ΣΠΑΡΑΣΙΤΟΙΣ.

That of the Oxen one Part should be reserv'd for the Games; and of the other two, one should be given to the Priests, another to the Parasiti. It was at the first an Office of great Honour; for, by the ancient Law, the Parasiti were reckon'd among the Chief Magistrates. Their Office was to gather of the Husbandmen the Corn allotted for publick Sacrifices, which they call Προσόδεια μεγάλα, the great Income, and is by (r) Aristophanes put for the great Sacrifices, which, as the *Scholias*t tells us, were so call'd, because their Charges were defray'd by these publick Revenues. The publick Store-house, where they kept these First-fruits, were call'd Παράσιτοι(b). Diodorus the Sinopensian in Athenæus tells us, that in every Village of the Athenians, they maintain'd at the publick Charge certain Parasiti in Honour of Hercules, but afterwards, to ease the Commonwealth of this Burden, the Magistrates oblig'd some of the wealthier Sort to take them to their own Tables, and entertain them at their own Cost; whence this Word seems in later Ages to have signified a Trencher-friend, a Flatterer, or one, that, for the Sake of a Dinner, conforms himself to every Man's Humour. Thus indeed Cassaubon interprets that Passage, but the Meaning of it seems rather to be this: That whereas in former Times Hercules had his Parasiti, the rich Men of later Ages, in Imitation of that Hero, chose likewise their Parasiti, tho' not χαριέσσοι, such as Hercules us'd to have, τὰς κολακεύειν δυναμίδας: such as would flatter them most.

The Κήρυκες also, or publick Criers, assisted at Sacrifices, and seem to have had the same Office with the Popæ and Victimarii among the Latins; for in Athenæus (c), one Clidemnus tells us, they were instead of μάγειροι and βεδυταί, Cooks and Butchers; and adds, that a long time the Crier's Office was to kill the Offering, prepare things necessary for the Sacrifices, and to serve instead of a Cup-bearer at the Feast; he also tells us, that the ministring at Sacrifices did of old belong to the Criers, The same is also confirm'd by Eustachius on this Verse of Homer (d),

Κήρυκες δ' ἀνὰ δρυ θεῶν ἱερὴν ἑκατόμβην
 ἦγον. —————

Along the Streets the sacred Hecatomb
 The Criers dragg'd. —————

Phavorinus and Cælius Rhodiginus give this Reason for their being call'd Διὸς ἄγγελοι by Homer, viz. because they assisted at the Sacrifices of the Gods, and (as the former adds) τὰς ἑορτὰς τῶν θεῶν ἠγγελλον, gave publick Notice of the Times wherein the Festivals were to be celebrated. To this Purpose I might bring many Instances out of the ancient Poets, and especially Homer. These Κήρυκες, indeed, were a kind of publick Servants employ'd on all Occasions; they were instead of Ambassadors, Cooks, and Criers; and, in short, there was scarce any Office, except such as were servile and base, they were not put to; but their Name was given them ἀπὸ τῆς κρείττονος, saith Athenæus, from the best and most proper Part of their Office, which was τὸ κηρύττειν, to proclaim, which they did as well in Time of Divine Service, as in Civil Affairs; for, at the Beginning of the holy Rites, they commanded Silence and Attention in these, or such like Words, Εὐφημεῖτε σιγῇ πᾶς ἕσπελας: when the religious Mysteries were ended, they dismiss'd the Congregation with these Words, Λαῶν ἀρξαις, of which more afterwards. At Athens there was a Family nam'd Κήρυκες, from Κήρυξ, the Son of Mercury and Pandrosia, which was accounted sacred, whence Suidas * calls them γένος ἱερὸν καὶ θεόφιλον, a holy Family, beloved by the Gods; such also were the Eumolpidae, who enjoy'd a Priesthood at Athens by Inheritance, being either descended from King Eumolpus, or instituted in Memory of him. The Ceryces, as Anthemio the Comedian in Athenæus (e) tells us, were the first that taught Men to boil their Victuals, as the Flesh of Sheep and Oxen, which before they devour'd raw. They were had in great Honour at Athens, insomuch that Athenæus endeavours to prove that the Trade of a Cook was a creditable Calling, from the Respect paid to these Ceryces, who were Cooks at Sacrifices, and likewise seem to have perform'd those other holy Offices, which belong'd to the Κήρυκες in other Places. Diodorus Siculus (f) resembles them to the Egyptian Pastophori, and thinks they had their Original from them; indeed some Parts of their Office were much alike; for both of them kill'd the Victim, and attended on their Sacrificers.

(b) In Ἐπικλήρω. (c) Lib. X. & XIV. (d) Odyss. ὁ. * Ἐὐμολπίδου.

Νεωκόρῃσι, call'd by Nicauder Ζακόρῃσι(g), so nam'd from κορῆν, which signifies to keep neat and clean, or to adorn; for it was their Duty to adorn the Temples, and look after the Furniture of them; but they submitted not to such mean Offices, as the sweeping of them, as Suidas (b) would have it; but herein he contradicts Euripides (i); who brings in Ion, the Νεωκόρῃσι, or Ædituus of Apollo, telling Mercury, that he swept the Temple with a Broom of Laurel. There were also Ναοφύλακες, whose Charge it was to take Care of the holy Utensils, and see that Nothing was wanting, and to repair what went to Decay, saith Aristotle (k). Sometimes the Parasiti are said to have been entrusted at Athens, that whatever they expended this Way should be repaid them.

There were also other Priests, one of which Aristophanes(l) calls Πρό-πολος, which is a general Name for any Servant, and therefore to restrain it he adds θεῶν, calling him πρόπολος θεῶν. These were Priests waiting always on the Gods, whose Prayers the People desired at Sacrifices, at which these seem to have perform'd some other Rites distinct from those which belong'd to the Ceryces; their Share in the Sacrifices was the Skin and Feet; the Tongues were the Fees of the Ceryces. Indeed, all that serv'd the Gods were maintain'd by the Sacrifices, and other holy Offerings. To which there is an Allusion in Aristophanes(m), where Cario thus speaks to the Priest:

Οὐκἔν τὰ νομιζόμενα σὺ τῶν λαμβάνεις;

*Why don't you take the Part allotted you by Law? Where the Scholiast observes, there was a Law, τὰ ὑπολειπόμενα τῆς θυσίας τὸν ἱερέα λαμβάνειν. That the Remains of Sacrifices should belong to the Priests, and that these were δέρματα καὶ κῶλα, the Skins and Feet. Which he has repeated in another Place(n). Thus likewise Apollo in Homer (o) promises the Cretians, whom he had chosen to be his Priests, that they should have a Maintenance out of the Sacrifices. Hereby, together with other Advantages, the Priests in the primitive Times seem generally to have* grown rich : Whence Cbryses, in Homer (a), offers for the Redemption of his Daughter ἀπείριδι ἀποινα, an infinite Price ; and Dares, the Priest of Vulcan, is, by the same Poet (b), said to have been a wealthy Man :

Ἦν δὲ τις ἐν Τρώεσσι Δάρης, ἀρνείδος, ἀμύμων,
 Ἰεὺς Ἡρακίσιο —

These are the most general Orders of Priests ; others were appropriated to certain Gods, and sometimes certain Feasts, of which I shall have Occasion to speak hereafter, as likewise of those that attended the Oracles, and those who were any way concern'd in the Art of Divination.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Grecian Sacrifices, sacred Presents, and Tythes.

D IDYMUS, in his Annotations upon Pindar (c), reports, that one Melissus, a King of Crete, was the first that offer'd Sacrifice to the Gods, and invented Religious Rites and Ceremonies, and that Amalthea and Melissa, who nurs'd Jupiter, and sed him with Goats-milk and Honey, were his Daughters. Others relate, that Phroneus, some that Merops was the first who erected Altars and Temples, and offer'd Sacrifices (d). And others will have the Use of (ἱλαρὰ θυσία) propitiatory Sacrifices to have first begun by Chiron the Centaur (e). But passing by these and the like fabulous Narrations, I shall endeavour to describe the Customs in Use amongst the ancient Greeks at their solemn Sacrifices. In doing which, I shall first treat of the Occasion and End of them. 2. Of their Matter. 3. Of the Preparations requir'd before them, with all the Ornaments both of the Sacrifices, Victims, and Altars. 4. Of the sacred Rites used at and after their Celebration.

As to the Causes and Occasions of them, they seem to have been chiefly four. For Sacrifices were,

1. Εὐκταῖα, or Χαριστήρια, Vows, or free-will Offerings ; such were those promised to the Gods before, and paid after a Victory : As also the First-fruits offer'd by Husbandmen after Harvest, being grateful Acknowledgments to the Gods, by whose Blessing they had receiv'd a plentiful Reward for their Labour and Toil in tilling the Ground. These are, by Suidas (f), call'd Θυσία δωροφορικὰ, because they were Free-gifts ; and ἀποπληστικὰ, because thereby they fulfill'd some Vow made to the Gods ; both which, being Effects of Gratitude, I have reduced under one Head. It may not be improper here to correct the Mistake of Saubertus (g), who takes εὐκταῖα for αἰήτικὰ, petitionary Sacrifices : Whereas the proper Meaning of εὐκταῖον is, according to Hesychius, τὸ κατ' εὐχὴν ἀποδοῖσθαι, that which is paid to discharge a Vow.

2. Ιλαστικά, or Διαλλακτικά, propitiatory Offerings, to avert the Anger of some offended Deity. Such were all the Sacrifices used in Expiations.

3. Αίτητικά, petitionary Sacrifices, for Success in any Enterprize. So religious were the Heathens, that they would not undertake any Thing of Moment, without having first ask'd the Advice, and implored the Assistance of the Gods by Sacrifices and Presents.

4. Τὰ ἀπὸ μαντείας, such as were imposed and commanded by an Oracle or Prophet. Some others have been added, which I have purposely omitted, as reducible to some of these four.

I come now in the second Place to treat of the Matter of their Oblations. In the most ancient Sacrifices there were neither living Creatures, nor any Thing costly or magnificent; no Myrrh, or Frankincense, or other Perfumes were made Use of; but instead of them all (b) Herbs and Plants, pluck'd up by the Roots, were burnt whole with their Leaves and Fruit before the Gods; and this was thought a very acceptable Oblation. The like Customs prevail'd in most other Nations, and particularly amongst the primitive Italians, of whose Sacrifices Ovid has left us the following Description (i):

*Ante, Deos homini quod conciliare valeret,
Far erat, & puri lucida mica salis.
Nondum pertulerat lacrymatas cortice myrrhas
Æta per æquoreas hospita navis aquas.
Thura nec Euphrates, nec miserat India costum:
Nec fuerant rubri cognita fila croci.
Ara dabat fumos herbis contenta Sabinis,
Et non exiguo laurus adusta sono.
Siquis erat, factis prati de flore coronis
Qui posset violas addere, dives erat.*

Some report, that Cecrops introduced the Custom of sacrificing Oxen (k); but Pausanias (l) making a Comparison between Cecrops and his Contemporary Lycaon, King of Arcadia, affirms, that whereas the latter of these sacrificed a Child to Jupiter Lycæus, and polluted the holy Altar with human Blood; the former never sacrificed any Thing endued with Life, but only the Cakes used in his own Country, and there call'd πλάκωνοι. Some Ages after, the Athenians were commanded, by one of Triptolemus's Laws, to abstain from living Creatures (m). And even to Draco's Time the Attick Oblations consisted of nothing else but the Earth's Beneficence. This Frugality and Simplicity had in other Places been laid aside before his Time, and here not long after; for no sooner did they leave their ancient Diet of Herbs and Roots, and begin to use living Creatures for Food (which the Ancients are said to have thought altogether unlawful) but they also began to change their Sacrifices; it being always usual for their own Feasts, and the Feasts of the Gods (such they thought the Sacrifices) to consist of the same Materials.

The solemn Sacrifices consisted of these three Things, Σπονδή, Θυσίαμα, and ἱερῶν. This Hesiod (n) seems to intimate in the following Verses :

Καθ' δύναμιν δ' ἔρδειν ἱερ' ἀθανάτοισι θεοῖσιν
 Ἀγνώως κ' καθαρῶς, ἐπὶ δ' ἀγλαὰ μνηία καίειν,
 Ἀλλοσε δ' ἢ σπονδήσιν, θυέεσσι τε ἰλάσκεισθαι,
 Ἡ μὲν ὅτ' εὐνάζη, κ' ὅταν φάος ἱερὸν ἔλθῃ.

Offer to Jove, with an untainted Mind,
 Offer the best, if you'd have him prove kind :
 Let lulling Sleep ne'er seal your drowzy Eyes,
 Nor purple Morn gild o'er the Eastern Skies,
 Till you accost the Gods with Sacrifice.

H. H.

Where it may be observed, that tho' the more solemn Sacrifices consisted of all these three Parts, yet it was lawful to use some of them by themselves. Whence Eustathius (o) tells us, it was not only usual to offer Drink-offerings of Wine at Sacrifices, but also at the Beginning of a Journey by Land, or Sea, before they went to sleep, when they entertain'd a Stranger, and at any other Time. In short, in all the smaller Affairs of Life, they seem to have desired the Protection and Favour of the Gods, by Oblations of Incense, or Drink-offerings ; whereas the more solemn Sacrifices were only used upon set Times, and weighty Occasions, both because of the Expensiveness and Trouble of them. The Case seems to have been this : The Oblations of the Gods, as hath been before observed, were furnished after the same Manner with the Entertainments of Men. Hence, as Men delight in different Sorts of Diet, so the Gods were thought to be pleas'd with several Sorts of Sacrifices. Some with human Victims, others with Beasts of various Kinds, others with Herbs only, and the Fruits of the Earth. All required Salt and Drink ; whence there was scarce any Sacrifice without Salt, and an Oblation of Drink. And the latter of these was frequently offer'd without Victims, tho' Victims were rarely, if ever, sacrificed without Oblations of Drink ; it being the Custom of Men to drink without eating, but very seldom to eat a Meal without drinking.

Σπένδειν, and λείβειν, amongst the Greeks, have the same Signification as Hesychius and Phavorinus have observ'd, and imply no more than to pour forth, which is also the proper Sense of the Latin Word libare, saith Isidorus (p) ; but because of their constant Use at the Drink-offerings of the Gods, they came at length to be appropriated to them. The same may be observ'd of their Derivatives σπονδή, λοιβή, and libatio, which Words differ not at all from one another. The Matter in the σπονδαί was generally Wine. Of Wine there were two Sorts, the one ἐνσπονδον, the other ἄσπονδον ; the former was so call'd, because it was lawful, the latter, because it was unlawful to make Use of it in these Libations; such they accounted all Wine mix'd with Water; whence ἀκραλον, i. e. pure and unmix'd Wine, is so often made Mention of by ancient Writers. And tho' sometimes mix'd Wine is mention'd at Sacrifices, yet, if we may believe Eustathius, this Mixture was not made of Wine and Water, but of different Sorts of Wine. Pliny (q) also tells us, that it was unlawful to make an Oblation of Wine, press'd from Grapes cut, par'd round, or polluted with a Fall on the Ground; or such as came out of a Wine-press trodden with bloody and wounded Feet, or from a Vine unpruned, blasted, or that had a Man hang'd upon it. He speaks also of a certain Grape call'd Aspendia (r), whose Wine it was unlawful to offer upon the Altars. But tho' these Libations generally consisted of Wine, yet they were sometimes made of other Ingredients, and call'd Νηφάλιοι Δυσίαι, ἀπὸ τῶν ἡρώων, from being sober. Such as these were offer'd to the Eumenides; for which Suidas (s) gives this Reason, viz. that divine Justice ought always to be vigilant. He likewise adds, that at Athens such Oblations were made to the Nymphs, to Venus Urania, Mnemosyne, the Morning, the Moon, and the Sun; and there seems to have been a particular Reason, why every one of these were honour'd with such Oblations. For Instance, Eustathius (t) tells us, that Honey was offer'd to the Sun, but Wine was never used upon any Altar dedicated to him; because he, by whom all Things are encompassed, and held together, ought to be temperate. Plutarch (u) says, that these νηφάλιοι Δυσίαι were often performed to Bacchus, for no other Reason than that Men might not be always accustomed to strong and unmixed Wines. Pausanias affirms, that the Eleans never offer'd Wine to the Δέσποινας, i. e. Ceres and Proserpina, nor at the Altar dedicated to all the Gods. To Pluto, instead of Wine, Oil was offer'd, as Virgil (w) witnesseth; and Homer (x) brings in Ulysses telling Alcinous, that he had made an Oblation to the infernal Gods, in which he pour'd forth, first, Wine mixed with Honey, then pure Wine, and, after all, Water. His Words are these;

ἔγὰρ δ' ἀπὸ ἔξυ' ἐρυσσάμηνθ' παρὰ μῆρῶ,
 Βίθηρην ὄρυζα ὄσοντε πυγύσιον ἔρθα καὶ ἔνθα.
 Ἀπὸ αὐτῶ δ' ἄρα χόας χερόμην πάντι νεκύεσσιν,
 Πρώτα μελικρήτω, μετέπειθα δ' ἠδ' εἰ ὄϊνω,
 Τὸ τρίτον αὐτὸ ὕδατι ἐπὶ δ' ἀλφίλα λακκά πάλυον:

Straight from my Side I drew my sharpen'd Blade,
 A Trench, a Cubit every way I made,
 Then these Libations pour'd around the Brim,
 To th' Ghosts that shoot along the Stygian Stream;
 First Wine with Honey mix'd, then Wine alone,
 Next Water, presently, when this was done,
 With finest Flour besprinkl'd all around.

 But

But concerning the Oblations of the infernal Gods, I shall discourse in another Place.

There were also other Gods, to whom, in certain Places, they sacrificed without Wine; such was Jupiter ὕπατος, the Supreme, upon whose Altar the Athenians never offer'd Wine, or living Creatures. The νηφάλια ἑρῶ, sober Sacrifices, are divided into four Sorts. 1. τὰ ὕδρόπωνδα, Libations of Water. 2. τὰ μελίπωνδα, Libations of Honey. 3. τὰ γαλακτόπωνδα, Libations of Milk. 4. τὰ ἐλαιόπωνδα, Libations of Oil. Which Liquors were sometimes mix'd, with one another. If Porphyrus (y) may be credited, most of the Libations in the primitive Times, were νηφάλιοι. And of these Water was first used, then Honey which is easily to be had, afterwards Oil, and in latter Ages Wine came to be offer'd. It is very probable, whether this Order was observed, or not, that the most primitive Oblations, like the Way of living in those Ages, were exceeding simple, and consisted of such Materials as were most easily to be provided.

Lastly, it must be further observed, that Libations were always offer'd in Cups full to the Brim, it being a Sort of Irreverence to the Gods to present any Thing, which was not τέλειον ἢ ὅλον, whole and perfect. Thus to fill the Cup was term'd ἐπισέφειν κροῦνην, to crown it; and the Cup so fill'd, ἐπισεφῆς οἶνοιο, crown'd with Wine, ἦτοι ὑπερχείλης ποιῆται ὡσεὶ διὰ τὸ ποτὸν ἐσεφανόθη the Liquor appearing above the Cup in the Form of a Crown, according to Athenæus (z). The Poets often express this Custom. Hence the following Verse of Homer, Κῆρι ἦ κροῦνησας ἐπεσέφαντο ποτοῖο.

And that Allusion of another Poet cited by Athenæus,

Ἀλλὰ θεὸς μαρῶν ἐπεσι σέφει.

And Vina coronare, to crown the Wine, is an Expression used by Virgil.

The second Thing to be consider'd in the Sacrifices is the Suffitus, in Greek called θύσις, which Word doth not originally signify the Victim, but τὰ ψαῖδα, i. e. broken Fruits, Leaves, or Acorns, the only Sacrifices of the Ancients; whence, in Suidas τὰ θύσις are expounded θυμιάματα, or Incense. In like Manner the verb θύειν is never used by Homer to signify the Offering of the Victim (for in this Sense he has made Use of ρέζειν and δρῶν) but only of these ψαῖδα, says Athenæus (a); which Signification was afterwards changed, and almost appropriated to Animals (b). If Aldrovandus (c) may be credited, there were no Sacrifices in the primitive Times, in quibus arbores, earumque partes, partem haud exiguam sibi non vendicabant; whereof Trees, or some Parts of them, were not made a considerable Part of the Oblation. These were chiefly odoriferous Trees, some Parts whereof πολλοὶ ἢ νῦν ἔτι θύουσι, many do even in this Age offer, saith Porphyrus (d). But the most primitive Offerings were only γλόαι, green Herbs, as we are inform'd by the same Author. In latter Ages they commonly made Use of Frankincense, or some Perfume. But it was a long Time before Frankincense came to be in Use. In the Times of the Trojan War it was unknown, but instead thereof they offer'd Cedar and Citron, saith Pliny (e); and the Grecian Fables tell us, that Frankincense was first used after the Change of a devout Youth, call'd Libanus, into that Tree, which has taken its Name from him. It may be farther observed, that some Sorts of Trees were offer'd with Libations of Wine, others only with νηφάλια ἱερὰ, which are thence call'd νηφάλια ξύλα. These, according to Suidas's Account, were τὰ μὴτ' ἀμπέλυνα, μήτε σύκινα, μήτε μύρτινα, all beside the Vine, Fig, and Myrrh, which, being offer'd with Wine only, were term'd οἰνόσπωνδα. Hither also may be refer'd the ἐλοχυται, ἐλαῖ, or mola salsa, which were Cakes of Salt and Barley, ἄς ἐπέχεον τοῖς θωμοῖς πρὸ τῆς ἱερεργίας: which they pour'd down upon the Altar, before the Victim was sacrificed. At first the Barley was offer'd whole and unbroken, till the Invention of Mills and Grinding, whence they were call'd ἐλαῖ q. ὄλαι, saith Eusebius (f). To offer these was term'd ἐλοθυτεῖν, and of this Custom there is frequent Mention in Homer. Of this Kind also were the πόπανα, being round, broad, and thin Cakes; and another Sort call'd πέλανοι, of which there were several Kinds, and those three reckon'd by Phavorinus, which he calls Θίσιοι, ἀνάστατοι, and ἀμοιρῶντες. Another Sort of Cakes was call'd Σελῆναι from the Figure, being broad, and horn'd in Imitation of the New Moon. There was another Sort of Cakes with Horns, call'd also from their Figure Βόσς, and usually offer'd to Apollo, Diana, Hecate, and the Moon. In Sacrifices to the Moon they used, after six of the Σελῆναι, to offer one of these, which, for that Reason, was term'd Ἐξ ἰβδουμ. The same was sometimes offer'd after a Sacrifice of six Animals, saith Suidas; and hence Ἐξ ἑξδουμ, as being a Lump without Life, is proverbially used for a stupid and senseless Person. There were also other Offerings, of this Sort, peculiar to certain Gods, as the Obeliophori to Bacchus, the Μεμιτῆλαι to Trophonius, with others, which, for Brevity's Sake, I omit. It may here be observed that no Oblation was thought acceptable to the Gods without a Mixture of Salt. Nulla (sacra) conficiuntur sine mola salsa. No Sacrifice is made without Meal mixed with Salt, saith Pliny (g). There is continual Mention hereof in the Poets. Thus in Virgil (h):

————— Mibi sacra parari

Et fruges salsae —————

And in Ovid describing the primitive Oblations (i):

Ante Deos homini quod conciliare valebat,

Far erat, & puri lucida mica salis.

This Custom was certainly very ancient and universal. To forbear the Mention of other Testimonies, we find this Precept given to Moses (k); Every Oblation of thy Meat-offering shalt thou season with Salt; neither shalt thou suffer the Salt of the Covenant of thy God to be lacking from thy Meat-offerings; with all thy Offerings thou shalt offer Salt. The Ground of this Custom is by some affirm'd to be, that Salt was a Token of Friendship and Hospitality. It, being also constantly used in all the Victuals of Men, was thought necessary to the Entertainments and Sacrifices of the Gods, as was before observed. For the same Reason there was scarce any Sacrifice without Bread-Corn or Bread. Particularly Barley was offer'd more than any other Grain, that being the first Sort of Corn, which the Greeks used after their primitive Diet of Acorns; whence κεῖθῆ is by some derived from κείνεν. to discern, Men being first, by that Sort of Food. distinguish'd from other Animals, with whom they had before lived upon Acorns (k). On the same Account the Athenians offer'd only such Barley as grew in the Field Rbarium; in Memory of its having first been sown there (l). And instead of the Greek κεῖθῆ, the Romans used another Sort call'd Zea, which was the Sort of Corn first used by them. This Practice remain'd in the Time of Dionysius the Halicarnassian (m).

The third and chief Part of the Sacrifice was ἱερῆον, the Victim; concerning which it may be observed, in the first Place, that it was requir'd to be whole, perfect, and sound in all its Members, without Spot or Blemish; otherwise it was unacceptable to the Gods, who must be served with the very best of all the Flocks and Herds; to which End Solon, in his Laws, commanded the Athenians to offer ἑκκεῖτα ἱερῆα, chosen and select Sacrifices; and it was an ancient Custom to cull out of the Flocks the goodliest of all the Cattle, and put certain Marks upon them, whereby they might be distinguished from the rest. Virgil (n) tells us, their Heads were divided into three Parts, one of which they design'd for Propagation, another for Sacrifice, and the third for Labour; his Words are these,

*Post partum cura in vitulos traducitur omnis,
Continuoque notas, & nomina gentis inurunt:
Et quos aut pecori malint submittere habendo,
Aut aris servare sacros, aut scindere terram.*

As soon as e'er brought forth, great Care's enjoin'd

To brand each one for what he is design'd:

Whether for Breeding this be set apart,

For th'Altar that, a third for Plough or Cart.

H. H.

The same is affirm'd by Apollonius Rhodius, in the second Book of his Argonauticks (o).

Notwithstanding all this Care in the Choice of Victims, yet it was thought unlawful to offer them, till the Priests had, by divers Experiments, made Trial of them, of which I shall speak hereafter. The Sacrifice, if it was approved by the Priest, was call'd Τελεῖα θυσία, whence comes the frequent Mention of ταῦροι αἴγες, βόες τέλειοι (p). If not, another was brought to the Trial, till one every Way perfect was found. The Spartans, whose Custom was to serve the Gods, with as little Expence as was possible, did very often ἀνδάναγγ. θύειν, sacrifice maim'd and defective Animals (g); out of an Opinion, that so long as their Minds were pure and well pleasing to their Gods, their external Worship, in whatever Manner perform'd, could not fail of being accepted.

As to the Kinds of Animals offer'd in Sacrifice, they differ'd according to the Variety of the Gods to whom, and the Persons by whom they were offer'd. A Shepherd would sacrifice a Sheep, a Neatherd an Ox, a Goatherd a Goat, and a Fisher, after a plentiful Draught, would offer a Tunny, saith Athenæus, to Neptune; and so the rest according to every Man's Employment. They differ'd also according to the Diversity of the Gods, for to the infernal and evil Gods they offer'd black Victims; to the Good, white; to the Barren, barren ones; to the Fruitful, pregnant ones; lastly, to the masculine Gods, Males; to the Feminine, Females were commonly thought acceptable. Almost every God had some of the Animals consecrated to him, and out of these, Sacrifices were often chosen; for Instance, to Hecate they sacrificed a Dog; to Venus, a Dove or Pigeon. Choice was also made of Animals, according to the Dispositions of the Gods, to whom they were to be offer'd. Mars was thought to be pleas'd with such Creatures as were furious and warlike, as the Bull. The Sow was sacrificed to Ceres, as being apt to root up the Seed-Corn, and, on that Account, an Enemy to her. Many Authors affirm, that this Animal was, for that Reason, first kill'd, when before it was held unlawful to put living Creatures to Death; and that it was first of all others eaten by Men, and sacrificed to the Gods. Hence its Greek Name σῦς, term'd in Latin also Sus, is thought to have been so call'd by changing θ into σ, from θύειν to kill or sacrifice (r). The same Animal is also allow'd, by Porphyry (s) to have been offer'd in Sacrifice before any other, tho' upon a different Account; for he derives it from a Command of Apollo, who, to excuse Clymene's killing a Sow, order'd, that in Times to come that Animal should be offer'd in Sacrifice. Next to the Sow, the Goat came to be sacrificed, which happen'd by Reason of its browsing upon the Vines, and thence becoming an Enemy to Bacchus. Thus we find in Ovid (t):

————— Et prima putatur
Hostia Sus meruisse necem, quia semina panda
Eraerat rostro, spemque interceperat anni.
Vite caper morfa Bacchi maculatus ad aras
Ducitur ultoris: nocuit sua culpa duobus.

The Animals most commonly sacrificed were, beside the two fore-mention'd, the Bull, Ox, Cow, Sheep, Lamb, &c. and amongst the Birds, the Cock, Hen, &c. Some were more acceptable at one Age than another. For Example, an Heifer a Year old, which had never been put to the Yoke, was most grateful to the Gods. Such an one is promised to Minerva by Diomedes in Homer (u):

Σοὶ δ' ἐγὼ αὖ ῥέξω βένην εὐεσμέτωπον,
 Ἀδμήτιω, ἣν ἔσω ὑπὸ ζυγὸν ἠγάγευ ἀνὴρ.

Another is elsewhere promised by Nestor (w). The same may also be observed in other Poets. And the Jews were commanded to sacrifice an Heifer, without Spot, wherein is no Blemish, and upon which never came Yoke (x); such as had been employ'd in the Service of Men, being unworthy to be made Victims to God.

Athenæus (y) tells us out of Agatharchides, that the Bœotians were wont to sacrifice certain Eels of an unusual Bigness, taken in Copais, a Lake of that Country, and about these they perform'd all the Ceremonies usual at other Sacrifices. It will be difficult to guess the Reason of this Custom, for my (z) Author tells us, that when a Stranger once happen'd to be present at these Sacrifices, and enquir'd what might be the Cause of them, the Bœotians made him no other Answer, than that they were oblig'd to observe the Customs of their Ancestors, but thought themselves not bound to give Foreigners any Reason for them. The only Animal, almost unlawful to be sacrificed, was the ploughing and labouring Ox, and from him the Athenians abstained, because he assisted them in tilling the Ground, and was, as it were, Man's Fellow-labourer, saith Ælian (a). Nor did the Athenians only, but almost all other Nations, think it a very great Crime to kill this Creature, insomuch that the Offender was thought to deserve Death, saith Varro (b): Ælian, (c) in particular, witnesseth as much of the Phrygians; and Pliny (d), in his Natural History, mentions a Person banished Rome on that Account. But in latter Times, as Plutarch (e) tells us, they were used at Feasts, and then 'twas no Wonder if they were also sacrificed to the Gods; and that they were so, Lucian (f) assures us. Nay, to eat and sacrifice Oxen came at length to be so common, that βουβουλία was used as a general Term in the Place of θύσις, maître. Thus in Aristophanes (g):

Καί νῦν ὁ δευπότης μὲν ἔνδον βουβουλίᾳ
 ἔσθῃ, καὶ τράγον, καὶ κείων ἐσθῆσαν μὲν ἔσθῃ.

The Person, who first adventur'd to kill a labouring Ox, was Cecrops, according to Eusebius, as was observed in the Beginning of this Chapter, Aratus charges it upon the Men of the brazen Age (h);

— πρῶτοι γὰρ βοῶν ἐπάσαντ' ἀροτήρων.

But Theon, in his Commentary upon that Passage, affirms the killing of labouring Oxen, to have been held unlawful in the Time of the Trojan War, and that the Company of Ulysses, who are reported by Homer to have suffer'd very much for their Impiety in killing the sacred Oxen of the Sun, were only guilty of killing the ploughing and labouring Oxen, by whose Assistance we are nourish'd, and see the Sun. He further adds, that the Athenians were the first, who fed upon the Flesh of such Oxen.

Neither was it lawful to sacrifice Oxen only, but also Men. Examples of this Sort of Inhumanity were very common in most of the barbarous Nations. Concerning those who border'd upon the Jews, as also concerning the Jews themselves, when they began to imitate their Neighbours, we find several Testimonies in the sacred Scriptures. Cæsar witnesseth the same of the Gauls; Lucan in particular of that Part of Gallia, where Massilia stands; Tacitus of the Germans and Britons. And the first Christian Writers do in many Places charge it upon the Heathens in general. Nevertheless, it was not so common in Greece and other civiliz'd Nations, as in those which were barbarous. Among the primitive Grecians, it was accounted an Act of so uncommon Cruelty and Impiety, that Lycaon, King of Arcadia, was feign'd by the Poets to have been turn'd into a Wolf, because he offer'd an human Sacrifice to Jupiter (i). In latter Ages it was undoubtedly more common and familiar; Aristomenes the Messenian sacrific'd three hundred Men, among whom was Theopompus, one of the Kings of Sparta, to Jupiter of Ithome. Themistocles, in order to procure the Assistance of the Gods against the Persians, sacrific'd some Captives of that Nation, as we find it related in Plutarch (k). Bacchus had an Altar in Arcadia, upon which young Damsels were beaten to Death with Bundles of Rods; something like to which was practis'd by the Lacedæmonians, who scourg'd the Children (sometimes to Death) in Honour of Diana Orthia. To the Manes and infernal Gods such Sacrifices were very often offer'd: Hence we read of Polyxena's being sacrific'd to Achilles; and Homer relates how that Hero butcher'd twelve Trojan Captives at the Funeral of Patroclus. Æneas, whom Virgil celebrates for his Piety, is an Example of the same Practice (l):

————— Sulmone creatos

Quatuor hic juvenes, totidem quos educat Ufens,

Viventes rapit, inferias quos immolet umbris,

Captivoque rogi perfundat sanguine flammæ.

Whoever desires to see more Instances of human sacrifices, may consult Clemens of Alexandria (m), Lactantius (n), Minutius Felix (o), Cyril of Alexandria (p), Eusebius (q), and other Christian Apologists.

It may here be observ'd that Sacrifices were to be answerable to the Condition and Quality of the Person, by whom they were offer'd. As it was thought a Contempt of the Gods for a rich Man to bring a poor sordid Offering; so on the other Hand, from a poor Man the smallest Oblations were acceptable. If his Estate was not able to reach the Price of a living Ox, instead thereof, it was lawful for him to sacrifice one made of Bread-corn, saith *Suidas. And on other Accounts when they were not able to provide the accusom'd Sacrifices. they had Liberty to offer what the Place, or Time would afford. Hence the Ciziceniens, being closely besieged, and unable to procure a black Ox, which they were oblig'd to offer upon a certain anniversary Festival, made one of Corn, and so perform'd the usual Ceremonies. Ulysses's Companions in Homer, for Want of Barley, made use of Oak-leaves; and instead of Wine, offer'd a Libation of Water. But from those that were able to procure them, more costly Offerings were requir'd. Men of Wealth, especially when they had receiv'd, or desir'd any great Favour of the Gods, offered great Numbers of Animals at once. Whence there is frequent Mention of Hecatombs, which consisted of an hundred living Creatures, and of Chiliombs, in which were sacrific'd a thousand. An Hecatomb, saith Eustathius (a), properly signifies a Sacrifice of an hundred Oxen, and such a one was offer'd by Clisthenes in Herodotus; but it is generally taken for such Sacrifices, as consist of an hundred Animals of any Sort; only the Ox being the principal and most valuable of all the living Creatures us'd at Sacrifices, it has its Name from containing ἑκατὸν βῆς, an hundred Oxen. Others derive it, saith my Author, from ἑκατὸν βῆσεις, ἢ τοῦ πόδος, i. e. an hundred Feet, and then it must have consisted only of twenty-five Animals. Others think a finite Number is here put for an indefinite, by a Figure very usual among the Poets; and then an Hecatomb amounts to no more than a Sacrifice consisting of many Animals. Others will have this Name deriv'd not from the Number of Creatures offer'd, but of the Persons present at the Sacrifice. Lastly, it may be observ'd from Julius Capitolinus(b), that an Hecatomb was sometimes offer'd after this Manner: They erected an hundred Altars of Turf, and then kill'd an hundred Sows, or Sheep, &c. Suidas (c) mentions another Sacrifice, which consisted of seven Offerings, viz. a Sheep, Sow, Goat, Ox, Hen, Goose, and, after all, an Ox of Meal, whence some derive the Proverb ἕξ ἔβδομα, of which before. Another Sacrifice, in which were offer'd only three Animals, was call'd Τριτῦς, or Τριτῦα. This consisted, saith (d) Eustathius, of two Sheep, and an Ox, according to Epicarmus; sometimes of an Ox, Goat, and Sheep; sometimes of a Boar, Ram, and Bull; and at other times of a Sow, He-goat, and Ram, for such an one is mention'd by Aristophanes. Sometimes the Sacrifice consisted of twelve Animals, and then, saith my (e) Author, it was call'd δωδεκάς θυσία, and the rest in like Manner. Thus much concerning the Matter of Sacrifices.

The next Things to be consider'd are the preparatory Rites required before, and the Ornaments used in the Time of Sacrifice. No Man was admitted to some of the solemn Sacrifices, who had not purified himself certain Days before, in which he was to abstain from all carnal Pleasures. To this Purpose Tibullus (f):

* In voce βῆς. (a) Iliad. α'. p. 36. Edit. Basl. (b) In Maximo & Balbino. (c) In voce βῆς. (d) Odysse, λ'. p. 423. Edit. Basl. (e) Ibidem. (f) Lib. II. Eleg. I.

— Discedite ab aris,
Quis tulit besterna gaudia nocte Venus.

You, who to Venus paid Devoir last Night,
 Pleasing with lustful Heats your Appetite,
 From the chaste Altars of the Gods absent.

They were so rigid in observing this Custom at some of their Solemnities, that the Priest and Priestesses were forced to take an Oath that they were duly purified. Such an one was imposed upon the Priestesses of Bacchus at Athens in this Form (g) : Αγιστεύω, καὶ εἰμι καθαρὰ, καὶ ἀγνή ἀπὸ τῆς ἄλλων τῆς ἐ καθαρυνόντων, καὶ ἀπὸ ἀνδρῶς συνουσίας καὶ τὰ Θεόβρια καὶ Ἰοβακχεῖα γεραίρω πρὸς Διονύσω κατὰ τὰ πάτρια, καὶ ἐν τοῖς καθήκονσι χρέουσιν, I am pure, undefled, and free from all Sorts of Pollution, and particularly that, which is contracted by lying with a Man; and do celebrate the Festival of Bacchus at the usual Time, and according to the received Custom of my Country. This seems to be meant not only of Adultery and Fornication, but also of the lawful Pleasures of the Married; for at the Celebration of divine Solemnities, they thought more than ordinary Purity and Sanctity was required of them, and therefore abstained from Delights, which at other Times they might lawfully enjoy. Yet by some of them this Sort of Purification was thought unnecessary, for Theano, an Athenian Priestess, being ask'd, when it might be lawful for a Woman to go from the Company of a Man to the divine Mysteries: answered, From her own at any Time, from a Stranger never.

At least every Person, who came to the solemn Sacrifices, was purified by Water, to which End, at the Entrance of the Temples, there was commonly plac'd a Vessel full of holy Water. This Water was consecrated by putting into it a burning Torch taken from the Altar. The same Torch was sometimes made use of to besprinkle those who enter'd into the Temple (h). Thus we find in Euripides (i) :

Μέλλων δὲ δολὸν χερὶ δεξιᾷ ζέρειν,
 Εἰς χερσὶβ' ἄς βάψεν, Ἀλκμήνης τόκῳ.

Also in Aristophanes (k) :

Φέρε δὲ τὸ δασίον. τόδ' ἐμβάψω λαβάν.

Where the Scholiast observes, that this Torch was us'd, because of the Quality of Fire, which is thought to purify all Things. Instead of the Torches, they sometimes us'd a Branch of Laurel, as we find in Pliny (l). Thus Sozomen (m), where he speaks of Valentian following Jupiter into a Pagan Temple, relates, that, when they were about to enter, a Priest θαλλὸς τινὰς διαβρόχους κατέχων, νόμῳ Ἑλληνικῷ πιεζέεργ' αινε, holding certain green Boughs dropping Water, besprinkled them after the Grecian Manner. Instead of Laurel, Olive was sometimes us'd. Thus we find in Virgil (n) :

*Idem ter socios pura circumculit unda,
Spargens rore lævi ἔσ' ramo felicitis olivæ.*

This Custom of surrounding, here express'd, was so constant in purifying, that most of the Terms, which relate to any Sort of Purification, are compounded with περι, around. Thus περιρραύειν, περιμάττεσθαι, περιθεῖσθαι, περισφίξειν, &c. The Vessel which contain'd the Water of Purification, was term'd περιρρανήριον. And the Latin Word lustrare, which signifies to purify, or expiate, came hence to be a general Word for any Sort of surrounding, or encompassing. Thus it is us'd by Virgil (o) :

*————— dum montibus umbræ
Lustrabunt convexa —————*

Spondanus tells us, that before the Sacrifices of the celestial Gods, the Worshipers had their whole Bodies wash'd, or, if that could not be, at least, their Hands; but for those that perform'd the sacred Rites to the infernal Gods, a small Sprinkling was sufficient. Sometimes the Feet were wash'd, as well as Hands; whence come the Proverbs, ἀνίπτοις χερσίν, and ἀνίπτοις ποσίν, in Latin, illotis manibus, & illotis pedibus, which are usually applied to Men, who undertake any thing without due Care and Preparation. Porphyry (p) tells us, there was a Programma fix'd up, that no Man should go beyond the Περιρρανήριον, till he had wash'd his Hands; and so great a Crime was it accounted to omit this Ceremony, that Timarchides (q) hath related a Story of one Asterius, who was struck dead with Thunder, because he had approach'd the Altar of Jupiter with unwash'd Hands. Nor was this Custom only us'd at solemn Sacrifices, but also at the smallest Parts of their Worship. Hector tells us, he was afraid to make so much as a Libation to Jupiter before he had wash'd;

Χερσὶ δ' ἀνίπτοισιν Διὶ λάθειν αἰδοπα οἶνον Ἀζομαι ————— (r).

I dread with unwash'd Hands to bring
My incens'd Wine to Jove an Offering.

And Telemachus is said, in Homer's Odyssey, to have wash'd his Hands, before he adventur'd to pray to the Gods. This they did, out of a Conceit, that thereby they were purified from their Sins; and withal signifying, that nothing impure ought to approach the Deities. On the same Account they sometimes wash'd their Cloaths, as Homer relates of Penelope, before she offer'd Prayers to the Gods. The Water us'd in Purifications was required to be clear, and without Mud, and all other Impurities. It was commonly fetch'd from Fountains and Rivers. The Water of Lakes, or standing Ponds, was unfit for this Purpose. So was also the purest Stream, if it had been a considerable Time separated from its Source. Hence recens aqua, fresh Water, is apply'd to this Use in Virgil (c) :

*Occupat Æneas aditum, corpusque recenti
Spargit aqua*——

The same Custom prevail'd in other Countries. The Jewish Essenes made use of καθαρωτέρων ἢ τὸ πρὸς ἀγνεῖαν ὑδάτων the purer sort of Waters for cleansing, as we are inform'd by Porphyry (d). The Apostle seems to allude to the same Practice in the following Words: Let us draw near—having our Hearts sprinkled from an evil Conscience, and our Bodies wash'd with pure Water (e). The Prophet Ezekiel, in like Manner: Then I will sprinkle clean Water upon you, and ye shall be clean from all your Filthiness, and from all your Idols will I cleanse you (f). But if the Sea-waters could be procur'd, they were preferred before all others, because by reason of their Saltness, φύσει τὸ ὕδωρ τὸ θαλάσσης καθαρτικόν ἐστὶ, the marine Waters are naturally cathartick, as we are inform'd by the *Scholias*t upon Homer (g). Hence Aristeas reports concerning some of the Jews, who liv'd near the Sea, that every Day before Mattins they us'd ἀπονίψασθαι θαλάσση τὰς χεῖρας to wash their Hands in the Sea. The Argonauts in Apollonius are said to find Circe washing her Head in the Sea (h) :

——— *Κίρκην
Εὐρεν ἄλδος νοτίδεσσι κάρη ἐπιφαδρύνουσαν,
Τοῖον γὰρ νυχίοισιν ὀνείρασιν ἐπίοιησ'*

And that Saying of Euripides ;

*Θάλασσα κλύζει πῶτα τ' ἀνθρώπων κακά.
All human Ills are wash'd away by the Sea ;*

is apply'd to superstitious Men, Οἱ θαλάσση πεικαθαίρονται, ἡοὶ καθάρησεν ἑαυτοὺς ἐν τῇ θαλάσσῃ, according to Stobæus. When the Sea-water could not easily be procur'd, they sometimes mixed the Water with Salt, and to that they frequently added Brimstone, which was also thought to be endu'd with a purifying Quality, whence πειθειν signifies to purify. In Theocritus an House is thus purify'd (i),

——— *καθαρῶ δὲ πυρώσατε δῶμα θεῖον
Προῖον, ἕπεια δ' ἄλεσσι μεμιγμένον, ὡς νενόμισαι,
Θαλλῶ ἐπιρραίνεν ἐσεμμένον ὠβλαβὲς ὕδωρ.*

The same Custom is also mention'd by Juvenal (k),

——— *Cuperent lustrari, siqua darentur
Sulphura cum tædis, Et si foret humida laurus.*

(c) Æneid. lib. VI. ver. 635. Conf. Æneid. lib. IV. ver. 635. & lib. II. ver. 71.
(d) De Abstinent. lib. IV. cap. 12. (e) Heb. X. 22. (f) Ezek. XXXVI. 25.
(g) Iliad d. ver. 3, 4. (h) Argonaut. lib. IV. ver. 662. (i) Myft. XXIV. ver. 94.
(k) Sat. II. ver. 157.

It may be farther observ'd, that the purify'd Person was thrice besprinkled, the Number three being commonly observ'd in the Performance of religious Ceremonies. Thus in Ovid, (l), Terque senem flamma, ter aqua, ter sulphure lustrat.

There are two Ways of purifying mention'd in the Moral Character of Theophrastus, which differ from those already describ'd. The first, by drawing round the Person purified a Squill, or Sea-onion; of which Rite Lucian hath also taken Notice(m). The second, call'd πεισικυλακισμός, from σκύλαξ, a Whelp, which was drawn about the purify'd Person. This Method was us'd by almost the whole Greek Nations, as we are inform'd by Plutarch (n). Grangæus, in his Commentary on the foremention'd Passage of Juvenal, mentions another Way of purifying, by fanning in the Air.

Whoever had committed any notorious Crime, as Murder, Incest, or Adultery, was forbidden to be present at the holy Rites, till he had been duly purified. Pausanias (o) mentions a Temple dedicated by Orestes to the Eumenides, into which, if any such Person enter'd, tho' with a Design only to take a View of it, he was immediately seiz'd by the Furies, and lost the Use of his Reason. Nay, even one, who had returned from a Victory over his lawful Enemies, was not permitted to sacrifice, or pray to the Gods, before Purification; whence Hæstor, in the Place before cited, adds,

— ἐδ' ἐπὶ ἐς κελαινερέϊ Κρονίωνι
Αἵματι καὶ λυθρῷ πεπалаσμένον ἔρχεται ἄδαι.

'Tis impious, while I'm thus besmear'd with Gore,
To pay my Vows, and mighty Jove adore.

J. A.

The Persons allow'd to be present, were call'd Ἀβέβηλοι, ὄσιοι, &c. the rest βέβηλοι, ἀλιτροί, ἀκαθάρτοι, ἐνασείεις, δυσασείεις, μιαροί, παμμιαροί, ἀνοσιοί, ἐξεργούωμοι, &c. Such were Servants at some Places, Captives, unmarried Women, and at Athens all Bastards (p), except in the Temple of Hercules at Cynosarges, where they were permitted to be present, because Hercules himself was under some Illegitimacy, being not one of the great immortal Gods, but having a mortal Woman for his Mother.

It was also unlawful for the Δευτερόπώμοι, or Υστερόπώμοι, to enter into the Temple of the Eumenides, saith Hesychius (q), and after him Phavorinus; that is, such, who had been thought dead, and, after the Celebration of their Funeral Rites, unexpectedly recovered; or, those, who, after a long Absence in foreign Countries, where it was believed they were dead, returned safe home. Such Persons at Athens were purified by being let thro' the Lap of a Woman's Gown, that so they might seem to be new-born, and then admitted to the holy Rites. In like manner, at Rome, such as had been thought dead in Battle, and afterwards unexpectedly escaped from their Enemies, and returned Home, were not permitted to enter at the Door of their own House, but were receiv'd at a Passage open'd in the Roof. It would be needless to mention all those who were accounted profane at particular Sacrifices, or Places; I shall only therefore in general add, that, before the Ceremonies were begun, the Κῆρυξ, or sometimes the Priest, with a loud Voice commanded them all to be gone, as in Callimachus (a);

ἐκὰς, ἐκὰς, ὅσις ἀλιτρός.

Which Saying Virgil (b) hath thus imitated.

———— procul, ὁ procul este, profani,
Conclamat Vates, totoque absistite luco.

Distance, away, cries out the Priest aloud,
Ye profane Miscreants, and unhallow'd Crowd,
Set not one Foot within this sacred Grove.

J. A.

In Allusion to this Custom, Orpheus commands the Doors to be shut, before he explains the mysterious Parts of Philosophy;

Φθέξομαι οἷς θέμις ἐστ, δ' ἔρας δ' ἐπίθεθε βεβήλοις
Πᾶσιν ὁμῶς. —

I'll sacred Oracles to them proclaim,
Whom Virtue doth with quick'ning Heat inflame,
But the Profane, let them be all shut out.

J. A.

Sometimes the interior Part of the Temple was divided from the other by a Cord, beyond which the βέβηλοι were not permitted to pass. This Cord is call'd in Greek Σχοινίον, whence Men excluded from the holy Rites, are call'd by Demosthenes (c) Ἀπεχοινισμένοι, separated by a Cord.

The Ornaments, used in the Time of Sacrifice were such as follow; the Priests were richly attir'd, their Garments being usually the same, at least not much differing from, Royal Robes. At Athens they sometimes used the costly and magnificent Garment invented by Æschylus for the Tragedians, as we learn from Athenæus (d). At Sparta their Garments were suitable to the other Parts of their Worship, being neither costly nor splendid, and they always pray'd and sacrific'd with their Feet bare.

In all holy Worship, their Cloaths were to be without Spots, or Stains, loose, and unbound. If they had been touch'd by a dead Body, or struck by Thunder, or any other Way polluted, it was unlawful for the Priest to officiate in them. The Purity of the sacerdotal Robes is frequently insisted on in the Poets. Thus;

(a) Hymn. in Apollin. (b) Æn. VI. v. 358. (c) Orat. in Aristogit. (d) Athen. lib. I. cap. 18.

— Pura cum veste Sacerdos.

And again,

Casta placent superis, pura cum veste venito.

Various Habits also were used, according to the Diversity of the Gods, in whose Honour the Solemnities were celebrated. They who sacrificed to the celestial Gods, were cloath'd with Purple; to the infernal Gods they sacrificed in Black, to Ceres in white Garments. They had also Crowns upon their Heads, which were generally compos'd of the Leaves of the Tree, which was accounted sacred to the God to whom they paid their Devotions. Thus, in the Sacrifices of Apollo, (a) they were crown'd with Laurel; in those of Hercules with Poplar; and after the same Manner in the rest. Crowns and Garlands were thought so necessary to recommend Men to the Gods, and were so anciently used, that some have derived the Custom of putting them on at Feasts, from the primitive Entertainments, at which the Gods were thought to be present (b). But of this there will be Occasion to speak more fully, when the Grecian Entertainments come to be described.

Beside this Crown, the Priest sometimes wore upon his Head a sacred Infula, or Mitre, from which, on each Side, hung a Ribband, as we learn from Virgil (c). Infulae were commonly made of Wool, and were not only worn by the Priest, but were put upon the Horns of the Victim, and upon the Temple and Altar; in like Manner also were the Crowns used by them all. But the Covering their Head with a Mitre was rather a Roman than a Grecian Custom, and first introduced into Italy by Aeneas, who cover'd his Head and Face, lest any ill-boding Omen, appearing to him, should disturb the religious Rites, as we are inform'd by Virgil (d). Nevertheless, some of the Roman Sacrifices were offer'd after the Grecian Fashion, ἀπαρκαλύπτω κεφαλῇ, with their Heads uncovered, as particularly those of Saturn mention'd by Plutarch (e), the Rites whereof were first brought from Greece, according to Macrobius (f). The same is affirm'd by Dionysius the Halicarnassian (g) concerning the Sacrifices offer'd on the great Altar of Hercules, which were first instituted by Evander the Arcadian. The Victims had the Infula, and the Ribbands tied to their Horns, the Crowns and Garlands upon their Necks. Whether this Order was perpetual, is not certain. However, that Victims were adorn'd with Garlands, is attested by innumerable Examples, whereof I shall only at present mention that of Polyxena, who, being to be sacrificed, is call'd, by Lycophron, σεσηφόρεε βῆς, because ἐσεφόρουν ἢ ἀνθεσιν ἐπατίον τὴν θυομένην, they adorn'd with Garlands, and bestrew'd with Flowers them who were to be sacrificed; as the Scholiast there observes. Upon solemn Occasions, as the Reception and Petition of any Signal Benefit, they overlaid the Victims Horns with Gold. Thus Diomedes, in Homer (h), promises Minerva,

(a) Apoll. Rbod. Arg. β'. 159. (b) Atbenæus, lib. XV. cap. 5. p. 674. (c) Æn. X. v. 538. (d) Æneid. lib. III. (e) Quæst. Roman. (f) Saturn. lib. I. cap. 10. conf. ejusdem libri cap. 8. Aurelius Vissor, Servius in Æneid. III. (g) Lib. I. Antiq. Rom. (h) Cassandra v. 327.

You shall have offer'd, Pallas, as your Right.

J. A.

Alluding to this Custom, Porphyry calls the Oven, design'd for Sacrifice, Χρυσοκέρας. Pliny (k) hath observed, that the larger Sacrifices only, such as Oxen, were thus adorn'd; but the contrary appears out of a Decree of the Roman Senate, cited by Macrobius (l), in which the Decemviri are commanded to sacrifice to Apollo, after the Grecian Manner, an Ox and two She-goats with gilded Horns; unless, as some think, Goats were also numbered amongst the hostiæ majores, or greater Victims; as the Sheep were counted maximæ, or the greatest, not for their Bigness, but their Value and Acceptableness to the Gods.

The Altars were deck'd with sacred Herbs, called by the Romans Verbenæ; which is a general Name for all the Herbs used at Sacrifices; and here, as at other Times, every God had his peculiar Herb in which he was thought to delight.

The solemn Times of Sacrificing were varied according to the Temper of the Gods. To the celestial Gods they sacrificed ἄπὸ τὴν ἑὼ ἀνατέλλοντι τῆς ἡλίας, in the Morning about the Time of the Sun's Rising, or at least in open Day. To the Manes and subterraneous Gods, who were thought to hate the Light, and to frequent the Earth by Night only, they offer'd their Devotions περὶ ἡλίας δυσμᾶς, about Sun-set (m), and very often at Midnight; at which Time the magical Rites, whereof Hecate was President, were celebrated.

All Things being prepared, the Mola salsa, with the Knife, or other Instrument to kill the Victims, and the Crowns, were brought in a Basket call'd Κανῶν; whence the Athenian Virgins, whose Office it was to carry this Basket at the Panathenæa, and some other Solemnities, were call'd Κανηφόροι.

The Victim, if it was a Sheep, or any of the smaller Animals, was driven loose to the Altar; but the larger Sacrifices often were brought by the Horns, as appears from the Words of Homer, where he describes the Sacrifices of Nestor, Ἐὼν δ' ἀγέτω κέραων Στρατίῳ κ' Ἰῶ Εχέφρων.

Stratius and Echephron dragg'd by the Horns

An Ox ———

Sometimes, as Juvenal (n) witnesses, the Victims were led by a Rope; but then it was a long one, and not too close or strait, lest the Victim should seem to be brought by Force to the Altar: Thus that Poet's Words intimate:

*Sed procul extensam petulans quatit hostia funem
Tarpejo servata Jovi, frontemque coruscant.*

(i) Il. κ'. (k) Lib. XXXIII, cap. 3. (l) Saturnal, lib. I. (m) Apollonii Scholiastes in lib. I, Argon. (n) Sat, XII.

And lest the Victim should seem to be sacrificed unwillingly, and by Constraint, the Cords were commonly loosed. Thus we find done in Virgil (a);

Tres Eryci vitulos, & Tempestatibus agnam Cædere deinde jubet, solvique ex ordine funes.

In one of Aristotle's Epigrams, an old Woman leads a Bull to the Altar by his Ear, to shew his Compliance;

Τὸ πον γραῦς σείχιστα μόνη μόνον ἄλ' ἔλκει
Τὸν δ' ἐπὶ βωμόν, ὃ δ', ὡς ματέρει παῖς, ἔπεται.

Sometimes there were certain Persons appointed to fetch the Sacrifice with musical Instruments, and other Solemnities; but this was seldom practised, except at the larger Sacrifices, such as Hecatombs.

After this, they stood about the Altar, and (b) the Priest, turning towards the right Hand, went round it, and sprinkled it with Meal and holy Water; he besprinkled also those who were present, taking a Torch from the Altar, or a Branch of Laurel. This Water was call'd ἕρπιδ, being the same they wash'd their Hands with at Purification. On both which Accounts the Poets use χερνίπιδαι, instead of ἱερὰ ῥέζειν to offer Sacrifice. The Vessels also they purified with Onions, Water, Brimstone, Eggs, and the like.

This done, the Crier proclaim'd with a loud Voice; Τίς τῆδε? Who is here? To which the People replied, Πολλοὶ κἀγαθοί, Many and good. After this they pray'd, the Priest having first exhorted them to join with him, saying, Εὐχόμεθα, Let us pray. An Example of this we find in Aristophanes (c); ——— TP. Ἄλλ' εὐχόμεθα.

Τίς τῆδε πᾶ ποτ' ἐσί; OE. Πολλοὶ κἀγαθοί.

Their Requests were generally, that the Gods would vouchsafe to accept their Oblations, and send them Health and Happiness; they added at their αἰτητικὰ, petitionary Sacrifice, a Request for whatever particular Favour they then desired. They seem to have had a general Form of Prayer used on all such Occasions, tho' sometimes varied as to the Words. One of these remains in Aristophanes (d), another in Athenæus (e) out of Menander's Flatterer. At this Time also the Crier commanded Silence in these or the like Words, Εὐσημεῖτε σίγα, σίγα πᾶς ἔσω λεώς. The same Custom was observed by the Romans in their Sacrifices, where they proclaim'd, Favete Linguis, which Words answer to the Greek εὐσημεῖτε, by which the People seem not to have been commanded to remain in a deep and uninterrupted Silence, but rather to abstain from all Speeches and ominous Words. Thus Horace has interpreted it,

Parcite verbis.*

Let no ill-boding Words your Lips prophane.

(a) Æneid. lib. V. ver. 772. (b) Aristoph. ejusque Schol. in Pace. (c) Pag. 66z. Edit. Amstæled. (d) Loco citato. (e) Deipn. lib. XIV.

Prayer being ended, the Priest having before examin'd all the Members of the Victim, to see if it had any Blemish, or other Defect; proceeded now to examine (unless this also had been done before) whether it was found within. To this End Meat was set before it, as Barley-meal before Bulls, and Vetches before Goats; which, if they refused to eat, they were judged unfound. They sometimes besprinkled it with cold Water, which, if it endured, without shrinking, it was thought to be some Way indisposed; thus (f) Plutarch. This being done, they made Trial whether the Victim was willing to be sacrificed to the Gods, by drawing a Knife from its Forehead to the Tail, as Servius hath observed (g), at which, if the Victim struggled, it was rejected, as not acceptable to the Gods; but if it stood quiet at the Altar, then they thought the Gods were pleased with it; yet a bare Non-Resistance was not thought sufficient, except it also gave its Consent, as it were, by a gracious Nod, which was the ancient Manner of granting or approving (whence the Word ἐπινεύειν among the Greeks, and annuere among the Romans, signifies to give Assent to any Thing) and to this End they pour'd Water into its Ear, and sometimes Barley, which they call'd Περχύρας, according to the Scholiast upon Apollonius Rhodius (h).

After this they pray'd again; which being done, the Priest took a Cup of Wine, and, having tasted it himself, caused the Company to do the like, and then pour'd forth the Remainder between the Horns of the Victim, as we learn from Ovid (i),

————— dum vota sacerdos

Concipit, & fundit purum inter cornua vinum.

While the muttering Priest prays at the hallow'd Shrine,

And pours between the Horns the unmix'd Wine. H. H.

The same Custom is every where mention'd in Authors; but it will be sufficient to observe this one Example in that remarkable Epigram of Furius Crævus, wherein the Vine thus bespeaks the Goat:

Κῆν με φάγῃς ἐπὶ ῥίζαν, ὅμως ἔτι καρποφορήσω
 Ὅσον ἐπισπείσῃ σοι, τράγε, θυομένῳ.

Tho', leach'rous Goat, you on my Cyons browze,

And tear the swelling Clusters off my Boughs,

Luxuriant Sprouts shoot out with fresh Supplies,

To pour betwixt your Horns at your own Sacrifice. H. H.

After this, Frankincense, or other Incense was strew'd upon the Altar, and as some say, upon the Forehead of the Victim, being taken out of the Censer, call'd in Greek Θυμαματήριον, with three Fingers, as Ovid (k) hath inform'd us, (f) Libro de Defect. Orac. (g) In Æneid. XII. v. 173. (h) Argon. lib. V. 425. (i) Metam. lib. VIII. v. 593. (k) Fast. lib. II.

Et digitis tria thura tribus sub limine ponit.

Which thither, with three Fingers, she convey'd.

H. H.

Whence it is, that the Pythia in Porphory saith, that the whole Hecatombs of the Thessalians were not more acceptable to the Gods than the $\psi\alpha\iota\delta\alpha$, which a certain Hermionian offer'd with his three Fingers. Then they pour'd forth Part of the $\omicron\upsilon\lambda\alpha\iota$ on the Back of the Victim, which was, upon that Account, bedew'd with a small Sprinkling of Water. This being done, they pray'd again, and then offer'd the Remainder of the $\omicron\upsilon\lambda\alpha\iota$ upon the Altar; all these they call'd $\Pi\rho\omicron\delta\upsilon\mu\alpha\tau\alpha$, as being offer'd before the Victim.

Then the Priest, or the $\text{Κ}\eta\rho\upsilon\zeta$, or sometimes the most honourable Person in the Company, where no Priest was present, kill'd the Beast, by striking him down, or cutting his Throat. Sometimes the Person who kill'd and prepar'd the Victim, which was accounted a more ignoble Office, was different from him who offer'd it upon the Altar. If the Sacrifice was in Honour of the celestial Gods, the Throat was bended up towards Heaven; and this Homer calls $\alpha\upsilon\epsilon\rho\upsilon\epsilon\nu$, or in one Word $\delta\upsilon\epsilon\rho\upsilon\epsilon\nu$: But if the Sacrifice was made to the Heroes or infernal Gods, it was kill'd with its Throat towards the Ground, saith Eustathius (a). If, by any Chance, the Beast escap'd the Stroke, leap'd up after it, bellow'd, did not fall prone upon the Ground, after the Fall kick'd and stamp'd, was restless as tho' it expired with Pain and Difficulty, did not bleed freely, and was a long Time a dying, it was thought unacceptable to the Gods; all these being unlucky Omens, as their Contraries were Tokens of Divine Favour and good Will. The $\text{Κ}\eta\rho\upsilon\kappa\epsilon\varsigma$ did then help to slay the Beast, light the Wood, and do other inferior Offices, while the Priest or Soothsayer, with a long Knife, turn'd over the Bowels to observe, and make Predictions from them (it being unlawful to touch them with his Hands.) The Blood was reserved in a Vessel call'd $\Sigma\rho\alpha\gamma\epsilon\acute{\iota}\omicron\nu$, $\text{Α}\mu\nu\acute{\iota}\omicron\nu$, or, according to Lycophron, $\text{Π}\omicron\iota\mu\alpha\nu\delta\rho\acute{\iota}\alpha$, and offer'd on the Altar to the celestial Gods: If the Sacrifice belong'd to the Gods of the Sea, it was pour'd into Salt Water; but if they were by the Sea-side, they slew not the Victim over the $\Sigma\rho\alpha\gamma\epsilon\acute{\iota}\omicron\nu$, but over the Water, into which they sometimes threw the Victim, whereof this Instance occurs in Apollonius Rhodius (b).

 $\text{Η}\kappa\epsilon \kappa\alpha\tau\grave{\alpha} \pi\epsilon\acute{\iota}\mu\eta\varsigma$ —————

Then, praying to the blue-ey'd Deity,
O'er the curl'd Surface stabb'd the Sacrifice,
And cast it over Deck. —————

H. H.

In the Sacrifices of the infernal Gods, the Beast was either slain over a Ditch, or the Blood pour'd out of the $\Sigma\rho\alpha\gamma\epsilon\acute{\iota}\omicron\nu$ into it. This done,

(a) Il. d. (b) Argon. IV. v. 1601.

they pour'd Wine, together with Frankincense, into the Fire, to increase the Flame; then they laid the Sacrifice upon the Altar, which, in the primitive Times, was burn'd whole to the Gods, and thence call'd Ολόκαυσον, or όλοκαύτωμα. Prometheus, as the Poets feign, was the first that laid aside this Custom; for considering that the poorer Sort had not wherewith to defray the Expences of a whole Burnt-Offering, he obtain'd Leave from Jupiter, that one Part only might be offer'd to the Gods, and the Remainder reserv'd for themselves. The Parts belonging to the Gods were the Μηρῖ, these they cover'd with Fat, call'd in Greek Κνίσση, to the End they might consume all together in a Flame; for except all was burn'd, they thought they did not καλλιερῆν, or litare, i. e. that their Sacrifice was not accepted by the Gods. Upon the Μηρῖ were cast small Pieces of Flesh cut from every Part of the Beast, as the Απαρχαί, First-fruits of the Whole; the doing this they call'd ώμοδετεῖν, either because they first cut the Shoulder, which is in Greek call'd ΩμοϞ; or because they did Ωμα τίθεισθαι, put these raw Pieces of Flesh upon the other Parts. Thus we find done in Homer (c)

——— κ' ἔσφαξαν, κ' ἔδειξαν,
Μηρῖς ἐξέταμον, κατὰ τε κνίσση ἐκάλυψαν,
Δίπλυχα ποίησαντες, ἐπ' αὐτῶν δ' ὠμοδέτησαν.

The Μηρῖ, Thighs, were appropriated to the Gods, because of the Honour due to these Parts, διὰ τὸ λυσιτελεῖν τοῖς ζώοις εἰς βιάδισιν τε καὶ γένεσιν, because of their Service to Animals in walking and generating (d). And hereby they commended, in the mystical Sense of this Rite, both themselves and all their Actions and Enterprizes to the Divine Protection (e). Thus Eustathius (f); but Casaubon (g) tells us, they sometimes offer'd the Entrails, herein contradicting Eustathius, who informs us that these were divided among the Persons present at the Sacrifice; and Homer, in the Descriptions of his Sacrifices, usually tells us, that they feasted upon them, σπλάγχν' ἐπάσαντο. By the Word σπλάγχνα, tho' it properly signifies the Bowels, are to be understood, saith my Author (h), the Spleen, Liver, and Heart; and that it is sometimes taken for the Heart, will appear by the Signification of its Compounds: For by ἀσπλάγχνϞ ἀνῆρ, is meant a pusillanimous Man; as, on the contrary, εὐσπλάγχνϞ denotes a Man of Courage, saith the Scholiast (i) upon Sophocles. Yet, in some Places, the Entrails were burn'd upon the Altar. Thus Æneas does in Virgil (k):

Tum Stygio Regi nocturnas inchoat aras,
Et solida imponit taurorum viscera flammis.

And another Person in Ovid's Metamorphosis;

Viscera jam tauri flammis adolenda dedisset.

But Dionysius the Halicarnassian, comparing the Grecian and Roman Rites of Sacrifice, affirms, that only the ἀπαρχαί of the Entrails, as hath been observed concerning the other Members, were sacrificed. " Having wash'd their Hands (saith he) and purify'd the Victims with clear Water, and bestrew'd their Heads with the Fruits of Ceres, they pray to the Gods, and then command the Officers to kill the Victims: Some of these do thereupon knock down the Victim, others cut its Throat when fallen to the Ground, others flay off its Hide, divide the Body into its several Members, and cut off the First-fruits (ἀπαρχάς) from every Entrail, and other Members; which, being sprinkled with Barley-meal, are presented upon Canisters to the Persons who offer the Sacrifice, by whom they are laid upon the Altar to be burnt, and, whilst they are consuming in the Fire, Wine is pour'd upon them. All which is perform'd according to the Grecian Rites of Sacrifice, as will easily appear from the Poems of Homer (l)." He then proceeds to confirm this Description of the Sacrifices by several Testimonies out of Homer, which, being to the same Purpose with others already cited out of that Poet, shall be omitted.

Whilst the Sacrifice was burning, the Priest, and the Person who gave the Victim, jointly made their Prayers to the God, with their Hands upon the Altar, which was the usual Posture in praying, as will be shewn hereafter. Sometimes they play'd upon musical Instruments in the Time of Sacrifice, thinking hereby to charm the God into a propitious Humour, as appears by a Story related in Plutarch (m), of Ismenias, who, playing upon a Pipe at a Sacrifice, when no lucky Omens appear'd, the Man, by whom he was hired, snatch'd the Pipe, and play'd very ridiculously himself; and when all the Company found Fault with him, he said, To play satisfactorily is the Gift of Heaven. Ismenias, with a Smile, reply'd, Whilst I play'd, the Gods were so ravish'd with the Musick, that they were careless of the Sacrifice, but to be rid of thy Noise, they presently accepted it. This Custom was most in Use at the Sacrifices of Aerial Deities, who were thought to delight in musical Instruments, and harmonious Songs.

It was also customary, on some Occasions, to dance round the Altars, whilst they sung the sacred Hymns, which consisted of three Stanzas, or Parts; the first of which, call'd Strophe, was sung in turning from East to West; the other, named Antistrophe, in returning from West to East; then they stood before the Altar, and sung the Epode, which was the last Part of the Song. These Hymns were generally composed in Honour of the Gods, containing an Account of their famous Actions, their Clemency, and Liberality, and the Benefits conferr'd by them upon Mankind; and concluded with a Petition for the Continuation of their Favours. They were call'd by a general Name Παιάνες, but there was also a particular Name belonging to the Hymns of almost every God, saith Pollux. For Instance, the Hymn of Venus was call'd Ἰαίωσις, that of Apollo was peculiarly nam'd Παιάν, and both of them were stil'd Προσώδια; the Hymns of Bacchus were call'd Διδύραμβοι, &c. Of all musical Instruments, the Flute seems to have been most used at Sacrifices, whence comes the Proverb Ἀυλητῆ ἑῖον ζῆν, applied to those that live upon other Men's Charges, because Ἀυληταὶ, Flute-players, used to attend on Sacrifices, and to partake of them, and so lived on free Cost, as Suidas (a) informs us. At some of the Jewish Sacrifices, the Priests sounded Trumpets whilst the Victims were burning upon the Altar (b). And most of the Heathen Nations were possess'd with a Belief that the Gods were affected with the Charms of Musick in the same Manner as Men. On which Account they were ridicul'd by the Christian Apologists (c). But, as hath been several Times observed, the Feasts or Sacrifices of the Gods being managed in the same Manner with the Entertainments of Men; it is no Wonder that musick Instruments, so much used by all Nations at their Feasts and merry Meetings, should be admitted at the Festivals and Sacrifices of the Gods.

The Sacrifice being ended, the Priest had his Share, of which an Account is given in the preceding Chapter. A tenth Part was also due to the Magistrates call'd Περύλατοι, at Athens. At Sparta the Kings had the first Share in all publick Sacrifices, and the Skin of the Victim. It was usual also to carry home some Part of the Offering, for good Luck's Sake. This was term'd Υγιεία, as conducing to their Health and Welfare (d). The Athenians were commanded, by a Law, to observe this Custom; and covetous Men sometimes sold what remain'd, and made a Gain of their Devotion. Sometimes the remaining Parts of the Sacrifice were sent to absent Friends; to which Custom (e) Theocritus thus alludes;

ἤ τυ δὲ θύσας
Ταῖς Νύμφαις, Μόρσωνι καλὸν κρέας αὐτίκα πέμψον.

Go, Swain, go offer to the tuneful Nine,
And send a Part to Morson.

H. H.

For the most Part, especially if they had received any particular Mark of Divine Favour, the Sacrifice being ended, they made a Feast; for which Purpose there were Tables provided in all the Temples. Athenæus (f) tells us, that, amongst the Ancients, they never indulged themselves with any Dainties, nor drank any Quantity of Wine, but at such Times; and thence an Entertainment is call'd Θοῖνον, because they thought they were obliged διὰ θεὸς οἶνεῖσθαι, to be drunk in Honour of the Gods; and to be drunk was term'd μεθύειν, because they did it μετὰ τὸ θύειν, after Sacrificing. Hence epulari, comedere, and the like Words, which express Eating or Feasting, are sometimes put for Sacrificing. Thus we find in Virgil (g);

*Jupiter omnipotens, cui nunc Maurusia pitis
Gens epulata toris, Lenæum libat honorem.*

Hence also the Gods were said to feast with Men. Thus Alcinous speaks in Homer (h):

(a) Voce Ἀυλητοῦ. (b) Numer. X. 10. (c) Conf. Arnobius contra Gen. lib. VII. (d) Athenæus lib. III. Hesychius v. υγιεία. (e) Idyl. V. v. 130. (f) Deipn. lib. III. c. 3. conf. quæ postea in IV. hujus Archæol. lib. dicentur de Conviv. (g) Æneid, lib. IV, ver. 206. (h) Odyss. ἦ. ver. 202.

Αἰεὶ γὰρ τοπάρθ γε Θεοὶ φαίνονται ἐναργῆς
 Ἡμῖν, Εὐδ' ἔρδωμθ ἀγχιλειτὸς ἐκαπίμβας
 Δαίνυνται τε παρ' ἄμμι, καθήμθροι ἐνθα παρ ἡμέης.

On the same Account Jupiter, and the rest of the Gods, are said to go to a Feast in Æthiopia, which is only a poetical Description of a Festival-time in that Country;

Ζεὺς γὰρ ἐπ' Ὀκεανὸν μετ' ἀμύμονας Αἰθιοπῆας
 Χθιζὸς ἔβη μετὰ δαῖτα· Θεοὶ δ' ἅμα πάντες ἕποντο.

From these and the like Instances in other Authors, it appears to have been a Custom very ancient in Greece. The same was also generally observ'd in other Countries. Hence the just Man in Ezekiel (a), is said to be one, who bath not eaten upon the Mountains, neither bath lift up his Eyes to the Idols. And in Exodus, when God had commanded Moses to require Leave of Pharaoh for the Jews, to go into the Wilderness to sacrifice to the Lord (b); he thus bespeaks Pharaoh in a different Form of Words, but importing the same Sense (c): Thus saith the Lord God of Israel, Let my People go that they may hold a Feast to me in the Wilderness. Hence Balaam and the Princes with him are entertain'd by Balac, King of Moab, with the Flesh of sacrific'd Victims (d): And the Moabites entic'd the Israelites to be present at the Feasts of their Gods (e). Hence also, to mention no more Examples, the Israelites are commanded to destroy the Idolatry of the Nations, who liv'd about them, lest thou do sacrifice to their Gods, and one call thee, and thou eat of his Sacrifice (f). All the Time the Feast lasted, they continued singing the Praises of the God. Thus we find, after the Sacrifice offer'd by Chryses and the Grecians to Apollo in Homer,

Οἱ δ' ἤ πανημέριοι μολπῇ θεὸν ἰλάσκοντο,
 Καλὸν ἀείδοντες παῖνονα κούροι Δαχαιῶν,
 Μέλποντες Ἐκάεργον.— (g)

All Day in moving Sounds the Grecians sing,
 And echoing Woods with Io Pæans ring,
 To win the Gods t'accept their Offering.

When they sacrific'd to Festa, it was usual to eat up whatsoever was left, and to send any Part of it abroad was thought a Crime; whence the Proverb Εσία θύειν, and among the Romans, Lari sacrificare, is applied to Gluttons, who eat up all that is set before them. To this Goddess also they offer'd the first Part of their Libations, at least of all those which were paid to the Household Gods, whence comes the Proverb ἀρ' Εσίας ἀρχεῖς, to begin at home. This Custom the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (h) tells us, was founded upon a Grant of Jupiter to Vesta. After he had suppress'd the Sons of Titan, he promised Vesta to grant whatever she would request; whereupon she first desired that she might enjoy a perpetual Virginity; and, in the next Place, that she might have the first Part in all Sacrifices. The last Part also, as well as the first, was offer'd to Vesta, she being the same with the Earth, to which the first and last Parts belong; all Things are produc'd out of that Element, and again resolv'd into it. Or because Vesta, who presides over aræ & foci, the Altars and Hearths of Houses, is custos rerum intimarum, Keeper of the most secret Things, and on that Account to be honour'd above all other Deities. Which Reason is assign'd by Cicero (i). To return, the Feast in some Places was to be ended before Sun-set, as Athenæus (k) informs us, and was not to exceed an appointed Time in any Place. After the Feast, they sometimes play'd at Dice, as Saubertus hath observed out of Plato. And whence was this Custom deriv'd? No doubt, from the common Practice of recreating themselves with all Sorts of Plays and Diversions after Meals. Neither were Dice only, but any other Sort of Game used after the Feasts upon Sacrifices. Hence of the Jews, who had sacrificed to the Golden Calf, it is said, that they sat down to eat, and rose up to play. But of this Custom, a more particular Account will be given, when the Grecian Entertainments shall be describ'd. The Entertainment and Recreation being ended, they returned to the Altar, and offer'd a Libation to Jupiter τέλει Ⓞ, the perfect. The primitive Greeks were wont to offer the Tongues, together with a Libation of Wine, to Mercury, as Athenæus (l) reports. The same Custom is also mention'd by Apollonius (m) :-

Οὐδ' ἐπιδὴν μέλει πείλα κρασσάμφοι δὴ λοιβὰς
 Ἡ δέ μιν ἐστὶ, τέως ἐπὶ τε γλώσσησι χέου' ἴο
 Αἰδομύθαις ὕπνου ἢ διὰ κνέφας ἐμνάον' ἴο.

Then, as the Custom of their Country was,
 On th' burning Tongues the mix'd Libation flows;
 This done, they haste unto their soft Repose.

H. H.

The Tongues they offer'd this Time, either with a Design to make an Expiation for any indecent Language which had been spoken; or in Token that they committed to the Gods, as Witnesses, what Discourse had pass'd at the Table; or to signify, that what had been spoken there ought not to be remember'd afterwards, or divulg'd. They were offer'd to Mercury, the God of Eloquence, as taking a particular Care of that Member (n).

After all they return'd Thanks to the God for the Honour and Advantage of sharing with him in the Victim, and then were dismiss'd by the Κήρυξ in this or the like Form, λαοῖς ἀρεσις (o).

Thus much concerning the Grecian Sacrifices. There were also other Sorts of Presents offer'd to the Gods, even from the earliest Times, either to pacify them when angry, or to obtain some future Benefit, or as a grateful Acknowledgment of some past Favour. They consisted of Crowns and Garlands, Garments, Cups of Gold, or other valuable Metals, and any other Thing, which conduced to the Ornament, or the Enriching of the Temples: They were commonly term'd ἀναθήματα, and sometimes ἀνακέλευμα, from their being reposit in the Temples, where they sometimes were laid on the Floor, sometimes hung upon the Walls, Doors, Pillars, or the Roof, or any other conspicuous Place. Thus we find in Horace,

— Me tabula sacer
Votiva paries indicat uvida
Suspendisse potenti
Vestimenta maris Deo (p).

And in Virgil (q), to mention only this Example more,

— Si qua ipse meis venatibus auxi,
Suspendive tholo, aut sacra ad fastigia fixi.

Sometimes the Occasion of the Dedication was inscribed either upon the Thing itself, or, when the Matter of that could not bear an Inscription, upon a Tablet hung up with it. This appears from the fore-mentioned Passage of Horace, and (to mention this one Instance more) from the following Distich of Tibullus (r):

Nunc, Dea, nunc succurre mihi: nam posse mederi
Picta docet Templis multa tabella tuis.

I shall only add this one Observation, that when any Person left his Employment, or Way of Life, it was customary to dedicate the Instruments belonging to it, as a grateful Commemoration of the divine Favour and Protection. Thus in the following Epigram (s), a Fisherman makes a Present of his Nets to the Nymphs of the Sea;

Ταῖς νύμφαις Κίνυεις τίθει δίκτυον ἃ γδ ἀέρες
Γῆρας ἀκοντισὴν μόχθον ἐκρηβολίης.

Shepherds hung up their Pipes to Pan, or some of the Country Deities. This we find done by one in Tibullus (t):

Pendebatque vagi pastoris in arbore votum,
Rustica silvestri fistula sacra Deo.

Hence Lais, decay'd with Age, dedicates her Mirror to Venus (u):

Η σοβαρὸν γελάσασα καθ' Ἑλλάδα ἢ γδ ἐργάντων,
Εσμὸν ἐνὶ προθύροις Λαῖς ἔχουσα ἰών,

Σοί, Πάριον, τὸ κάλοπλερον ἐπει τοίη μὲν ὀργῆς
 Οὐκ ἐδέλω οἶη δ' ἦν παρ' ὅ, ἐδωχίμαι.

Whoever is willing to be farther inform'd concerning the Nature and Kinds of these Presents , may consult Pausanias (α), who has left us a very particular Description of those in the Delphian Temple, which was the richest of any in Greece .

Before the Conclusion of this Chapter, it will be necessary to observe farther, that, by a very ancient and universal Prescription, the Tenths of many Things were claim'd by the Gods. Hence the Grecians , having driven the Persians out of Greece , presented a Golden Tripod to Delphian Apollo out of the Tenths of the Spoils taken in the War, as we are informed by Diodorus the Sicilian (x). Another Example is the golden Buckler dedicated to Jupiter , after the Taking of Tanagra , with this Inscription, as we find it in Pausanias (y):

Ναδς μὲν ριάλαν χρυσέαν ἔχει, ἐν ᾗ Τανάγρας
 Τῆς λακεδαιμονίης συμμαχίδ' ὅ γε τεθέν,
 Δῶρον ἀπ' Ἀργείων, καὶ Ἀθηναίων, καὶ Ἰώνων,
 Τῶν δεκάταν ρίκας εἵνεκα τῶ πολέμου.

Lucian mentions the Tenths of Spoils dedicated to Mars (z). Herodotus (a) speaks of a golden Chariot and Horses consecrated to Pallas by the Athenians , with this Inscription:

Ἐθνεα Βοιωτῶν καὶ Χαλκιδέων δαμάσαντες
 Παῖδες Ἀθηναίων ἔρμασιν ἐν πολέμῳ,
 Δεσμῶ ἐν ἀχλύθεντι σιδήρεον ἔσβεσαν ὕβειν
 Τῶν ἰωπυς δεκάτω Παλλάδι τάς δ' ἔθεσαν.

We find in Xenophon (b), that the tenth Part of the Product of a certain Field, consecrated to Diana , was sacrificed every Year. And in Pausanias (c), that the Siphnians constantly presented a tenth Part of their gold Mines to Apollo . It was also customary for Kings to receive a tenth Portion of the several Revenues of their Subjects. This was paid by the Athenians to Pisistratus , the receiving whereof that Tyrant excuses in his Epistle to Solon (d), as being not expended in his own private Service, but laid out upon Sacrifices, and for other publick Uses. The same Custom prevailed in other Countries; whence Samuel describes some of the Inconveniences, which the Jews were bringing upon themselves by desiring a King, in the following Words (e); He will take the Tenth of your Seed, and of your Vineyards, and give them to his Officers and to his Servants. He will take the Tenth of your Sheep, and yeshall be his Servants. So constant and universal was the Custom of paying Tenths to the Gods and Kings, that δεκάδισται , and δεκαταλόγοι , Collectors of Tenths , are general Names

And that the same was derived from the most early Times, appears from the well-known Example of Abraham, who gave Tithes of all to Melchisedeck, King of Salem, and Priest of the most high God (g).

C H A P. V.

Of the Grecian Prayers, Supplications, and Imprecations.

THE Piety of the ancient Grecians, and the honourable Opinion they had conceived of their Deities, doth in Nothing more manifestly appear, than in the continual Prayers and Supplications they made to them; for no Man amongst them, that was endued with the smallest Prudence, saith Plato (b), would undertake any Thing of greater or lesser Moment, without having first asked the Advice and Assistance of the Gods; for this they thought the surest Means to have all their Enterprizes crown'd with Success. And that this was practis'd by the whole Nation of the Greeks, as well as by their Philosophers, and that in the most primitive Times, is fully witnessed by their Poets, and other ancient Writers. Thus in Homer's ninth Iliad, Nestor is introduc'd praying for Success to the Ambassadors, whom the Grecian Chiefs were sending to Achilles. In the tenth Iliad, Ulysses enters upon his Expedition into the Trojan Camp in the same Manner. In the last Iliad, Priamus entreats the Assistance of the Gods, before he durst adventure himself into the Tent of Achilles to redeem Heetor's Body. And to forbear other Instances, the Heroes seldom engage with their Enemies, till they have first implored the divine Protection and Favour.

It seems to have been the universal Practice of all Nations, whether civil or barbarous, to recommend themselves to their several Deities every Morning and Evening. Whence we are inform'd by Plato (i), "That at the Rising both of the Sun and Moon, one might every where behold the Greeks and Barbarians, those in Prosperity, as well as those under Calamities and Afflictions, prostrating themselves, and hear their Supplications." And to this Custom Horace seems to allude in the following Words (k),

Longas o' utinam, dux bone, ferias
Præstes, dicimus integro
Sicci mane die, dicimus uvidi
Cum Sol Oceano subest.

(f) Etymologicus Auctor, Harpocration, Hesychius, Said. (g) Gen. XIV. 18, 20.
 (b) Timæo. (i) De Legibus, lib. 10. (k) Lib. IV. Od. V. v. 37.

That is, We pray for the Prosperity of Italy, both in the Morning, and in the Evening.

The Lacedemonians had a peculiar Form of Prayer, for they never used, either in their publick or private Devotions, to make any other Request, than that the Gods would grant what was honourable and good for them, as Plato (l) witnesseth; but Plutarch (m) tells us, they added one Petition more, viz. That they might be able to suffer Injuries. The Athenians (n) used, in their publick Prayers, to desire Prosperity for themselves and the Chians; and at the Panathenæa, a Solemnity which was celebrated once in five Years, the public Crier used to implore the Blessing of the Gods upon the Athenians and Platæans.

But passing by the Subject-Matter of their Prayers, it is my principal Design in this Place, to describe their Manner of supplicating the Gods; and because they made their Supplication to Men, for the most Part, with the same Ceremonies, I shall treat of them both together. Petitioners both to the Gods and Men us'd to supplicate with green Boughs in their Hands, and Crowns upon their Heads, or Garlands upon their Necks, which they did with a Design to beget Respect in those to whom they made their Supplications, as Triclinius (o), in his Commentary upon Sophocles, teacheth us. These Boughs are call'd by several Names, as θαλλοί, or κλάδοι ἐκείνητοι, φυλλάδες ἐκείηρες, and ἐκτεχνεῖαι. They were commonly of Laurel, or Olive; whence Statius (p),

Vittatæ Laurus, & supplicis arbor Olivæ.*

About this Grove the peaceful Olive grows
And sprightly Laurel, on whose verdant Boughs
Wreath'd Garlands hung ———

H. H.

Which Trees were chiefly made use of, either because they were ἀιθαλαῖς, always green and flourishing, whence Euripides (q) gives the latter the Epithet of ἀκήνησι ⊕, never fading: Or, because the Laurel was a Sign of Victory, Success, and Joy; the Olive of Peace and Good-will. In these Boughs they put Wool, which was not tied to them, but wrapped about them; for which Reason the Tragedian (r) seems to have call'd it Δεσμὸν ἄδεσμον φυλλάδι ⊕, the Tye without a Knot. And, from their being wrapped round, some think that they were called by the Romans, Vittæ, or Infulæ; whence Virgil (s),

————— *Ne temne quod ultro
Præferimus manibus vittas, ac verba precantum.*

Let not the King despise us, 'cause we bear
This Wreath, the Badge of Suppliants. ———

And by the Greeks they were term'd σέμματα: in which Sense Homer is by some thought to have us'd this Word (z);

Στέμματα ἔχων ἐν χερσὶν ἐκπιβόλου Απόλλωνος.

For according to the old Scholias upon Sophocles (u), σέμμα is to be interpreted τὶ προσελιμνύον ἕριον τῶν θάλλων: certain Wool wrap'd about a green Bough. With these Boughs, and sometimes with their Hands, if they were doubtful whether they should prevail or not, it was usual to touch the Knees of the Statue, or Man, to whom they address'd themselves; if they had Hopes, they touch'd his Right Hand, but never the Left, that being thought unlucky; if they were confident of Success, they rose as high as his Chin, or Cheeks. It was customary to touch the Head, because that is the principal and most honourable Member in a Man's Body, as Eustathius (w) thinks; or because they desired the Person should give his Consent to their Petitions, annuendo, by a Nod, for this was the Manner of granting Requests; whence Jupiter, in Homer (x), having granted Thetis's Petition, adds, Εἰ δ', ἄγε τοι κεφαλῇ καλανεύσομαι, ὄφρα πεποίθῃς.

Τῆτο γὰρ ἐξ' ἐμέθεν γένητ' ἀθανάτοισι μέγιστον
Τέκμων, ἢ γὰρ ἐμὸν παλιμάγρετον, εἴδ' ἀπατηλὸν,
Οὐδ' ἀτελεύτητόν γ', ὅσ'τι κεφαλῇ καλανεύσω.

But lest you doubt, if you can doubt a God,
I'll clear all Scruples by a solemn Nod:
For that's with me a never-failing Sign,
And does Performance to my Vows enjoin.

H. H.

The Hand they touch'd (y) as being the Instrument of Action. The Knees, because they desired the Soul of the Person should bend, as it were, and incline to their Requests, for that the Joints in that Place are more flexible than in any other Part; or because the Knees are the Instruments of Motion, as if they requested the Person to bestir himself, and walk about to effect their Desires. Whence, to use the Words of Pliny (z), hominis genibus quædam religio inest, observatione gentium: hæc supplices attingunt; hæc, ut aras, adorant; fortasse quia ipsis inest vitalitas. By all Nations a Sort of religious Veneration is paid to the Knees of Men: These the Suppliants endeavour to touch: These they adore in the same Manner as they do the Altars of the Gods; perhaps because there is a Sort of lively Vigour in them. Sometimes they touched the Knees with one Hand, and the Head, or Hands, with the other. Thus did Thetis by Jupiter:

Κεῖν δ' ἀνέβη μέγαν ἕρπονιν, οὐλύμπόν τε,
Εὖρεν δ' εὐρύσπα Κρονίδωσ' ἄτερ ἠμύρον ἄλλων
Ἀκροτάτη κορυφῇ πολυδειράδ' ἔλύμποιο.

Καὶ ἴα πάριθ' αὐτοῖο καθεζέτο, καὶ λάβε γένων
Σκαίῃ, δεξιτερῇ δ' ἄρ' ἔω' ἀνδρεῶν ἔλθεσα.

Just had the blushing Goddeſs heav'd her Head,
From off the Pillow of her Saffron Bed;
When azure Thetis Heav'n-ward wing'd her Flight,
And on the steep Olympus did alight;
Where she all-ſeeing Jove found ſeated high,
Remote from each inferior Deity;
Straight at his Feet herſelf ſhe proſtrate caſt,
And with her Right Hand ſeiz'd, with eager Haſte,
His briftly Beard; her Left his Knee embrac'd.

H. H.

Sometimes they kiſs'd the Hands and Knees. Priamus, in Homer, is introduc'd touching the Knees of Achilles, and kiſſing his Hands (a).

Χερσὶν Ἀχιλλῆος λάβε γένασα, καὶ κύσε χεῖρας.

And Ulyſſes reports, that himſelf, when a Suppliant to the King of Egypt, touch'd, and kiſs'd his Knees (b);

Καὶ κύσα γέναθ' ἔλων, ὁ δ' ἔρυστο, καὶ μ' ἔλεησεν.

If the Petitioners were very fearful, and the Perſons, to whom they addreſs'd themſelves, of very great Quality, they kiſs'd their Feet. This Kiſs the Romans call'd Labratum, and the old Gloſs renders it φίλημα βασιλικόν, ἢ ἀπασικόν βασιλέως, a Kiſs of a King. Sometimes they kiſs'd their own Hands, and with them touch'd the Perſon. Another Sort of Salutation there was, whereby they did Homage to the Gods, viz. by putting the Fore-finger over the Thumb (perhaps upon the middle Joint, which they us'd in counting the Number Ten) and then giving a Turn on their Right Hand, as it is in Plautus (c);

Ph. Quod ſi non affert, quo me vortam neſcio.

Pa. Si Deos ſalutas, dextro vorſum cenſeo.

Ph. But if he fail me, I know n't which Way to turn.

Pa. Turn!—why you muſt turn to th' Right Hand, I conceive,

If you would reverence the Gods. ————— H. H.

Sometimes they proſtrated themſelves at the Entrance of the Temples, and kiſs'd the ſacred Threshold. To which Cuſtom Tibullus thus alludes (d),

Non ego, ſi merui, dubitem procumbere Templis,

Et dare ſacratis oſcula liminibus.

So generally was this Cuſtom of Kiſſing practis'd by Supplicants, that Euſtathius (e) thinks the Word προσκυνᾶν, to adore, was deriv'd from κύειν, which ſignifies to kiſs.

(a) Iliad. ὦ. v. 478. (b) Odyſſ. ξ. v. 279. (c) Curcul. Act. I. Scen. I. (d) Lib. I. Eleg. V. (e) Ad Odyſſ. ὦ.

Another manner they had of Supplicating, by pulling their Hairs off their Head, and offering them to the Person, to whom they pray'd. After this manner did Agamemnon present himself before Jupiter, when Hector had given the Grecians an Overthrow *

Πολλὰς δ' ἐκ κεφαλῆς προθελόμενος ἔλατο χεῖρας
 Ἵψ' ἰόντι Διὶ —————

But the Celestial Jove presents with Hairs,
 Which from his mangled Head with eager Force he tears.

H. H.

They often clothed themselves with Rags, or put on the Habit of Mourners, to move Pity and Compassion.

The Postures they us'd were different. Sometimes they pray'd standing, sometimes sitting, but generally kneeling, because that seems to bear the greatest Shew of Humility; whence the Words γυνάξασθαι, γονυπέσειν, and such like, signify to pray, or make Supplication. Prostration was almost as frequent as Kneeling. The Poets furnish us with innumerable Examples of Prostration before the Images, Altars, and sometimes the Thresholds of the Temples. Thus in Ovid †:

*Ut templi tetigere gradus, procumbit uterque
 Pronus humi, gelidoque pavens dedit oscula saxo.*

Which Practice is ridicul'd by Lucretius †, who says, that it is no act of Piety,

————— *procumbere humi prostratum, & pandere palmas
 Ante Deum delubra.* —————

The Greek Scholiast upon Pindar tells us, they were wont to turn their Face towards the East, when they pray'd to the Gods; and to the West, when to the Heroes, or Demigods. Others † say, they always kept their Faces towards the Sun; that in the Morning they turn'd themselves to the East, at Noon to the South, and in the Evening to the West.

The safest Place for a Petitioner, either to Gods or Men, (next to the Temples and Altars) was the Hearth, or Fire-place, whither it was usual to betake themselves when they came to any strange Place in Travel or Banishment, as being the Altar of Vesta, and the Household Gods. Whence Ulysses, being a Suppliant in the Court of Alcinous King of Phaacia, is thus introduc'd by Homer †:

————— καὶ ἄρ' ἔζη ἐπ' ἰχάρη ἐν κοίῃσι.

When they had once seated themselves there, in the Ashes, in a mournful Posture, and with a dejected Countenance, they needed not to open their Mouths, neither was it the Custom so to do; for those Actions spoke loud enough, and told the Calamity of the Suppliant more movingly than a thousand Orations. This we learn from Apollonius Rhodius †,

* Iliad. α. † Metamorph. lib. i. † Lib. v. † Cælius Rhod. lib. xii. c. 2.
 † Odyss. β. v. 153. † Argonaut. lib. iv.

Τὼ δ' ἄνω, καὶ ἀναυδοὶ ἐπὶ αἰζαντί
 Ἰζανόν, ἢ τι δίκη λυγροῖς ἐκέρχοι τίτουται.

As soon as o'er the Threshhold they can get,
 At Vesta's Shrine in humblest fort they fit;
 For there they're safe, and of Want nothing know, Such Privilege our Laws the Poor allow.

H. H.

The Molossians had a peculiar manner of Supplicating, different from that of all other Countries; which was practis'd by Themistocles, when he was pursued by the Athenians and Lacedæmonians, and forc'd to cast himself on the Protection of Admetus, King of that Country; he held the young Prince (who was then a Child) in his Arms, and in that Posture prostrated himself before the King's Household Gods; this being the most sacred manner of Supplication among the Molossians, and which was not to be rejected, as Plutarch reports ^c.

They that fled to the Gods for Refuge, or Help, us'd first to crown the Altars with Garlands, and then to make known their Desires to the Deity.

Πάντας δὲ βωμούς οἱ κατ' Ἀδμήτην δόμους,
 Προσῆλθε, καζέεσθε, καὶ προσήξατο.

And when with Myrtle Garlands he had crown'd
 Each Altar in Admetus' House, he pray'd,

H. H.

Saith Euripides ^f, It was usual also to take hold of the Altars, as Virgil ^g witnesseth,

Talibus orabat dictis, arasque tenebat.
 Laying his Hands on th' Altar, thus he pray'd.

Whence Varro is of Opinion that Altars were call'd aræ, q. ansæ, which Word is us'd to signify any thing that may be taken hold of. It was also an usual Gesture in praying, to lift up their Hands towards Heaven. Πάντες ἀνδρωποὶ ἀνατείνουμεν τὰς χεῖρας εἰς τὸ ἕρανὸν οὐρανὸς ποιεῖμεν. We do all lift up our Hands to Heaven, when we pray, saith Aristotle ^h. The same is affirm'd by Helena in her Prayer to Juno ⁱ,

————— ὁρθὰς ὠλένας πρὸς ἕρανόν
 Ριπτῶνθ', ἐν οἰκῆς ἀστέρων ποικίλιματα.

We our extended Arms, great Goddeffs, heav'd Tow'rd thy Pavilion deck'd with Asterisfms.

Whence it appears, that the Reason of lifting up their Hands, was, that they might hold them towards the Gods, whose Habitation is in Heaven. Homer every where mentions this Posture, always adding χείρας ἀναγών, when he speaks of any one that pray'd to the Gods. And this Custom was so universally receiv'd, that the Holding up of Hands is sometimes us'd to signify Praying, as in Horace :

Cælo supinas se tuleris manus.

If to the Gods your Hands have been lift up.

On the contrary, because the infernal Gods were suppos'd to have their Habitation beneath the Earth, it was usual to pray to them with Hands pointed downwards. Sometimes the better to excite the Attention of these Gods, they stamp'd the Ground with their Feet. This is said to have been done by the Actors, when they pronounc'd those Words of Hecuba, wherein she invokes the Assistance of the infernal Gods to save her Son Polydorus ^g.

Ω ἄθόνηι θεοῖ, σώσατε παῖδ' ἑμόν.

Whence Cleantem, cum pede terram percussisset, versum ex Epigoni dixisse ferunt : 'Tis reported of Cleantes, that having first stamp'd the Ground with his Foot, he recited the following Verse out of the Epigoni :

Audisne hæc, Amphiaræ, sub terram abdite ^h.

When they lay prostrate or kneel'd upon the Earth, it was customary to beat it with their Hands. Thus the Mother of Meleager is introduc'd by Homer ⁱ :

Πολλὰ ἦ καὶ γαῖαν πολυπέρενη χέρσιν ἐδάξια
Κικλήσκωσ' Ἀΐδην, καὶ ἑπαιὴν Περσεφόνειαν, Πρόχην καθεζομένην.

Lastly, They who pray'd to the Deities of the Sea, expanded their Hands towards the Sea. This we find done by Achilles in Homer when he invokes Thetis ^k ; As likewise by Cleantus in Virgil ^l :

*Ni palmas ponto tendens utrasque Cleantus,
Fudissetque preces, Divosque in vota vocasset:
Dii, quibus imperium pelagi, &c.*

These Customs are briefly explain'd by the Scholiast on the foremention'd Verses of Homer's ninth Iliad : Εὐχονται ἦ οἱ ἦρωες τοῖς μὲν ὑπερῷοις θεοῖς, ἀνω τὰς, Χείρας ἀνασχόντες μέγα ἐυχόμενοι ἑκάστον.

The Heroes pray to the Celestial Gods, lifting up their Hands to Heaven, as in the Verse there cited. Τοῖς ἦ θαλασσίοις, To the Gods of the Sea, they pray'd thus :

^g Euripides Hecuba v. 79. ^h Cicero Tusculan. Quæst. lib. II. ⁱ Iliad. i. v. 564.
^k Iliad. α. v. 350. ^l Æneid. V. 233.

Πολλὰ ὃ μητρὶ φίλη ἤρσατο χεῖρας ἰερῶν,

Πρὸς θάλασσαν ἠλονότι. Extending his Hands towards the Sea. Τοῖς κατὰ χερσίν τοις ὃ, κόπτοντες ὃ γῆν, ὡς ἐνθάδε φασ. But to the subterraneous Gods, they pray'd beating the Earth, as is here done by Meleager's Mother. Prayer being ended, they lifted up their Hand to their Mouth, and kiss'd it; which Custom was also practis'd by the Romans, whenever they pass'd by a Temple, and was accounted a sort of Veneration, as Alexander ab Alexandro informs us^a; and Lilius Gyraldus^b tells us, he hath observed the same in Homer, and others. Whence Lucian in his Encomium of Demosthenes has these Words: Καὶ ὃ χεῖρα πρὸ σώματι προσαγαγόντες, ἔθεν ἄλλο ἢ προσωρεῖν ἐλάμβανον. His Hand being lift up to his Mouth, I did not suspect that he was doing any thing but praying. And again in his Tract concerning Sacrifices: Ο ὃ πένης ἐλάσαστο ὃ δεξιῶν, οὐκ ἄλλο ἢ ἀπὸ δεξιῶν. The poor Man obtains the Favour of the Gods, by kissing his right Hand only. Whence it appears that the right Hand, rather than the left, was kiss'd on this Occasion. Neither was the Palm, or inward Part, but τὸ ὀπισθενᾶν, the Back and outward Part of the Hand thus honour'd. For, to use the Words of Pliny^c, Inest ὃ aliis partibus quædam religio: Sicut dextera osculis aversa appetitur. There is a sort of Religion in other Members: As we find by the Custom of kissing the Back of the Hand.

It will not be improper to observe in the last Place, that τὰς εὐχαῖς ὁμολογᾶσιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι ὀνομαστέρως ἢ βαρβάρων φωνῇ λεγομένας. It was a common Opinion, that their Prayers were more prevalent and successful, when offer'd in a barbarous and unknown Language: And the Reason assign'd for it was, that αἱ ὀνόματα καὶ γλῶσσαι διακεκοιστοὶ, βαρβάρων μὲν, φύσει ὃ τὰ ὀνόματα ἔχουσιν. The first and native Language of Mankind, tho' barbarous and uncouth, yet consisted of Words and Names more agreeable to Nature^d. Whence it was customary for Magicians, and those who pretended to have a more intimate Familiarity with the Gods than other Men, to make their Petitions in barbarous and unknown Sounds.

Sometimes, if they obtain'd their Request, and it was a Matter of Consequence, they presented to the God some rich Gift, or offer'd a Sacrifice in Thankfulness for the Benefit they had receiv'd; sometimes they related it to the Priest of the Temple, that it might be registred, as a Testimony of the Goodness of the Gods, and their Readiness to hear the Petitions of Mortals, and send them Relief; and for an Encouragement to Men to make known their Wants and Desires to the Deities, and to expect Assistance from them: On which Account, as Euseb. Hist. lib. vi. c. 16. has observ'd, all Prayers in Homer, the Petitions of which are just and reasonable, are rewarded with a full and satisfactory Answer.

From the Grecian Prayers let us pass to their Imprecations. These were extremely terrible, being thought so powerful, when duly pronounc'd, as to occasion the Destruction not only of single Persons, but of whole Families and Cities. The Miseries which beset Atreus, Agamemnon, and others of that Family, were thought to proceed from the Imprecations of Myrtilus upon Pelops their Ancestor, by whom he was thrown into the Sea. Thus Lycophron ^a:

^a Gen. Dicr. lib. iv. cap. 16.

^d Clemens Alexandrinus Strom. i. p. 339.

Φιρανίμους ἰδύφε Νηρείας τάρχε,
Παράλαθρον κελίδα θαύξας γένε.

The same Imprecations are likewise mention'd in the Electra of Sophocles, and the Orestes of Euripides. Tho' by others the Calamities of that Family are ascrib'd to the Curses of Thyestes, Atreus's Brother; whence Thyesteæ preces are us'd proverbially for any dreadful Imprecations: As in Horace ^b, Misit Thyesteas preces.

But the most dreadful Imprecations were those pronounc'd by Parents, Priests, Kings, Prophets, or other sacred Persons. Examples whereof may be found in Homer's ninth Iliad, where Phœnix relates, that the Gods would not permit him to have Children by reason of his Father's Imprecations ^c: And afterwards that Meleager was destroy'd by the Curses of his Mother ^d:

Εξ ἀρίων μητρός κεχολαμφός, ἢ ρά θεοῖσι
Πολλ' ἀχέου' ἔρατο κασιγνήτοιο φόνου.
Πολλά δ' ἢ γαῖαν πολυρόφου χερσιν ἀλοία,
Κικλήσκου· Αἶδην, ἢ ἔπαινον Περσεφόνηαν,
Πρέχου χαδιζομένη· δαίοντο δ' ἀίκεροι κέλπει
Παιδὶ δέμεν θάνατον τῆς δ' ἠεροφίτις Ἐρινός
Ἐκλειν ἔξ Ἐρίβωστην, ἀμείλιχον ἦτορ ἔχουσα.

Hence it was customary for Men condemn'd for any notorious Crime, to be publickly curs'd by the Priests. This befel Alcibiades, against whom, beside Banishment and Confiscation, the Athenians ἐπι καταράδης φεισεψήκισαντο πάντας ἱερεῖς ἢ ἱερεῖας decreed, that he should be curs'd by all the Priests and Priestesses. Which Decree was obey'd by all, who then held that Office, except Theano, who profess'd herself εὐχῶν ἢ καταρῶν ἱερεῖαν γρονόνα· to be by her Office of Priesthood appointed to Bless and not to Curse.

There is likewise frequent mention of Imprecations in the Roman Affairs and Authors. Thus when Crassus undertook that fatal Expedition against the Parthians, wherein he perish'd, ὁ Ατῆι⊙ πεισοδραμῶν σεις δ' πύλλω, ἔδηναν ἐραῖδα χαιομένυν, ἢ τῆ Κράσσε γνομένε χα' αὐτόν, ὀπιδυμῶν ἢ κατασπενδων, ἀράς ἐπιηῶτο δεινάς μὲν αὐτῶ ἢ φεικώδεις· Atejus running to the Gate of the City, placed there a Vessel full of burning Coals, upon which he offer'd Odours and Libations, and pronounc'd most dreadful Curses against Crassus, as he pass'd by ^e. And we are inform'd by Pliny ^f, that divis deprecationibus desigi, nemo non metuit. All Men are afraid of Imprecations. There being no way to avoid or expiate their direfut Effects, according to Horace ^g.

Nulla expiatur victima.*

And that the same Practice was us'd in other Parts of the World, appears from the sacred Writings: Wherein Jonathan, after he had gain'd a glorious Victory over the Enemies of his Country, is reported to have been reduc'd to the last Extremity by the Imprecations of Saul, his Father and King ^b. And Joshua is said to have pronounc'd a solemn Curse upon the Person, who should rebuild Jericho ¹: Which was fulfill'd upon Hiel many Ages after ^k. Balaam the Magician was sent for by Balak King of Moab, to curse his Enemies the Israelites ^l. The Patriarch Jacob is introduc'd distributing his Blessings to some of his Children (which was a Custom no less ancient than the other) and his Curses to Reuben, Simeon, and Levi ^m. Noah, the Father of the new World, pronounc'd an Imprecation upon his Grand-son Canaan ⁿ, which had its effect a long time after. And the Practice seems to have been deriv'd from the Curses pronounc'd by God upon Adam, and afterwards upon Cain.

Of the Grecian Oaths.

HA V I N G describ'd the manner of offering Sacrifices and Prayers to the Gods, I shall proceed in the next Place to speak of the Honour paid to them, by using their Names in solemn Contracts, Promises, and Asseverations; and calling them to witness Men's Truth and Honesty, or to punish their Falshood and Treachery. This was reputed a sort of religious Adoration, being an Acknowledgment of the Omnipotence, and Omnipresence, and by Consequence, of the Divinity of the Person thus invok'd. Whence the Poets describe Men's Reception into the Number of the Gods by their being invok'd in Oaths. Thus Horace speaks of Cæsar ^o:

Jurandasque tuum per nomen ponimus aras,

And Lucan of the Roman Heroes, who sacrific'd their Lives in the civil Wars ^p:

Bella pares superis facient civilia Divos:

Fulminibus manes, radiisque ornabit, & astris;

Inque Deum templis jurabit Roma per umbras.

Adrastus in Statius ^q compliments the Ghost of Archemorus in the same manner:

And the inspir'd Writers for the same reason forbid to swear by the Pagan Deities, and command to swear by the true God. Thus in Deuteronomy^a: Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his Name. And in Jeremy^b: How shall I pardon thee for this? Thy Children have forsaken me, and sworn by them that are no Gods. And to forbear other Instances, the Worshipers of the true God are by Dawid^c describ'd by swearing by him.

Ορκος, the God of Oaths, is by Hesiod^d said to be the Son of Eris, or Contention; and Fables tell us, that in the golden Age, when Men were strict Observers of the Laws of Truth and Justice, there was no Occasion for Oaths, nor any Use made of them: But when they began to degenerate from their primitive Simplicity, when Truth and Justice were banish'd out of the Earth, when every one began to make Advantage of his Neighbour by Cozenage and Deceit, and there was no Trust to be plac'd in any Man's Word, it was high time to think of some Expedient, whereby they might secure themselves from the Fraud and Falshood of one another. Hence had Oaths their Original. We are told indeed by Clemens of Alexandria^e, that Chiron first invented Oaths; but the Meaning of that seems only to be this, that he first reduc'd some of the barbarous Nations to a Sense of Religion and Virtue: Whence it is added in the same Place that he taught them δικαιοσύνην, καὶ θυσιᾶς ἱλαράς: Justice and propitiatory Sacrifices. However that be, it is probable, that at first Oaths were only us'd upon weighty and momentous Occasions, yet in Process of Time they came to be applied to every trivial Matter, and in common Discourse; which has given Occasion to the Distinction of Oaths into that, which was call'd Ο μέγας, and us'd only on solemn and weighty Accounts; and that which they term'd Ο μικρός, which was taken in things of the smallest Moment, and was sometimes us'd merely as an expletive to fill up a Sentence, and make a round and emphatical Period. Some there are that tell us, the μέγας ὄρκος was that, wherein the Gods, μικρός, that wherein Creatures were call'd to witness; but the Frailty of this Distinction doth evidently appear by a great many Instances, whereof I shall only mention one, viz. that of the Arcadians, amongst whom the most sacred and inviolable Oath was taken by the Water of a Fountain call'd Styx, near Nonacris, a City, as Herodotus^f, or, according to others, a Mountain in Arcadia; upon which Account it was that Cleomenes the Lacedæmonian, to secure the Fidelity of the Arcadians, had a Design to carry the principal Men among them to Nonacris, and there to make them swear by this Fountain, tho' they had taken another Oath before, as my Author^g hath related. It will not be wholly impertinent in this Place to mention the great Oath of the Gods by the Stygian Lake; for Jupiter, as Hesiod^h reports, Αὐτὸν μὲν γὰρ ἔθηκε θεῶν μέγαν ἕμμενας ὄρκον.

Ordain'd this Lake a solemn Oath should be

To all the Gods.————

Which is the Reason why some derive the Word ὄρκος, an Oath, from Orcus, Hell. This Oath was invented by Jupiter, and prescribed by him to the rest of the Gods in Honour of Styx; because she, with her Sons, came the first of all the Gods to his Assistance in the War against the Giants; or, for that her Daughter Victoria was favourable to him, saith Hesiod; or, because he had quench'd his Thirst with her Waters in the Fight. If any God swore falsely by these Waters, he was debarr'd the Use of Nectar, and depriv'd of his Divinity for an hundred Years; these others reduce to nine, but Servius, out of Orpheus, enlarged them to nine thousand.

The God that was thought more especially to preside over Oaths was Jupiter; tho' all the Gods seem to have been concern'd in them, for it was usual to swear by them all, or any of them; and of any perjurd Person they spoke in general, that he had offended the Gods, of which there are innumerable Instances; But they were thought chiefly and more peculiarly to belong to Jupiter's Care; and tho' perhaps this may not appear (as some think it doth) from the Word Jus-jurandum, which they will have to be so call'd q. Jovis jurandum, yet it will sufficiently be prov'd by the plain Testimony of the Poet, that saith ^a, ———— Ζενα ὄ, ὅς ὄρκων ἑμτοῖς ταύτας νόμισαι.

And Jove, that over human Oaths presides.

The Gods, by whom Solon commanded the Athenians chiefly to swear in publick Causes, were three ^b, viz. Ἰκέρσιος, Καδάρσιος, and Ἐξάνεσιος, or rather one Jupiter Ὀρκος, by three Names, tho' some make them to be three distinct Gods. Plato in his Euthydemus mentions Apollo, Minerva, and Jupiter. Demosthenes also in his Oration against Midias swears by the same three Deities: But in another against Timocrates he takes an Oath by Jupiter, Neptune, and Ceres. And the Athenians very often swore by other Gods: Sometimes by all the Gods in general, sometimes by the twelve great Gods, as μὰ τὸς δωδεκα θεῖς: The Spartans usually, μὰ τὸ Σιών, by Castor and Pollux. the Women's Oaths were commonly by Juno, Diana, or Venus, or νὴ τὸ Σιών, i. e. by Ceres and Proserpina, which were appropriated to the Female Sex, according to Phavorinus ^c, and never used by Men, except in Imitation of the Women, Not that these were the only Oaths used by Women, for the contrary doth abundantly appear, but they were the most usual ones, tho' they often swore by other Goddeses, and sometimes by the Gods, as appears from Aristophanes.

Men generally swore by the God to whom the Business they had in Hand, or the Place they were in did belong; in the Market they usually swore by Ερμῆς Ἀγοραῖος, or Mercury; Plough-men by Ceres; those that delighted in Horses, by Neptune. The Athenians ^d alone of all the Greeks us'd to swear by Isis, and the Thebans commonly by Ostris.

Sometimes either out of Haste, or Assurance of their being in the Right, or some of the like Reasons, they swore indefinitely by any of the Gods, in this manner, Ὀμνυμι ἢ πνα ἢ θεῶν which Form we find used in Plato's Phædrus, and in Aristænetus's Epistle of Euxitheus to Pytheas. Others, thinking it unlawful to use the Name of God upon every slight Occasion, said no more than Nai μὰ ἢ, or, By, &c. by a religious Ellipsis, omitting the Name; thus Phavorinus^a. Suidas also mentions the same Custom, which (saith he) ἐν ἡμίσει περὶ ἐσέβειαν inures Men to a pious Regard for the Name of God^b. Isocrates in Stobæus forbids to swear by any of the Gods in any Suit of Law about Money, and only allows it on two Accounts: ἢ σαυτὸν ἀλ:ίας ἀλχεῖς ἀπολύων, ἢ φίλους ἐν μεγάλῳ κινδύνῳ διασώζων either to vindicate yourself from the Imputation of some Wickedness, or to deliver your Friends from some great Danger. To which Simplicius in his Commentary upon Epictetus adds a third, viz. To obtain some considerable Benefit for your Country. Pythagoras, as Hierocles^c informs us, was very cautious in this Matter, for he rarely swore by the Gods himself, or allow'd his Scholars to do so: Instead of the Gods, he advis'd them to swear by τὴν τετράκτιν, or, the Number four, saith Plutarch^d, as thinking the Perfection of the Soul consisted in this Number, there being in every Soul a Mind, Science, Opinion, and Sense. And 'tis reported of Clinias the Pythagorean, that when he might have clear'd himself from a Fine of three Talents, he rather chose to pay that Sum than to take an Oath. Socrates told his Scholars, that Rhadamanthus, the justest Man that ever liv'd, had expressly forbidden Men to swear by the Gods, but instead of them allow'd the Use of a Dog, Goose, Ram, or such like Creatures; and in Conformity to this Rule, that Philosopher was wont to swear νῆ ἢ κυῶα, χήνα, or πλάτανον, by a Dog, Goose, or Plane-tree. Zeno, the Father of the Stoicks, usually swore νῆ ἢ κάπραιν, i. e. by a Shrub that bears Capers. In Ananius, one swears by Crambe, i. e. Colewort, saith Cælius^e. The same Oath occurs in Teleclides, Epicharmus, and Eupolis; and it seems to have been used more especially amongst the Ionians. By which Instances it appears, that tho' the Custom of swearing upon light and frivolous Occasions was very common amongst the Greeks, as may be seen in their Comedies and other interlocutory Discourses, yet the more wise and considerate sort entertained a most religious Regard for Oaths. Sometimes they seem entirely to forbid all sorts of Oaths, whether just or unjust. To which Purpose is that Saying of Menander,

Ὄρκον ὃ θεῶν, καὶ δικαίας ὁμόνης,

And another of Chærilus,

Ὄρκον τ' ἔτ' ἀδίκον χριστὸν ἔμμεναι, ἔτι δίκαιον.

And, to mention no more Examples, the Scholiast upon Homer informs us, that the ancient Greeks did not περιπέτῳς χριτὸν θεῶν ὁμνύναι, ἀλλὰ

κατὰ τὴν ἀποσυναχόντων rashly, and in common Discourse, swear by the Gods, but made Use of other things. The same Words occur also in Suidas.^t

Sometimes they swore by the Ground they stood upon, as Hippolytus in Euripides ^R:

——— ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ὅρκου ὄμνυμι.

And by the solid Ground I swear.

Sometimes by Rivers, Fountains, Floods, the Elements, Sun, Moon, and Stars, all which they accounted very sacred Oaths^b. Sometimes they swore by any thing they made Use of; as a Fisher by his Nets, a Soldier by his Spear; and this last was a very great Oath, if that be true which ⁱ Justin hath reported, viz. That the Ancients paid Divine Worship to this Weapon; in Memory of which in later Ages it was usual for the Statues of the Gods to hold a Spear: And Eustathius ^k writes, that Cæneus erected a Spear, and commanded that it should be worship'd as a God. Kings and Princes usually swore by their Scepters, as we find every where in Homer; and this also was thought a solemn Oath, because the Scepter is a Badge and Ensign of regal and judicial Power.

They swore also by Men; sometimes by the Dead, of which Demosthenes is a famous Instance, who in an Oration to the People of Athens swore by τὰς ἐν Μαραθῶνι, those that valiantly lost their Lives in the Battle at Marathon; sometimes by the Living, and this was done either by their Σωτηρία, Health and Safety; or Ἀλγῆα, their Misfortunes; or their Names; or some of their Members, as their Eyes, right Hand, especially their Head, which was accounted a very solemn Oath:

——— πατὴρ: κεφαλὴν μέγαν ὄρκον ὀκῶμαι.

By my good Father's Head, to me most dear,
This binding Oath I solemnly do swear.

Mr. Edw. Dechair of Linc. Coll.

faith one in Homer; and Helena, swearing to Menelaus, calls it Ἀγνὸν ὄρκον, a sacred Oath:

Ἀλλ' ἀγνὸν ὄρκον σὸν κέρα καταμῶσα.

Let your vow'd Head this sacred Oath confirm.^l

The Reason of this was, because the Head was accounted the principal and most noble Part of Man; or, as Hansenius ^l thinks, because it was the Hieroglyphick of Health.

Sometimes they swore by those who were dearest to them, as Parents, Children, or those they had an high Esteem for; so the Pythagoreans used to swear by their Master Pythagoras; nor did they this, as thinking him a God, or Hero, but because he was a Person whose Memory they thought deserv'd a great Veneration, and whose Merits had exalted him to a near Affinity with the Divine Nature.

The Manner of taking Oaths was sometimes by lifting up their Hands to Heaven; whence Apollo, in the Poet, bids Lachesis χερᾶς ἀνατείνειν. Tho' Hansenius is of Opinion that this Custom was of a later Original. Sometimes in the μεγάλος ὄρκος, or great and solemn Oath, they laid their Hands upon the Altar, as appears from that Saying of Pericles, who, being desired by a Friend to take a false Oath upon his Account, reply'd, That he was his Friend to the Altars, and no farther; as likewise from the Story reported by Diogenes Laertius of Xenocrates, who, being a Man eminent for a strict and virtuous Life, was summoned as a Witness in a certain Cause, where having spoken what he knew of the Matter, he went to the Altar to confirm his Evidence by Oath; but the Judges, well knowing the Integrity of the Man, with unanimous Consent bid him forbear, and gave Credit to him upon his bare Word. Lastly, to pass by other Examples, the same Rite is observ'd in Virgil at the celebrated League between Latinus and Aeneas * :

*Tango aras, mediosque ignes & numina testor ;
Nulla dies pacem hanc Italii & fœdera rumpet.*

Instead of the Altar, saith Pfeifer ^b, sometimes they made use of a Stone; for this he is beholden to Suidas, who hath taken it out of Aristotle, and Philochorus, and for a farther Confirmation of it hath cited these Words out of the Oration of Demosthenes against Conon, Τῶν τε παρόντων καθ' ἕνα ἡμῶν ἕτωςι πρὸς τὸ λίθον ἀγονίεσσι καὶ ἔξορχῶντες. i. e. And bringing all us who were present, one by one to the Stone, and there administering the Oath to us. What is meant by this Stone, which Pfeifer seems not to have understood, the Scholiast upon Aristophanes hath inform'd us in his Comment upon this Verse :

Τονδορίζοντες ὃ γὰρ τῷ λίθῳ προσίσταμεν.

———— we, tho' depress'd with Age,
With Mutt'rings near Tribunals still approach.

E. D.

Where he tells us, that by λίθος is meant the βῆμα, or Tribunal, in Pnyx, a publick Place where the Athenian Assemblies used to meet. And the Reason why it is so called, he gives in another Place, where the Comedian calls it Πέτρα, a Stone, because it stood upon a Rock; whence λιθωμάται are those that took or imposed an Oath, in Pnyx. Instead of the Altar, in private Contracts the Person swearing, according to the Roman Fashion, laid his Hand upon the Hand of the Party to whom he swore: This Ceremony Menelaus in Euripides demands of Helena ^d:

Ἐπὶ τοῖσδε τοῖς νῦν δεξιᾶς ἡμῶν Στήθε.

T' unite our Hearts, our Hands let's friendly join.

In all Compacts or Agreements it was usual to take each other by the Hand, that being the Manner of plighting Faith; and this was done, either out of the Respect they had to the Number ten, as some say, there being ten Fingers on the two Hands : Or because such a Conjunction was a Token of Amity and Concord ; whence at all friendly Meetings they join'd Hands, as a Design of the Union of their Souls, And the right Hand seems to have been used rather than the left, because it was more honourable, as being the Instrument by which Superiors give Commands to those below them ; whence Crinagoras in an Epigram saith, 'Twas impossible that all the Enemies in the World should ever prevail against Rome :

* Æneid. xii. v. 201.

^a Helen. v. 834.

ἄχρι κε μείνη
Δεξιὰ σημάτων Καίσαρι Φαρσάλῃο.

While God-like Cæsar shall a right Hand have Fit for Command

E. D.

Beside this, in all solemn Leagues and Covenants they sacrificed to the Gods by whom they swore, offering for the most part either a Boar, Ram, or Goat ; sometimes all three, sometimes Bulls or Lambs instead of any of them. Sometimes they cut out the Stones of the Victim, and took the Oath standing upon them. A Ram or Boar they used is properly called Τομίας. The Ceremonies were thus, they first cut some of the Hair off the Victim's Head, and gave Part of it to all present, that all might share in the Oath :

Ἀργῶν ἐν κεφαλῶν τάρμεν τρίχας, αὐτὰρ ἔπειτα
Κήρυκε Τρώων κ' Ἀχαιῶν νύμμαν ἄριστος,

Next from the Victim's Head he cut some Hair,
Which to the ruling Chiefs the Criers bear.

E. D.

The Reason of this Custom Eustathius explains from the following Verses of Sophocles :

Κακῶς κακῶς ἄθαρπτος ἐπέσει χθονός,
Γένος ἅπαντος μίζαν ἐξημημέριος
Αὐτῶς ἔπως περ τόν δ' ἐγὼ τίμνω πλέκων :

Curse attend you, if e'er false you prove,
Your Days in bitter Sorrows may you live,
And when Fate calls (but may that lingring come)
May your dead Corps no fit Interment find :
Yet now I Favours wish: May your whole Race
Plagues heap'd on Plagues vex, and at last cut off,
As I these Locks cut from the sacred Head.

E. D.

After this they invoc'd the Gods to be Witnesses of their Agreement, and to punish the Person that should first violate his Oath. This done, they kill'd the Victims by cutting their Throats ;

— ἀπὸ σομάχους ἀρνῶν τάμει πλείη χαλκῶ*

Then with his piercing Sword their Throats he stabb'd.

For σόμαχος originally signify'd a Throat, as Eustathius observes upon that Place. Hence comes the Phrase ὄρκια τέμνειν, in Latin, ferire fœdus, i. e. to make a Covenant. This done, they repeated the Form of Words, which both Persons were to confirm with mutual Oaths, as appears from Homer's Description of the Truce made between the Grecians and Trojans.

After this, they made a Libation of Wine, which was at this time mix'd, to signify the Conjunction and Concord between the Parties; then praying again to the Gods, they pour'd it fourth, requesting that whoever should first break his Oath, might have his Blood or Brains pour'd out in the same manner; as Homer^a reports.

Οἶνον δ' ἐν κρητῆρος ἀρυσσάμενος διαπίσσει,
 Ἐκχεον, ἢ δ' εὔχοντο θεοῖς ἀιγιγενέτησιν.
 Ὡδὲ δὲ τις εἴπεικεν Ἀχαιῶν τε Τρώων τε·
 Ζεῦ κῦδισι, μίγισι, καὶ Ἀθάλατοι θεοὶ ἄλλοι,
 Ὀππότεροι πρότεροι ὑπὲρ ὄρκια πημήναιαν,
 Ὡδὲ σφι ἐγχείραλος χάρμαδ' ἴσσι, ὡς ὕδει οἶνος,
 Αὐτῶν, καὶ τέκτων, ἀλοχοὶ δ' ἄλλοισι μίγυν.

Others to Heav'n fend up their fervent Prayers,
 And to th' immortal Beings, who th' Affairs
 Of Mankind rule, an awful Worship pay,
 While Streams of pour'd out Wine dye all the Way.

Thus they address the Gods:

Great, mighty Jove, and all ye Pow'rs divine,
 Whose Justice suffers no unpunish'd Sin,
 Bear Witness to the solemn Vows we make,
 And grant, the Party which shall first them break,
 Whoe'er it be, as now the Ground Wine stains,
 May so o'erspread it with their dash'd out Brains.
 This light on them, and their Posterity,
 And may their Wives to all Men common be.

E. D.

It was very usual, to add a solemn Imprecation to their Oaths; which was done, either for the Satisfaction of the Person, by whom the Oath was impos'd; as in that of Demosthenes; Εἰ μὲν εὐορκῶ, πολλὰ μοι ἀγαθὰ γένοιτο· εἰ ἐπορκῶ, ὄξωλης σπολοῖμῳ. If what I swear be true, may I enjoy much Happiness; if not, may I perish utterly. Or, to lay a more inviolable Obligation upon themselves, lest they should, at any time repent of their Purpose, and take contrary Measures to what they then resolv'd upon. Upon which account it was, that the Phocensians^b, who afterwards built the City Massilia in Gallia Narbonensis, oblig'd themselves by an Oath, backed with terrible Imprecations, never to think of returning home; whence came the Proverb $\Phi\omega\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\omega\nu \acute{\alpha}\rho\alpha$, applied to Men under the Obligation of a strict Oath.

^a Iliad. citat.

^b Herodot. lib. i. & Strabo lib. iv.

To return, the Flesh on which they feasted at other Sacrifices, was in this thought unlawful to be eaten; and therefore, saith Eusebius^c, if the Person concern'd was at home, it was buried; for so Priam seems to have done with his Victims in the Sacrifice before mentioned; but if the Party was a Stranger, they drew it into the Sea, as Talthybius did by the Sow, which was sacrific'd at one of Agamemnon's Oaths, or dispos'd of it some other way. Here it may be observ'd, that if any unlucky or ominous Accident happen'd at the Time of Sacrifice, they usually deferr'd, or wholly refus'd to take the Oath, of which we have an Instance in Plutarch^d, who reports that when Pyrrhus, Lyfimachus, and Cassander had concluded a Peace, and met to confirm it by solemn Oath and Sacrifice; a Goat, Bull, and Ram, being brought out, the Ram on a sudden fell down dead; which some only laugh'd at, but Theodotus the Priest forbid Pyrrhus to swear, declaring, that Heaven by that Omen portended the Death of one of the three Kings, whereupon he refus'd to ratify the Peace.

Alexander ab Alexandro^e hath given us another manner of Swearing, which was thus; They took hold of their Garments, and, pointing a Sword towards their Throats, invoc'd the Heavens, Earth, Sun, and Furies to bear witness to what they were about to do; then they sacrific'd a Boar-pig, which they cast into the Sea, and, this being done, took the Oath.

The solemn Way of taking an Oath amongst the Molossians was, by cutting an Ox into small pieces, and then swearing; whence any thing divided into small Parcels, was proverbially call'd Βούς ὁ Μολοσσιῶν , as Suidas^f, and Zenodotus^g report. Erasmus^h, instead of Bos Molottorum, writes Bos Homolottorum, reading in the foremention'd Authors βούν Ομολοσιῶν instead of βούς ὁ Μολοσιῶν .

Another manner of Swearing was that describ'd by *Plutarch*ⁱ, who reports that when the Grecians had overthrown, and utterly routed all the Forces of Xerxes, being flush'd with Victory, they enter'd upon a Design of making a common Invasion upon Persia; whereupon, to keep them firm to their Resolutions, Aristides made them all swear to keep the League, and himself took the Oath in the Name of the Athenians, and after Curses pronounc'd against him, that should break the Vow, threw Wedges of red hot Iron into the Sea; by which was signified, that the Oath should remain inviolable, as long as the Irons should abide in the Sea without swimming; which Custom is, also mention'd by Callimachus, who, as he is cited by the Scholiast upon Sophocles^k, speaks thus of the Phocensians:

$\Phi\omega\kappa\acute{\epsilon}\omega\nu \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\varsigma \kappa\alpha\iota \iota\beta\eta\eta \mu\acute{\epsilon}\gamma\alpha\varsigma \epsilon\iota\nu \acute{\alpha}\lambda\iota \mu\acute{\upsilon}\theta\eta\varsigma,$

While these plung'd Irons the Sea's sure Bottom keep.

There is also another manner of swearing mention'd by Plutarch in the Life of Dion, which Dion's Wife and Sister impos'd upon Calippus the Athenian, being mov'd thereto by a Suspicion that he was privy to a Conspiracy against Dion's Life. It was thus; the Juror went into the Temple of Ceres and Proserpina, or, as some say, of Ceres Thesmophorus, the Law-giver, where, after the Performance of certain Ceremonies, he was clothed in the purple Vestment of the Goddess, and holding a lighted Torch in his Hand, as being in the Presence of the Deity, took the Oath by all the Gods in the World; this the Syracusians accounted the most solemn and sacred Oath that could be.

Another Test the Sicilians generally made use of at Palice, a City of Sicily, where was a Fountain named Acadinus, to which the Jurors came, and, having written the Oath in a Tablet, threw it into the Water, wherein, if it could swim, the Person accus'd was believ'd honest; but if it sunk, he was to be cast into the Flames immediately, which issu'd from the Fountain: Thus *Aristotle*¹ and Stephanus the Byzantian^m.

Other ways also they had of clearing themselves from the Imputation of Crimes. As when the Person accus'd crept upon his Hands thro' the Fire; or held in his Hands a red hot Iron, call'd in Greek Μύδρε, as the Scholiast upon Sophocles reports; which was done by the Innocent without any Sense of Pain. Thus one in *Sophocles*ⁿ tells Creon, that all the Guards were ready to take upon Oath, that they neither buried Polynices themselves, nor knew who had done it;

Ἡρόν δ' ἔτοιμαί μύδρεσ ἀίρειν χερσῶν
 Καὶ πῦρ δέρειν, καὶ θεῶσ ἱερκαμοτήν,
 Τὸ μήτε θράσαι, μήτε τῶ συνιδέναι
 Τὸ πρᾶγμα βεβαίωσαντ' ἢ εἰργασμένω.

There, Sir, we stood ready for all Commands,
 Either hot Bars to take up with our Hands,
 Or pass thro' Fires, or by the Gods to swear,
 That neither we the Body did interr,
 Nor privy to the wicked Action were.

E. D.

A Custom not much differing from these, was practis'd in this Island by our Saxon Ancestors upon the same Account, and was therefore call'd the Fire-Ordeal, for Ordeal in Saxon signifies Purgation. The manner of undergoing this Test was thus: The Person accus'd pass'd blindfold, with bare Feet, over certain Plough-shares made red hot, and plac'd at an unequal Distance from one another; this Ordalium Edward the Confessor forc'd his Mother Emma to undergo, to vindicate her Honour from the Scandal of Incontinency with Alwyn, Bishop of Winchester; and by this Trial she gave a sufficient Demonstration of her Innocence; for having pass'd over the Irons before she was aware of it, she cry'd out, When shall I come to the Place of my Purgation? And Kunigund the Wife of the Emperor Henry the Second, upon the like Imputation, held a red hot Iron in her Hand, and receiv'd no Harm thereby.

^m Ἰν Παλίκκ. ⁿ Antigone, v. 270.

I shall desire the Reader's Leave to mention but one sort more of these Purgation-Oaths, which is described by Achilles Tatius in his eighth Book, Of the Loves of Clitophon and Leucippe. It is this: When a Woman was accused of Incontinency, she was to clear herself from this Charge by Oath, which was written in a Tablet, and hung about her Neck; then she went into the Water up to the Mid-leg; where, if she was innocent, all things remained in the same manner as they were before; but if guilty, the very Water, saith he, swell'd as it were with Rage, mounted up as high as her Neck, and cover'd the Tablet, left so horrid and detestable a Sight, as a false Oath, should be expos'd to the View of the Sun, and the World. Some other sorts of Oaths there were, of which a larger Account might be given, had I not already trespass'd too far upon the Reader's Patience: I shall therefore only add something concerning their religious Observance of Oaths, and so conclude this Chapter.

What a religious Regard they had for Oaths doth appear from this, that εὐορκῶ, or one that keeps his Oaths, is commonly us'd for εὐσεβής, a pious Person, as in Hesiod:

Οὐδ' ἄ τις ἐνὸρκυ χάρις ἔσσει, ἅτε δίκαιε.

Nor just, nor pious Souls shall Favour have.

Aristophanes ° also has taken it in the same Sense:

— εἴ τι χάρις ἐνὸρκυ τρέποις.

If you're with Justice pleas'd.

On the contrary, when they would express a wicked, forlorn Wretch, they call'd him ἐπίορκον, perjurious, which was the worst and most infamous Title they could fix upon him; whence Aristophanes ° speaking of Jupiter's Lightning and Thunder-bolts, which, as some thought, were chiefly level'd against the Wicked, saith, Εἴπερ βάλλει τὸς ἐπίορκε, If perjured Villains are indeed so liable to the Stroke, how comes it to pass that Cleonymus and Theodorus escape so well; or that the poor Oak is so often shatter'd to Pieces, & γὰρ δρυὶς ἐπίορκεῖ, since it can never be perjured? Such as were common and customary Swearers, the Athenians branded with the Name of Ardetti, from Ἀρδ'ητῆς, (saith Hesychius, and out of him Phavorinus) the Name of the Place wherein Oaths were required of them before their Admission to publick Offices, as hath been observ'd in another Place.

False Swearers were in some Places punish'd with Death; in others, suffer'd the same Punishment that was due to the Crime with which they charged any innocent Person; in others, only a pecuniary Mulct. But though they sometimes escaped human Punishment, yet it was thought the divine Vengeance would not fail to overtake them, and the Dæmons always pretended an utter Abhorrence of such enormous Crimes, of which there is a remarkable Instance related by Herodotus 9: There was at Sparta a Man named Glaucus, famed over all Greece for his Justice and Integrity; into his Hands a certain Milesian, fearing some 9 Erato.

Danger at Home, and being encouraged by the Character of the Man, deposited a large Sum of Money ; after some time, the Sons of this Milesian came to Sparta, and shewing Glaucus the Bill, demanded the Money ; Glaucus pretended he was wholly ignorant of the Matter, yet promis'd to recollect with himself, and if he found any thing due to them, to pay it : To do this, he took four Months time, and having gain'd this Delay, immediately took a Journey to Delphi, on purpose to ask Apollo's Opinion, whether it was lawful to perjure himself, thereby to save the Money ? The God, mov'd with Indignation at the Impudence of the Man, return'd him this Answer :

Γλαῦκ' Ἐπικυδέειν, τὸ μὲν αὐτίκα κέρδιον ἔτι
 Ὀρκωκῆσαι ἢ χρήματα λήσασθαι,
 Ὀμνὺ ἐπιθανατός γε ἢ εὐορκον μῖνι ἄνδρα:
 Ἄλλ' Ὀρκα παῖς ἴσιν ἀνώμμος, ἔδ' ἐπι χεῖρας,
 Οὐδὲ πόδες κραιπνὸς δὲ μετήρχεται, μοῖσι πᾶσαν
 Συμμάρφας ὀλίγη γαστήρ, ἢ οἶκον ἅπαντα.

No, Glaucus, no, I think you need not fear
 To bilk your easy Creditor, and swear
 He lent you no such Sum ; you'll gain thereby,
 And this consider'd, you may Death defy,
 Death of the Just alike an Enemy.

But know, that Orcus has a Monster Son Ghastly of Shape, who ever hastens on 'To o'ertake Perjuries ; he'll ne'er forget
 Your hainous Crime, but with revengeful Hate
 Send Losses, racking Pangs, destructive Woe,
 Till he yourself with your whole Race undo.

E. D.

This Prediction was fully accomplish'd in Glaucus, notwithstanding he afterwards restor'd the Money ; for his whole Family was in a few Generations utterly extinct, and so became a memorable Example of Divine Vengeance. But tho' all the other Gods took upon them sometimes to punish this Crime, yet it was thought in a more peculiar manner to be the Care of Jupiter, surnam'd Ὀρκιότης : Pausanias reports, that in the Βουλευτήριον or Council-Hall, at Olympia, there was a Statue of Jupiter with a Thunder-bolt in each Hand, and a plate of Brass at his Feet, on which were engraven certain Elegiacal Verses, compos'd on purpose to terrify Men from invoking that God to witness any Untruth. Beside this, the perjur'd Persons were thought to be haunted and distracted by the Furies, who every fifth Day in the Month made a Visitation, and walk'd their Rounds for that purpose, according to Hesiod,

Ἐν τιμῶν γὰρ φασὶν Ἐρινύας ἀμφοτελεύειν
 Ὀρκον τιτυμένους, τὸν ἔρις τίκε πᾶσι ἰπτόροισι ^a.

^a Ἡμερᾶς γ. 40.

All other Days the Furies quiet rest,
 Only on Fifths the Perjur'd they molest,
 Revenging Orcus, Orcus the sure Bane
 Of all that dare his Deity profane.

E. D.

Whence Agamemnon swearing that he had never known Briſeis call'd the Furies to bear witness.

————— Ἐρινύες, αἱ θ' ὑπὸ γαῖαν
Ἀνδρώπυς τίμωται, ὃ, τις κ' ἐπίσχεον ὀμίσσῃ

Th' Infernal Furies I to witness call,
 By whose Distractions perjur'd Villains fall.

E. D.

Tho' the Punishment here meant by Homer seems to have been inflicted after Death, because he saith ὑπὸ γαῖαν ἀνδρώπυς &c. or, the Men under the Earth; and that this is the meaning of that Place doth appear from another Oath in Homer, where the Infernal Gods are invoc'd after this manner,

————— ὣ εἰ ὑπὸ γαῖαν καμόντας
Ἀνδρώπυς τίμωσθε ὃ, τις κ' ἐπίσχεον ὀμίσσῃ

————— witness, ye Infernal Powers
 Who Souls below torment for Breach of Oaths.

E. D.

Yet some in that Place read καμόντας, and then the meaning of it will be, That the Souls of deceas'd Persons are employ'd in torturing per- jur'd Villains.

In some Places, even insensible Creatures were thought to take Revenge for this Crime; for it was generally believ'd in Arcadia, that no Man could forswear himself by the Waters of Styx, without undergoing some severe and remarkable Punishment: And it is reported of the subterranean Cavern, sacred to Palæmon at Corinth, that no perjur'd Person could so much as enter into it, without being made a memorable Example of Divine Justice. In Sicily, at the Temple of the Pa- lici, in the City Palice, there were certain Crateres, Fonts, or Lakes, (for so sometimes they are call'd) named Delli, out of which there continually issued Flames, and Balls of Fire, with boiling and Rinking Water; and thither People us'd to resort from all Quarters for the deciding of Controversies: If any one swore falsely near these Fonts, he was presently struck either Blind, Lame, or Dead in the Place; or was swallow'd up, and drowned in the Lakes. But of these, mention has been made before ^b.

Notwithstanding these, and other Instances of the Divine Displeasure at this Crime, and the Scandal and Infamy of it, yet was it so much practis'd by the Grecians, that they could never avoid the Imputation

^b Conf. præter Aristotelem & Stephanum supra laudatos, Diodorus Siculus, lib. xi.
Macrobias Saturnal, lib. v. cap. xix.

of Treachery and Perfidiousness; insomuch that Græca Fides came to be proverbially applied to Men, that were wavering, inconstant, and unfit to be truted, or relied upon; Plautus, in his Play call'd Asmaria, by Græca fide mercari, means to buy with ready Money, as tho' without that a Grecian was not to be meddled with; his Words are these,

Diem, aquam, Solem, Lunam, noctem, hæc argento non emo, Cætera, quæ volumus uti, Græca mercamur fide.

I buy not Day, nor Water, nor the Night,
Nor will my Gold the Sun or Moon procure;
All other things, yet first I pay it down, Right Grecian like, for Money I can have.

E. D.

Tully likewise, in his Oration for Flaccus, speaks after the same manner, "That Nation (says he) never made any conscience of observing their Oaths. And their own Country-man Euripides affirms no less:

Πιστὸν Ἑλλὰς εἶδεν εἶδη.

No Sparks of Honesty Greece ever had.

And Polybius yet more fully in the sixth Book of his History, "Amongst the Greeks, (says he) if you lend only one Talent, and for security have Ten Bonds, with as many Seals, and double the number of Witnesses, yet all these Obligations can scarce force them to be honest." Yet Ausonius had a better Opinion of them, unless his Words were Irony and Ridicule, when he said to Paulus,

*Nobiscum invenies κατενόπλα, si libet uti.
Non Poena, sed Græca fide.*—————

At my House too, promise you'll honest be,
A wanton Muse's Trifles you may see.

E. D.

The Theffalians in particular were infamous for this Vice; whence, as Zenodotus hath inform'd us, by Θεσσαλῶν νόμισμα, is meant Fraud and Deceit; and the other Proverb, viz. Θετταλῶν σόφισμα, seems to have had its rise from the treacherous and double Dealing of the Theffalians with their Confederates; a memorable Instance of which we have in the Peloponnesian War, where in the midst of a Battle they turn'd Sides, and deserting the Athenians, went over to the Lacedæmonians: which reason seems more probable than that mention'd by Zenodotus, viz. Their solemn Vow of an Hecatomb, of Men, made every Year to Apollo, without any Design of ever paying it; which they did in imitation of their Fore-father Theffalus, who made such a Vow to Apollo, but, considering how impious and displeasing to the God it was like to be, neglected the Performance of it. The Locrians were no less infamous on the same account, whence those proverbial Sayings, Λοκροὶ τὰς συνθήκας, and Λοκρῶν σύνθημα, do usually denote fraudulent Persons and Practices, as we learn from Zenodotus. And the Lacedæmonians, as they were the most renown'd of all the Grecians for their Valour, Temperance,

rance, and other Virtues, so were the most scandalous for their Treachery, and Contempt of Oaths ; whence they are by Lycophon ^c call'd Αἰμύλοι, which the Scholiast upon that Place expounds, Ψῦσταὶ καὶ δόλιοι, i. e. liars and deceitful ; and by Euripides ^d,

Σπάρτης ἔνοικοι δόλια βυλεύματα

Spartans, fam'd ever for base Treacheries.

Aristophanes speaks yet more fully, when he tells us, they neither accounted Altars, Promises, nor Oaths sacred. His words are these,

Ὅστιν ἔτε βαμοῖ ἔτε πίσις, ἔθ' ὄρκος μῦμι

Who neither Altars, Oaths, nor Trust revere.

And that this was no Calumny may farther appear from the Aphorism of Lysander, one of their most eminent Generals, Εξαπατᾶν χρῆ παῖδ' ἄς μὲν ἀσφαγαλοῖς, πολέμιός δ' ὄρκος, Boys, said he, are to be deceiv'd with Dice, but Enemies with Oaths. Tho' others will have this to be the Saying of Dionysius the Tyrant ^e. However that be, 'tis certain the Lacedæmonians, tho' perhaps more just and punctual in private Affairs, had very small regard for Oaths in publick Business. Their great Agessilaus seems to have thought it but a weak Obligation, whenever it stood in competition with the Publick Good, that great Mark, to which they thought all their Actions were to be directed, infomuch that, as Plutarch ^f affirms, to serve their Country was the Principle and Spring of all their Actions ; nor did they account any thing just or unjust, by any Measures but that.

The Athenians seem to have had a greater regard for Honesty, as may appear from the Story of Themistocles in Plutarch ; for he telling the People had form'd a Design, which, if accomplish'd, would be very advantageous to the Common-wealth, but might not, at this time, be communicated to the whole Assembly ; they order'd him to impart it to Aristides in private ; who, having heard the Matter, came and reported to the People, that it was indeed a very beneficial Contrivance, but withal the most unjust in the World ; whereupon they immediately commanded Themistocles to desist from his Intention. Diogenian, in his Book of Collections, tells us, that Αττικὸς μάρτυς was taken for a sincere and uncorrupt Witness ; as also Αττικὴ πίστις for a true, honest, and untainted Faith : And, tho' some would have this Proverb taken from the Goddess Fides, who had a Temple at Athens, mention'd by Plautus ^g ; and others, not from the Manners of the People, but the Nature of their Soil, which was so unfruitful that it brought forth just as much as was sown, and no more ; whence Attica fides is applied to any Man that restores all that he was entrusted with ; yet Velleius Paterculus ^h assures us, it was taken from their Faithfulness, and unshaken Loyalty to the Romans ; whence Attica fides is by Flaccus ⁱ call'd certa ; by Horace ^k impelluta ; and by Silius ^l Pura. Notwithstanding this, their Honesty was not so firm, but that it might sometimes be shaken by the alluring and specious Temptation of the Publick Good. I will conclude this Chapter with an Instance of this, taken out of Plutarch ^m, which is the more remarkable, and more clearly evidences the Disposition and Temper of that State, because it was approv'd by the Consent of the People, and put in Execution by Aristides, a Man of greater renown for Justice and upright Dealing, than any that City ever brought forth. He, when the Grecians (after they had utterly routed all the Remainers of Xerxes's numerous Army) design'd a common Invasion upon Persa, took a solemn Oath in the Name of the Athenians, to observe the League; but afterwards, when things were brought to such a pass, as constrain'd them to govern with a stronger Hand than was consistent with it, advis'd them to throw the Perjury upon him, and manage Affairs, as their Convenience required. Upon the whole Matter, Theophrastus tells us (saith Plutarch) that this Person was in his own private Affairs, and those of his Fellow-Citizens, nicely just, but in publick Matters did many things according to the State and Condition of his Country, for whose sake he frequently committed Acts of Injustice. Then he adds, that it was reported of him, that to one who was in debate, Whether he should convey a certain Treasure from Delos to Athens, contrary to the League, at the Persuasion of the Samians, he should say, That the thing was not just, but expedient.

C H A P. VII.

Of the Grecian Divination, and Oracles in general.

IT was a received Opinion in all Ages, that the Gods were wont to converse familiarly with some Men, whom they endow'd with extraordinary Powers, and admitted to the Knowledge of their Counsels and Designs. These are by the Greeks call'd μαντις, and μαντική is a general Name for all sorts of Divination, and signifies the knowledge of Things obscure, or future, which cannot be attain'd by any ordinary or natural Means. It is divided by Plato ⁿ, (who is follow'd herein by Aristotle, Plutarch and Cicero) into two Species, one of which is call'd ἀ τεχνικῶς, ἀ φυσικῶς, and naturalis, i. e. unartificial, or natural Divination, as not being attain'd by any Rules, Precepts, or Observations, but inspir'd into the Diviner, without his taking any farther Care about it, than to purify and prepare himself to receive the Divine Afflatus. With this sort were all those endued, who deliver'd Oracles, and foretold future Events by Inspiration, without observing external Signs or Accidents: Such were the Sibyls, and other Enthusiasts. Some there are that reduce Divination by Dreams under this Species, because in their Revelations were made without any Pains or Art of the Dreamers; but herein lies the mistake of this Argument, that not the Dreamers, but the Interpreters of Dreams were the Diviners ; and that their Skill was the Effect of Art and Observation, is evident from the many Books written upon that Subject, and the various Signs deliver'd in them to make Conjectures by ; in like manner, it was not so much the Business of an Augur to see the Birds of Divination, which might casually happen to any rude and unskilful Person ; but after he had seen them, to interpret what was portended by them.

These, therefore, with others of the like Nature, are to be referr'd to the second Species of Divination, call'd Τεχνητή, or Artificial, because it was not obtain'd by immediate Inspiration, but was the Effect of Experience and Observation ; as Sooth-saying : Or depended chiefly upon human Art, Invention, or Imposition ; which nevertheless was not suppos'd to be altogether destitute of Divine Direction and Concurrence ; such was Divination by Lots.

I shall begin with the first sort of Divination, as having a more immediate Dependence on the Gods ; and first, with the noblest part of it, I mean Oracles, which are call'd in Greek χρησμοί, χημωδία, χημωδήματα, μαντεύματα, θεοπρόπια, θεωσιμαία, δ'εραία, &c. The Interpreters, or Revealers of Oracles, χρησμολόγοι, &c. The Consulters, θεοπρόποι, &c. The Places, in which they were deliver'd, χρησθήρια, μαντείαι, &c. Some of which Names were also applied to other sorts of Divination.

Of all the sorts of Divination Oracles had always the greatest Repute, as being thought to proceed in a more immediate manner from the Gods ; whereas others were deliver'd by Men, and had a greater Dependence on them, who might either out of Ignorance, Mistake, or out of Fear, Hopes, or other unlawful and base Ends, conceal, or betray the Truth ; whereas they thought the Gods, who were neither obnoxious to the Anger, nor stood in need of the Rewards, nor car'd for the Promises of Mortals, could not be prevail'd upon to do either of them. Upon this Account, Oracles obtain'd so great Credit and Esteem, that in all Doubts and Disputes their Determinations were held sacred and inviolable : Whence Strabo ^o reports, vast numbers flock'd to them, to be resolv'd in all manner of Doubts, and ask Counsel about the management of their Affairs ; infomuch, that no Business of great Consequence and Moment was undertaken, scarce any Peace concluded, any War wag'd, any new Form of Government instituted, or new Laws enacted, without the Advice and Approbation of an Oracle : Craesus ^p before he durst venture to declare War against the Persians, consulted not only all the most famous Oracles in Greece, but sent Ambassadors as far as Libya to ask Advice of Jupiter Hammon. Minos ^q the Grecian Law-giver, convers'd with Jupiter, and receiv'd Instructions from him, how he might new model his Government. Lycurgus also made frequent Visits to the Delphian Apollo, and receiv'd from him that Platform, which afterwards he communicated to the Lacedaemonians. Nor does it matter whether these things were really true or not, since 'tis certain they were believed to be so ; for hence appears what great Esteem Oracles were in, at least among the Vulgar sort, when Lawgivers, and Men of the greatest Authority were forc'd ^o lib. xvi.

^p Herodot. lib. i.

to make use of these Methods to win them into Compliance. My Author goes yet higher, and tells us, that inspired Persons were thought worthy of the greatest Honour and Trusts; insomuch that sometimes we find them advanc'd to the Throne, and invested with Regal Power; for that being admitted to the Counsels of the Gods, they were best able to provide for the Safety and Welfare of Mankind.

This Reputation stood the Priests (who had their Dependance on the Oracles) in no small stead; for finding their Credit thus thoroughly establish'd, they allow'd no Man to consult their Gods, before he had offer'd costly Sacrifices, and made rich Presents to them: Whereby it came to pass, that few beside great and wealthy Men were admitted to ask their Advice, the rest being unable to defray the Charges required on that account; which contributed very much to raise the Esteem of Oracles among the common People; Men generally being apt to admire the things they are kept at some distance from; and, on the other hand, to condemn what they are familiarly acquainted with. Wherefore to keep up their Esteem with the better sort, even they were only admitted upon a few stated Days; at other times neither the greatest Prince could purchase, nor Persons of the greatest Quality any ways obtain an Answer. Alexander himself was peremptorily denied by the Pythia, till she was by downright Force compell'd to ascend the Tripus, when finding herself unable to resist any longer, she cry'd out Ἀνίκητός εἰμι, Thou art invincible; which Words were thought a very lucky Omen, and accepted instead of a farther Oracle.

As to the Causes of Oracles, it has been disputed whether they were the Revelations of Demons, or only the Delusions of crafty Priests. Van Dale has wrote a large Treatise in Defence of the latter Opinion; but his Arguments are not of such force but that they might without Difficulty be refuted, if either my Design requir'd, or Time permitted me to answer them. However that be, it was the common Opinion, that Jupiter was the first Cause of this and all other sorts of Divination; 'twas He that had the Books of Fate, and out of them reveal'd either more or less, as he pleas'd, to inferior Demons; for which reason he was firnam'd Παννομοφάσις as Eustathius tells us in his Comment upon this verse of Homer, Ἐνθα παννομοφάσις Ζηνὶ μέγιστον Ἀχαιῶν.

— then at the holy Fane

To mighty Jove was the glad Victim slain,
To Jove from whom all Divination comes,
And inspir'd Oracles unriddle future Dooms.

H. H.

Of the other Gods Apollo was reputed to have the greatest skill in making Predictions, and therefore it was one of his Offices to preside over, and inspire all sorts of Prophets, and Diviners; but this was only in subordination to Jupiter, and by Converse with, and Participation from him, as Æschylus' gives us to understand, when he saith,

* Iliad. 9' 250.

* Sacerdotibus.

Στείλλων ὅπως τάχιστα, ταῦτα γὰρ πατὴρ
Ζεὺς ἐγκαθ' Ἀεζία. —————

Send, quickly send, for so my Jove inspir'd
Phæbus commands. —————

H. H.

On the same account, in another place¹, when he brings in Apollo, commanding Men to reverence his own Oracles, He adds, They must also pay due respect to those of Jupiter, without mentioning any of the other Prophetick Deities; His words are these,

Κῆρ' αὖτε χρησμῶς τὰς ἐμὰς τε, καὶ Διὸς
Ταρβῶν κελύα. —————

To mine, and Jove's most sacred Oracles
Pay due Obeifance. —————

Others report, that Apollo receiv'd the Art of Divination from *Pan*², others will have him instructed by *Themis*³, others by *Glaucus*⁴. Lastly, Some were of Opinion, τὴν Ἀφροδίτῃν Οὐρανίαν εἶναι μητέρα ὄλων, πάσης μαντείας καὶ προγνώσεως εὐρετήν. That the heavenly Venus was the Mother of the Universe, and the Inventor of Divination and Prognostication,

The manner of delivering Oracles was not in all Places, nor at all Times the same: in some Places the Gods reveal'd them by Interpreters, as did Apollo at Delphi; in others more immediately, giving answers themselves, which they either pronounc'd viva voce, or return'd by Dreams, or Lots, (the former of which were suppos'd to be inspir'd, and the latter directed by the Gods) or some other Way. The Oracles which the Gods themselves pronounc'd, were term'd χρησμοὶ αὐτόσωγοι, those which were deliver'd by Interpreters, χρησμοὶ ὑποσηπτικοί. At some places, several ways were us'd; for Instance, they who consulted Trophonius, after having propos'd their Questions, first receiv'd an answer in a Dream; and, if that was obscure, and hard to be understood, had the meaning of it interpreted by Men kept for that purpose, and instructed in that Art by the Deity: Several other ways also this God us'd to give answers to Enquirers, as Pausanias reports in his Description of Beotia; and in another place², the same Author mentions these Heroick Verses, as spoken by Trophonius:

Πρὶν δ' ὄρι συμβαλεῖν ἰχθροῖς, σῆσαθε τρέπαιον
Ἀσπίδα κοσμοσαντες ἑμὴν, τὴν ἔισατο μῶ
Θῆρες Ἀριστομίμης Μεσσηνίος, αὐτὰρ ἐγὼ τοι

Thus much of Oracles in general. I shall in the next place endeavour to give a particular Description of them, especially such as were of any Note, together with a short Account of the Ceremonies required of those that consulted them, the Manner of returning Answers, with other things remarkable in each of them. And because Jupiter was reputed to be the first Author of Oracles, I shall begin with those which were thought to be more immediately deliver'd by him.

C H A P. VIII.

Of the Oracles of Jupiter.

DO D O N A^a is by some thought to have been a City of Theffaly; by others it was placed in Epirus; and others, to reconcile these two Opinions, will have two Dodona's, one in Theffaly, and another in Epirus. They that place it in Epirus (and that is generally believ'd to have been the Seat of the Oracle, whether there was another Dodona in Theffaly, or not) are no less divided in their Opinions about it; for some of them will have it in Thefprotia, others in Chaonia, or Moloffia; but Eusebius^b has undertaken to decide the Controversy, telling us, that it did indeed once belong to the Thefprotians, but afterwards fell into the Hands of the Moloffians; and he is herein confirm'd by Strabo^c.

It was first built by Deucalion, who in that universal Deluge, wherein the greatest part of Greece perished, retreated to this Place, which by reason of its Height secured him from the Waters. Hither resorted to him all that had escaped from the Inundation, with whom he peopled his new-built City, calling it Dodona, either from a Sea-nymph of that Name, or Dodon the Son, or Dodone the Daughter of Jupiter and Europa; or from the River Dodon, or Don, for so it is call'd by Stephanus; or, as some say, from Dodonim, the Son of Javan, who was Captain of a Colony sent to inhabit those Parts of Epirus. At the same Time, Deucalion is said to have founded a Temple, which he consecrated to Jupiter, who is thence call'd Dodonæus. This was the first Temple in Greece, but the Oracle seems to have been a considerable Time before it; for Herodotus in the second Book of his History reports, that it was the most ancient of all Oracles in Greece, which would be false, had it not been before Deucalion's Time; for, he, as the Poets tell us, having escaped the Deluge, consulted the Oracle of Themis on Mount Parnassus, what Means he should use to replenish the Country with People; and the same Oracle is said to have been jointly possess'd by the Earth and Nep-tune, before it belong'd to Themis.

The Original of it, though, like all other things of such Antiquity, wrapp'd up in Fables, I will repeat to you out of the foremention'd Place of Herodotus, where he hath given us two Accounts of it, the first of which, he tells us, he receiv'd from the Priests of Jupiter at Thebes in Aegypt, which was this: That the Phœnicians had carry'd away two Priestesses from that Place, one of which they sold into Libya, the other into Greece; that each of these had erected the first Oracle in those Nations, the one of Jupiter Hammon, the other of Jupiter Dodonæus. The other Account was given him by the Priestesses at Dodona, and confirm'd by all those that ministr'd in the Temple, viz. That two black Pigeons taking their Flight from Thebes in Aegypt, one of them came to Libya, where she commanded that an Oracle should be erected to Hammon; the other to Dodona, where she sat upon an Oak-Tree, and speaking with an human Voice, order'd, that there should be in that Place an Oracle to Jupiter. Afterwards Herodotus delivers his own Opinion about the Matter, which was this: That if the Phœnicians did really carry two Women from Thebes, and sell one of them in Libya, and the other in Greece, it might be probable, that she that was transported into Greece was sold to the Thesprotians in that Country, which in his Time was call'd Hellas, but formerly nam'd Pelagias, where she instituted the Oracle to Jupiter, and gave Instructions after what Manner he was to be worship'd. To confirm this Conjecture, he adds, that those two Oracles have a near Resemblance to each other. Moreover he tells us, the two Women were said to be black, because they came from Aegypt; and were call'd Doves, because their Language was barbarous, and as unintelligible as that of Birds; afterwards, when they had learn'd the Greek Tongue, they were said to speak with an human Voice. Eustathius^d gives two Reasons more for this Appellation: the first is, that they were call'd Πέλειαι, or Doves, κ. Πελειομαθήσεις, because they made their Predictions by the Observation of those Birds; as they who made use of Crows in Divination were nam'd Κορακομαθήσεις. The other Reason is, that in the Molossian Language old Women were call'd Πέλειαι, and old Men Πέλειοι; and that those Prophetesses being old Women, either by a Mistake of the Word, or a Poetical Equivocation, were call'd Doves: And why aged Persons should be thus term'd, the old Scholiast upon Sophocles informs us; for, saith he, the three old Prophetesses were call'd Πέλειοι κ. Πετολιωμένοι, because of their gray Hairs. Servius gives another Reason in his Comment upon Virgil's ninth Eclogue^e, viz. That in the Thessalian Tongue the Word Πελέϊας is used to signify a Prophetess, as well as a Dove; and it seems no unusual thing amongst the ancient Greeks, for Prophetesses to have the Name of Doves, whence the Ænigmatical Poet calls Cassandra by that Name twice in one Sentence^f:

Lastly, others give this Account: That in the Hieroglyphical Way of Writing, according to Horapollo, Γυράϊκα χήραν ἐπιμείρασαν ἄχρι θανάτου θέλοντες σημεῖναι, περισερᾶν μέλαιναν ζωγραφοῦσι They signify a Widow, who remains unmarried till Death, by a black Pigeon. Which very well agrees with the foremention'd Relation of Herodotus. Others say, that this Oracle was founded by the Pelasgians, who were the most ancient of all the Nations that inhabited Greece. Of this Opinion is Strabo^h, being led hereunto by the Testimony of Homer, who calls the same Jupiter by the two Names of Dodonæus and Pelasgicus, in this Verseⁱ:

Ζεῦ, ἄνα Δωδωναῖ, Πελασγική—————

Pelasgian Jove, that far from Greece resides
In cold Dodona.—————

Hesiod, whose Testimony also Strabo makes use of, is still more express:

Δωδώνην, ἐν γένει Πελασγῶν ἴδρανον ἦκεν,

He to Dodona came, and th' hallow'd Oak,
The Seat of the Pelasi.—————

And this seems somewhat more probable; especially if what is commonly reported of Deucalion deserves any Credit, viz. That he sav'd himself from the Deluge, not on the Top of the Mountain at Dodona, but on Parnassus, where was the Oracle of Themis, consulted by him after his Deliverance. Strabo relates another fabulous Opinion concerning the Foundation of this Oracle, out of Suidas's Thessalica, who (saith my Author) out of a Design to gratify the Thessalians with a new-invented Fable, hath reported, that the Oracle of Dodona was translated into Epirus out of Pelasgia, a Country of Thessaly, being accompanied by a great Number of Women, from whence the Prophetesses in After-Ages were descended; and that Jupiter received from them the Appellation of Pelasgicus.

The Persons that deliver'd the Oracles were at the first Men, as Strabo^k and Eustathius^l have observ'd out of Homer, who calls them in the Masculine Gender Υποφήτας, and Σελλῆς^m:

H. H.

Where some, as we are there inform'd by Eustathius, read ἀμφὶ δὲ σ' Ἐλλοῖ, making those Priests to be call'd Helli ; but the former Lecture, he tells us, is generally receiv'd. The Selli are so call'd from Sella, a Town in Epirus ; or, according to Eustathius, from the River call'd by Homer ^m Selleis :

Ἡγάγει ἐξ Εφύρης, ποταμῷ ἀπὸ Σελλήντος.

Whom he from Ephyra and Selleis brought.

But herein he contradicts Strabo, who affirms, that the River doth not belong to Ephyra in Thesprotia ; for that neither there, nor yet in Molossia was ever any River of that Name, but to another Ephyra, which is a City of Elis in Peloponnesus. The same were call'd Ellii, or Helli, from Ellus the Thessalian ; from whom Ellopia, a Country about Dodona, receiv'd its Name : And Philochorus in Strabo is of Opinion, that these Priests were named Ellii from this Region ; but Pliny will have the Selli and the Inhabitants of Ellopia to have been a different People. Apollodorus in Strabo thinks they were call'd Ἐλλοῖ, ἀπὸ τῶν ἐλέων, from the Fens and Marshes near the Temple of Dodona. We are inform'd by Aristotle, that the Country of the Selli was inhabited by the Græci, who were οὖν Ἕλληνες, in his Time call'd Hellenes. And Hesychius reports, that Διὸς ἱερὸν ἐν Δαδῶνι, Jupiter's Temple in Dodona was call'd Ἐλλα. Whence it is probable, that these Men were first call'd Helli, and not Selli. The same is farther prov'd by the Scholiast upon Homer ⁿ from Pindar, who derives the Name from one Hellus, τῷ πρώτῳ καὶ ἀδείξαντι τὸ μαντεῖον, who first discover'd the Oracle. Afterwards, either by a Confusion of the Words σ' Ἐλλοῖ in Homer, which might easily happen, when it was customary to write continuo ductu, without Distinction of Words or Sentences ; or by changing the Aspiration into the Letter σ, which Grammarians have observ'd to be a common Variation, they were call'd Selli. However that be, from the two Epithets of ἀνιπτόποδες, and χαμαιῦναι, given them by Homer, Strabo concludes they were barbarous and unciviliz'd ; Eustathius ^o tells us, they were named χαμαιῦναι, because they slept upon the Ground in Skins, and in that Posture expected prophetic Dreams from Jupiter ;

^m Iliad, 6. v. 531.

ⁿ Iliad. π'. ver. 234.

^o Iliad, π. p. 1074. Edit. Basil.

Others,

Others, he tells us, would have them call'd χαμαιῖνες, because they did not lie in Beds, but upon the bare Ground; and ἀνιπτόποδες, because they never went out of the Temple, and therefore had no occasion to wash their Feet; whence Euripides in his Erechtheus ^p saith of them,

Πηγαῖσι δ' ἔχ' ὑγρῶνσι πόδας————

Nor bath'd their Feet in any purling Stream.

Lastly, others will have these Names to be understood in a symbolical and figurative Sense, thus: χαμαιῖνες μὲν, ἀνιπτόποδες ἢ τῆτι χαμαὶ μὲν εὐαζόμενοι, ἀνιπτόμενοι δὲ τῶν κάτω ταῖς διανοίαις, διὰ τὴν ἐν μαντείαις φιλοσοφίαν. i. e. Their Bodies indeed did lie upon the Ground, but their Minds, by the Assistance of prophetical Philosophy, mounting higher, soar'd above these lower Regions. The same, with other Accounts of these Titles, are also given by the old *Scholias*t upon that Passage of Homer.

There is a Report grounded upon the Testimony of Pherecydes, that before the Time of the Selli the Temple of Dodona was inhabited by the seven Daughters of Atlas, that were the Nurses of Bacchus, and from this Temple call'd Dodonides. Their Names were these; Ambrosia, Eudora, Pasithoe, Coronis, Plexature, Pytho, and Tyche, or Tythe. However that be, 'tis certain, that in later Ages the Oracles were pronounced by three old Women; and Strabo tells us, this Change was made, that Jupiter admitted Dione to cohabit with him, and receive Divine Honours in this Temple: Nor was it strange or unusual that the same Temple should belong to two Deities; for Apollo and Bacchus were worship'd in the Temple at Delphi; Apollo and Branchus, or, as Stephanus ¹ affirms, Jupiter and Apollo at Miletus.

Strabo ² in his Description of Bœotia reports, that of the People who consulted this Oracle, all others receiv'd Answers from Women, but the Bœotians receiv'd theirs from Men; and the Reason of this Custom we have in the same Place, which was this: In a War between the Bœotians and Pelasgians, the Bœotians coming to Dodona to enquire of Jupiter the Event of the War, receiv'd Answer, That their Enterprize should have Success, if they would act wickedly. Upon this the Bœotians suspecting that the Prophetess spake in favour of the Pelasgians, (they being the first Founders of that Oracle) seiz'd her, and cast her into the Fire, justifying the Lawfulness of the Fact. On the other hand, they that ministred in the Temple thinking it impious to put to Death (especially in so sacred a Place) Persons uncondemn'd, would have had them refer the Matter to the two surviving Prophetesses; but the Bœotians alledging, that no Laws in the World permitted Women to do Judgment, it was agreed that two Men should be in joint Commission with them. When the Time to pass Sentence was come, they were condemn'd by the Women, and absolv'd by the Men; whereupon (as was usual when the Number of Voices was equal on both sides) the Bœotians were acquitted and dismiss'd. Ever after it was establish'd, that Men only should give Answers to the Bœotians.

The Prophets of this Temple were commonly call'd Tomuri, the Prophetesses Tomuæ, from Tomurus, a Mountain in Thesprotia, at the Foot of which stood the Temple. So commonly was this word made use of, that it came at last to be a general Name for any Prophet; for so Hesychius expounds it, and Lycophron^s in this Sense applies it to Prylis the Son of Mercury.

Τομυρι πρὸς τὰ λῶσα νεμερτίστως.

The best of Prophets, and the truest too.

Some are of Opinion, that all the Oracles were here delivered by Women; and that the Selli were only Inhabitants of the neighbouring Country, who had some Employment in the Temple, and publish'd the Oracles receiv'd from the Prophetesses to other Men. Hence they will have them to be call'd by Homer, not προοῖτας, but ὑποφῆτας ὑποφῆτας γὰρ λέγουσι τὰς περὶ τὰ χρησθήρια ἀπολυμένους, καὶ τὰς μαντείας τὰς γινόμενους ὑπὸ τῶν ἱερέων ἐκτέροντας, That Name signifying Men who liv'd in the Temple, and publish'd the Answer made by the Priests.

Near the Temple there was a sacred Grove full of Oaks or Beeches, in which the Dryades, Fauni, and Satyri were thought to inhabit, and were frequently seen dancing under the Shades of the Trees. Before Sowing was invented, when Men liv'd upon Acorns, those of this Wood were very much esteemed; insomuch that Virgil hath mention'd them by way of Eminence^t:

*Liber, & alma Ceres, vestro si munere tellus
Chaonia pingui glandem mutavit arista.*

*Bacchus and Ceres, taught by you, the Field
Doth Grain for old Chaonian Acorns yield,
And Wine for Water.*—————

And again in the same Book^v:

*Prima Ceres ferro mortales vertere terram
Instituit; cum jam glandes atque arbuta sacra
Deficerent silvæ, & victum Dodona negaret.*

Acorns and Wildings when the Woods deny'd,
Nor old Dodona longer Food supply'd,
Then Ceres taught to till the pregnant Earth.

H. H.

These Oaks or Beeches were endued with an human Voice and Prophetic Spirit, for which Reason they were call'd Προσηγόροι, and μαντικά δρυες, i. e. speaking and prophesying Oaks. And Argo, the Ship of the Argonauts, being built with the Trees of this Wood, was endued with the same Power of speaking; whence Lycophron^w calls it λάληθρον κίσσαν, a chattering Magpye. The Reason of which Fiction some think was this: The Prophets, when they gave Answers, placed themselves in one of these Trees, (for some will only allow this vocal Faculty to one of them) and so the Oracle was thought to be utter'd by the Oak, which was only pronounced out of its hollow Stock, or from amongst its Branches. And some are of Opinion, that the Oracles were deliver'd from the Branches of the Tree, because the prophetic Pigeon is by Herodotus reported ἐπὶ φηγῆ ἰεῖας, to have sat upon the Tree: And the Scholiast upon Sophocles^x affirms, that ὑπερῶν τῶν μαντεῖσιν δυοῖσιν ἦσαν πτελεῖται, above the Oracle there were two Pigeons. But others rather think, that Oracles were pronounced from the hollow Stock, both because the Prophetes could best be conceal'd there, and because it is express'd and affirm'd in the following Fragment of Hesiod's Eoa:

Τὴν Ζεὺς εἰλκεν, καὶ τὴν χρυσήριον εἶναι
 Τίμιον ἀιδράποις, ναῖεν δ' ἐν πυθμῆνι φηγῆ,
 Ενθεν ἐπιχθόνιοι μαντεύματα πάντα φέρονται.

I must not omit the Brazen Kettles of this Place, which some affirm, and others again deny to have been used in delivering Oracles. However that be, Demon in Suidas reports, they were so artificially placed about the Temple, that by striking one of them the Sound was communicated to all the rest. But Aristotle, cited by the same Author, or Aristides, as he is call'd by Stephanus the Byzantian, describes the matter thus: That there were two Pillars, on one of which was placed a Kettle, upon the other a Boy holding in his Hand a Whip with Lashes of Brass, which, being by the Violence of the Wind struck against the Kettle, caus'd a continued Sound; whence came the Proverb, Δωδωναῖον χαλκείον, ἐπὶ τῶν μικρολογῶν, or rather ἐπὶ τῶν μακρολογῶν, for it was applied to talkative Persons. Another Saying we have not much different from the former, viz. Κερκυραίων μάσιξ, which (as some are of Opinion) was taken from this Whip, which, together with the Boy and Kettle, were all dedicated by the Corcyreans^y. About what Time, or upon what Account this Oracle came to cease, is uncertain; but Strabo^z, who flourish'd under Augustus Caesar, saith, that in his Time the Gods had in a manner deserted that and most other Oracles.

The same Author^a, in his Description of Elis, makes mention of an Oracle of Olympian Jupiter, which was once famous, but did not continue long in Repute; yet the Temple in which it stood still preserv'd its ancient Splendor, and was adorn'd with magnificent Structures, and enrich'd with Presents from every part of Greece. Pindar also hath taken notice of an Altar dedicated to Jupiter at Pisa, where Answers were given by the Posterity of Janus^b.

There was another very ancient Oracle of Jupiter in Crete, mention'd by Strabo, from which Minos is said to have receiv'd a Platform of the Laws afterwards enacted by him; whence Homer saith of him,

That is, (as Plato in Strabo expounds it) He descended into the sacred Cave of Jupiter (for this Oracle was under Ground) and receiv'd from him those Precepts, which he afterwards made publick for the common Benefit of Mankind. The Will of the Gods was reveal'd in this Place by Dreams, in which the Gods came and convers'd familiarly with the Enquirers; as we learn from the Story of Epimenides ^c, who lay asleep in this Place many Years. Pythagoras also descended into this Cave to consult the Gods, as Diogenes Laertius hath related in the Life of that Philosopher. There was a Temple in the same Place dedicated to Jupiter, from which to the City Cnossus ^d there was a high Road, very pleasant. It stood upon Mount Ida; and tho' Maximus Tyrius, in the foremention'd Place, calls it Δικταίς Διὸς ἄντρον, yet in his twenty-second Dissertation he saith, it was placed on Ida; to which Diogenes Laertius and others agree. It was sometimes call'd Ἀρκέσιον, from the Word ἀρκέσαι, which signifies to help or defend; because the Sons of Titan; being vanquish'd by Saturn, fled into this Cave, and there escaped the Fury of their pursuing Conqueror ^e.

C H A P. IX.

Of the Oracles of Apollo.

I COME in the next place to speak of the Oracles of Apollo, who was thought more peculiarly to preside over Prophets, and inspire into them the Knowledge of future Events; whence the Ænigmatical Poet calls him Κερδῶν, or Gainful, from κέρδιον, Gain, because of the Profit which Mankind receiv'd by his Predictions, saith Tzetzes ^f upon that Place.

The Oracles of Apollo were not only the most numerous, but of the greatest Repute; and amongst them the Delphian challeng'd the first Place, as well for its Antiquity, (wherein it contended even with that of Dodona) as for the Truth and Perspicuity of its Answers, the Magnificence of its Structures, the Number and Richness of the sacred ἀναθήματα, or Presents, dedicated to the God, and the Multitudes which from all Parts resorted thither for Counsel; in which respect it surpass'd not only all the Oracles of other Gods, but even those sacred to Apollo himself.

The Place in which the Oracles were deliver'd was call'd Pythium, the Priestess Pythia. The Sports also instituted in Honour of Apollo were nam'd Pythian, and Apollo himself Pythius; either from Python, a Serpent, or a Man for his Cruelty so call'd, who possess'd this Place, and was overcome by Apollo; or, ἀπὸ τῆς πύθειν, i. e. to putrify; because the Carcase of Python was suffer'd to lie there and putrify; which Reason is given us by Homer ^g; or, ἀπὸ τῆς πύθεις, i. e. to enquire; because the Oracle was there consulted and enquir'd of, and this is Strabo's ^c Opinion: or from Pytho, another name of Delphi, the place of this Oracle, given it from Pythius, the Son of Delphus, the Son of Apollo.

The City Delphi (as Strabo ^d reports) was by some thought to be plac'd in the middle of the World; and the Poets feign that Jupiter, being desirous to know the middle part of the Earth, sent forth two Eagles, (or Crows, as Pindar, or Swans, as others relate) one from the East, the other from the West, and that they met in this Place. However that be, Strabo telleth us, it was plac'd in the middle of Greece; whence it is by the Poets commonly call'd Ομφαλον, which word signifieth the Navel, because that is the middle part of Man's Body; and therefore Sophocles calls this Oracle μισομφαλον μαντείον: and in allusion to that Name Strabo and Pausanias say, there was to be seen in the Temple the figure of a Navel, made of white Stone, with a Ribband hanging from it, instead of the Navel-string, and upon it were plac'd two Eagles, in Memory of the Eagles sent forth by Jupiter, But Lactantius and Phurnutus are of Opinion, that this Name was not deriv'd from the Situation of the Place, but from the Divine Answers given there, which are in Greek call'd Ομφαί, and Varro herein agrees with them.

Concerning the Original of this Oracle there are various Reports: Diodorus the Sicilian ^e tells us, it first belong'd to Earth, by whom Daphne, one of the Mountain Nymphs, was constituted Priestess; the same Author afterwards saith, that in a Greek Poem call'd Eumolpia, it is reported to have been sacred both to Earth and Neptune; and that Earth gave Answers herself, but Neptune had an Interpreter nam'd Pyrco, and that afterwards Neptune resign'd his part to Earth. This Goddess was succeeded by Themis, who gave Oracles about the time of Deucalion's Deluge, and was consulted by him, as it is very well known from Ovid's Metamorphosis. Some there are that will have Themis to have possess'd this Oracle from the beginning: Which is the less to be wonder'd at, since Themis and the Earth were commonly reputed the same Goddess under different Names, πολλῶν ὀνοματῶν μορῆν μίαν, according to Æschylus ^f: Whence Themis is call'd by Aristides ^g, Θεῶν πρεσβυτάτη, the oldest of the Gods. Yet Æschylus in another place ^h reports, that this Oracle was first possess'd by the Earth, then by Themis, Daughter of the Earth; who resign'd it to her Sister Phæbe, by whom it was at length given to Apollo. Pindar, and from him the Scholiast upon Æschylus tells us, that, Apollo having seiz'd this Oracle by force, the Earth endeavour'd to precipitate that God into the Infernal Regions. And ⁱ Euripides reports, that Apollo, having expell'd Themis, was himself expell'd by the Earth; but recover'd the Oracle by the Assistance of Jupiter. Agreeable to which Relation is that of Apollodorus, that Apollo, having learn'd the Art of Divination from Pan, came to Delphi, where Oracles were then given by Themis, and having kill'd Python the Serpent, which guarded the Mouth of the sacred Cavern, seiz'd the Oracle. It must not be omitted, that when this Oracle was possess'd by the Earth, she return'd Answers by Dreams. Thus Euripides,

————— νύχτι

The Earth brought forth nocturnal Spectres. And afterwards Apollo, being depriv'd of the Oracle, prays Jupiter ^k,

Πυθίων δόμων

 Θεὸς μῆεν, νύχτις τ' ἐνοπίε*

To expel the Earth with her nocturnal Oracles, from the Pythian Temples. And this Goddess was reputed the Author of Dreams in other Places, as will appear in the Chapter concerning that sort of Divination. Others will have the Delphian Oracle to have belong'd to Saturn ^l, and that the Grecians receiv'd the celebrated Answer, ὅτι πρὸ δεκάτω ἔτει τὸ Ἰλιεὺ πο.θήσεται, That Troy should be taken by them in the tenth Year: From this God we are inform'd by the Scholiast upon the following Verse of Lycophron ^m, which likewise relates to this purpose:

Οἱ δ' ἀμφὶ βωμῶν τῆ προμάντιος Κρόνου*

However that be, at length it came into the Hands of Apollo; nor did he long enjoy it alone, for in the War against the Sons of Titan, Bacchus, being mangled and torn in pieces by them, was afterwards restor'd to his Brother Apollo, who receiv'd him into his Temple, and order'd that Divine Honours should be paid him there. This Fable is related out of Callimachus and Euphorion, by Isaac Tzetzes, in his Comment upon Lycophron ⁿ, where Agamemnon is brought in sacrificing to Bacchus in the Temple of Delphian Apollo. Hence some say, the City Delphi was so call'd, q. ἀδελφοί, which word signifieth Brethren, because Apollo and Bacchus were both Sons of Jupiter.

We find it related by Diodorus the Sicilian ^o, that this Oracle was first discover'd by Goats, in Memory whereof, the Delphians, when they ask'd Counsel of the God, for the most part offer'd a Goat. The manner of the Discovery was thus: Upon Mount Parnassus, where Goats were wont to feed, there was a deep Cavern, with a small, narrow Mouth, to which when any of the Goats approach'd, they began immediately to leap after an unusual and antick manner, uttering strange and unheard of Sounds; the Goat-herd (Plutarch calls him Coretas) observing this, and wondering what should be the Cause of it, went himself to view the Cavern, whereupon he was also seiz'd with a like Fit of Madness, leaping and dancing, and foretelling things to come. This being nois'd abroad, vast multitudes of People flock'd to the Place, where as many as look'd in, were inspir'd after the same manner. At length, when many were possess'd with such a degree of Divine Phrenzy, as to throw themselves headlong into the Vorago; there was an Edict put out, whereby it was made unlawful for any Man to approach it; and a Tripus was plac'd upon the Mouth of it, upon which a Virgin was appointed to sit, and there deliver the Answers of the God. This is the most common Account of the Original of the Oracle: Pausanias hath given some others, which I shall forbear to mention. Thus much however is certain (if any thing at such a distance may be call'd so,) viz. That this Oracle was very ancient, and flourish'd above an hundred Years before the Trojan War.

Concerning the Tripus plac'd upon the mouth of the Cavern, there are different Opinions: some say, it was a Pot fill'd with Dust, thro' which the Afflatus pass'd into the Virgin's Belly, and thence proceeded out of the Mouth. The Scholiast upon Aristophanes ^r saith, it was a wide-mouth'd Brass'd-Pot fill'd with ἄσθρα, or Pebbles, by the leaping of which the Prophetess made her Conjectures. Others are of Opinion, that it was a large Vessel supported by three Feet, into which the Prophetess plung'd herself, when she expect'd an Inspiration. But, according to the more common Opinion, Cælius ¹ hath prov'd at large, that it was not a Vessel but a Table, or Seat, on which the Pythia lean'd or sat. The Cover of the Tripus, or, as some say, the Tripus itself, they call'd Ὀλμῶ, which word properly denotes a Mortar, or round Stone, according to Hesychius; whence Apollo is call'd in Sophocles, Ἐνολμῶ, and his Prophetess, Ἐνολμῆς. And this, as some are of Opinion, gave occasion to the Proverb, Ἐν Ὀλμῶ εὐνάσω, which is applied to those that speak prophetically; but others derive it from a certain Diviner, call'd Holmus; and others (amongst whom is Aristophanes the Grammarian in Zenodotus) refer it to the old superstitious Custom of sleeping in these Ὀλμοί, when they desired a Prophetical Dream. Phurnutus will have the Tripus to have been sacred to Apollo, either because of the Perfection of the Number Three; or in allusion to the three Cælestial Circles, two of which the Sun toucheth, and passeth over the third in his Annual Circuit. And the Scholiast upon Aristophanes ^r will have the three Legs of the Tripus to signify the Knowledge of the God, as distinguish'd by the three Parts of Time, viz. Present, Past, and Future,

Ὁς τ' ἤδ' αὖ τὰ τ' ἔειπα, τὰ τ' ἔσομένα, πρὸ τ' ἔντα.

Who knew things past, and present, and to come.

The same Tripus was not always us'd; the first was plac'd there by the Inhabitants of the neighbouring Country; afterwards, when Pelops marry'd Hippodamia the Daughter of Oenomaus, King of the Eleans, he presented to Apollo a Tripus, wrought by Vulcan, which seems to have been that made of Brass, so famous amongst the Poets. There was also another Tripus of Gold, as the Scholiast upon Aristophanes ^s reports, dedicated to Apollo on this Account: Certain Fisher-men at Miletus, having sold their next Draught to some Persons that stood by, cast their Net into the Water, and drew up a Golden Tripus; whereupon there arose a very hot Contention between the Fisher-men and their Chap-men ; the Fisher-men alledging, that they sold nothing but the Fish they were to take, and that therefore the Tripus belong'd to them ; the Buyers, on the other hand, replied, that they had bought the whole Draught, and therefore laid a just Claim to whatever came to the Net. At length, when neither side would yield, they agreed to submit the Matter to Apollo's Determination ; whereupon they came to Delphi, and there receiv'd this Answer,

Εχόντε Μιλήτη, τρίποδος περί Φοῖβον ἐρωτᾷς ;
Ὅς σοφίη πάντων πρότερος, τάτω τρίποδα δίδε.

Art thou, a Native of Miletus, come
T' enquire what must be with the Tripod done ?
Give it to Him, whose Wisdom claims a Right
Above all others. — — —

H. H.

This Oracle was given at the time when the seven Wise-Men flourish'd in Greece ; the Tripus therefore was presented to one of them, (which that was, is not agreed on by ancient Writers ;) he modestly refusing it, they offer'd it to another, and so on to the rest, till it had been refus'd by them all ; whereupon it was determin'd to consecrate it to Apollo himself, as being the Fountain of all Wisdom. The Tripus was call'd by the Latins, Cortina, of which Appellation there are several Reasons assign'd, for which I refer you to the Grammarians. Others say Cortina was only the Cover of the Tripus, and therefore derive it from the word corium, i. e. a Skin, because it was made, as they say, of Python's Skin. Lastly, Others more probably think it signified the Tent within which was kept the sacred Tripus, and that because of its Figure, which was, like that of a Cauldron, round ; upon the same Account Cortina was us'd to signify the Tiring-room in the Theatre, or the Curtains, or Hangings, out of which the Players us'd to be usher'd on to the Stage ; whence also the celestial Hemisphere is by Ennius call'd Cæli cortina ; and the Tbolus or round Compass at the top of a Theatre, is by another nam'd cortina Theatri.

The Person that deliver'd the Oracles of the God was a Woman, whom they call'd Pythia, Pythonissa, and Phæbas : The most celebrated of these, saith Pausanias ¹, Phæmonoe, who is remarkable, not only as being the first Priestess of that Oracle, but more especially because she was the first (as most say) that cloth'd the Oracles with Heroic Verse. But Bæo, a Delphian Lady, in one of her Hymns, reports, that Olen, with the Hyperboreans, first instituted this Oracle, and return'd Answers in Heroick Verse, of which he was the first Inventor : Her words we find in Pausanias to be thus,

Ενθα τοι ἡμνησεν χρηστήριον ἐκτελέσαντο
Παίδες Ὑπερβορίων, Πάγασος, κὶ δῖος Ἀγυιός, &c.

¹ Phœciis,

Where Hyperboreans to thy lasting Praise
Eternal Oracles did consecrate.

Then she proceeds to enumerate some others of the Hyperboreans, and in the End of the Hymn adds,

Ὀλίγῃ θ' ὅς γένητο πρῶτος Φοῖβος προφάτας,
Πρῶτος δ' ἀρχαίων ἐπίων τακτίνετ' αἰδῶν.

No Grecian yet warm'd with Poetick Fire
Cou'd fit th' unpolish'd Language to the Lyre,
'Till the first Priest of Phæbus Olen rose,
And chang'd, for smother Verse, their stunning Prose.

H. H.

But herein She contradicts (saith my Author) the common Opinion, which is grounded on the Testimony of ancient Writers, who unanimously agree in this, that never any but Women were the Interpreters of this God. Yet several Prophets are spoken of by Ælian^a. There is mention in Herodotus^b of a certain προφήτης, Prophet, in this place, whose Name was Aceratus. And Apollo is said in Homer to choose the Men of Crete to publish his Oracles y :

Κρίτες ἀπὸ Κνωσσῶ Μινωίη, ὅρα τ' ἀνακτι
Ἱερὰ τερέουσι, καὶ ἀγγάλλουσι θέουσας
Φοῖβον Ἀπόλλωνος χρυσάρεα, ὅττι κινεῖ πη
Χρῆμα ἐκ δάφνης γυάλαν ὑπὸ Παρρησοῖο.

But perhaps these Men are to be accounted Priests, and ὑποφῶνται who publish'd to others the Answers first by them receiv'd from the Pythia, rather than inspir'd Persons, and Prophets strictly so call'd.

Venerius^c is of Opinion that there were more than one Pythia at the same time; which he proves out of Herodotus, who in the sixth Book of his History reports, that Cleomenes corrupted with Bribes the Prophetess Perialla, who was vaticinantium mulierum antistes, the President of the Prophetesses : But tho' these Words are in the Latin Version, yet no such thing is said, or can be infer'd from the Greek, where Perialla is only call'd πρόμαντις, which Word (however it may seem to signify a Prophet superior to the rest) according to its common Acceptation implies no more than μάντις. Thus Euripides^d hath us'd it when he saith, πρόμαντις κακῶν, i. e. one that foretelleth Evils to come : In which sense Herodotus himself in another place hath us'd the Verb προμαντεύσατο : More Instances would be needless.

These Women were, at the first, Virgins, till one of them was de-flower'd by Echecrates a Thessalian; after which Time, choice was made of Women above fifty Years of Age; that so they might either be secur'd from the Attempts of Lust, or if they should be at any time forc'd to the Violation of their Chastity, having pass'd the time of Child-bearing they might remain undiscovered, and not bring the Oracles, or Religion into Contempt: Nevertheless they wore the Habit of Virgins, thereby to signify their Purity and virginal Modesty^b. They were obliged to observe the strictest Laws of Temperance and Chastity; not being allow'd to wear rich and costly Apparel, or use phantastical Dresses; and Plutarch^c hath told us, they neither anointed themselves, nor wore Purple Garments. The Pythia, before she ascended the Tripus, us'd to wash her whole Body, especially her Hair, in Castalis, a Fountain at the Foot of Parnassus, where the Poets, Men inspir'd by the same Deity, us'd to wash and drink. At her first sitting down upon the Tripus, she us'd to shake the Laurel-tree that grew by it, and sometimes to eat the Leaves. Herself also, and the Tripus were crown'd with Garlands of the same Plant, as we learn from the Schooliast upon Aristophanes^d at this Verse, where one asketh,

Τί δ' ἄν' ὁ Φοῖβος ἔλαχεν ἐν στεμμάτων;

What from the Oracle with Garlands trimm'd
Has Phœbus utter'd? —————

Nor did the Pythia only make use of Laurel in this manner, but other Prophets also, it being thought to conduce to Inspiration; whence it was peculiarly call'd μαντικὸν φυτόν, the prophetick Plant. The Pythia, being plac'd upon the Tripus, receiv'd the Divine Afflatus in her Belly; whence she is call'd εὐγαστήριμος, or σενόμαντις. She was no sooner inspir'd, but she began immediately to swell and foam at the Mouth, tearing her Hair, cutting her Flesh, and in all her other Behaviour appearing like one phrenetick and distracted. But she was not always affected in the same manner; for, if the Spirit was in a kind and gentle Humour, her Rage was not very violent; but, if fullen and malignant, she was thrown into extreme Fury; insomuch that Plutarch^e speaks of one enrag'd to such a degree, that she affrighted, not only those that consulted the Oracle, but the Priests themselves, who ran away and left her; and so violent was the Paroxysm, that in a little time after she died. Some say, that under the Tripus sometimes appear'd a Dragon that return'd Answers, and that the Pythia was once kill'd by him. And Eusebius reports, δράκοντα εἰλεῖσθαι περὶ τὸν τρίποδα, that a Serpent rolled himself about the Tripod.

The time of consulting the Oracle, was only one Month in a Year, This Month, Plutarch^f tells us, was call'd Βύσις, which, as many are of Opinion, was so nam'd, γ. Φυσις from φύειν, i. e. to spring up, because it was in the beginning of Spring, when all things flourish and put forth Buds: But this, (saith he) is not the true Reason, for the Delphians do not use B for Φ (as the Macedonians, who for Φίλιππος, Φαλακρός, and Φερωνία, say Βίλιππος, Βαλακρός, and Βερωνία) but instead of Π; for they usually say βατεῖν, for πατεῖν, and βικρον, for πικρον: Βύσις therefore is put for Πύσις, so call'd διὰ τὴν πύσιν, because in that Month they were allow'd to enquire of Apollo's Oracle, and this is their genuine and Country-way of Speaking. The seventh Day of the Month they call'd Apollo's Birth-day, naming it Πολύθεος , (not Πολύθεον , as some read it) not because they bak'd a sort of Cakes call'd θεῖς , but because the God did then return a great many Answers; and at the first the Pythia gave Answers only on this Day, as Callisthenes and Anaxandridas report. Thus Plutarch. And even in latter Ages, Oracles us'd only to be given once every Month.

Whoever went to consult the Oracle was required to make large Presents to the God, whereby it came to pass, that this Temple in Riches, Splendor, and Magnificence, was superior almost to all others in the World. And Aphetoriae opes (so call'd from Αφήτορας , a Name of Apollo, given him, as some say, from sending forth Oracles) have been proverbially us'd for abundance of Wealth. Another thing requir'd of those that desir'd Answers was, that they should propound their Questions in as few words as might be, as we are inform'd by Philostrophus, in the Life of Apollonius. It was the Custom also, to offer Sacrifices to Apollo, in which, except the Omens were favourable, the Prophets would not give any Answer. At these Sacrifices there were five Priests, saith Plutarch, nam'd Οσίοι , i. e. Holy, that assisted the Prophets, and perform'd many other Offices with them, being suppos'd to be descended from Deucalion: There was one also who presid'd over these call'd, Οσιωτήρ , or Purifier; tho' Plutarch saith, that the Sacrifice slain, when any of the Οσίοι were declar'd, was call'd by that Name; unless instead of $\text{τὸ θυόμενον ἱερείου}$, or the Sacrifice kill'd, we might be allow'd to read $\text{τὸν θυόμενον ἱερείου}$, or the Person kill'd the Sacrifice. There was another Priest also, that assisted the Prophets in managing the Oracle, whom they call'd Αφήτορας , upon the same account that Apollo was so named.

The Answer was always return'd in Greek, as appears from Cicero, who, speaking of the Oracle, reported by Ennius to be given to Pyrrhus the Epirote, by Apollo, viz.

Aio te, Æacida, Romanos vincere posse.

Go, Pyrrhus, go, engage with Warlike Rome,
Fate has decreed th' irrevocable Doom,
And You the valiant Romans shall o'ercome.

H. H.

concludes it was not genuine, because the Pythia never us'd to speak in Latin; and, in Pyrrhus's time, had left off giving Answers in Verse, which had been the Custom in all former Ages, from the first foundation of the Oracle, deriving (as hath been said already) its Original from Phæmonoe the first Pythia. The ancient Greeks deliver'd their Laws in Verse, whence it came to pass, as Aristotle witnesseth, that νόμος , which properly signifies a Law, is often us'd to signify Verses or Songs. The first Philosophers, as oft as they thought fit to communicate their Mysteries to the World, clothed them in Verse; and the primitive Ages scarce seem to have written any thing Curious, or Excellent, nor any thing of Weight or Moment, but in Verse

The Verses of the Pythia were, for the most part, saith Plutarch ^k, rude and unpolish'd, and not comparable to those of Homer, or Hesiod, yet, saith he, this is no reflection upon Apollo, the Patron of Poets, because he only communicated the Knowledge to the Pythia, which she deliver'd in what Dress she pleas'd; the Sense thereof was his, the Words her own. In the same Book he tells us, that some were of Opinion, that there were Poets maintain'd in the Temple, to catch the Oracles as they were given, and wrap them up in Verse. The Verses were for the most part Hexameter, insomuch that this Oracle was thought to be none of Apollo's, because it was not Heroick;

Σοφὸς Σοφοκλῆς, σοφώτερος δ' Εὐριπίδης,
 Ἀνδρῶν δὲ πάντων Σοκράτης σοφώτατος*

To Wisdom Sophocles makes just Pretence,
 Yet does to sage Euripides give Place,
 As he and all Men must to Socrates.

H. H.

In later Ages, when Oracles began to grow into disrepute, this Custom of versifying was left off, the Reason whereof hath been copiously disputed by Plutarch, in a Treatise on that Subject, to which I refer the Reader. I shall only add one thing more to be observ'd, That as the Custom of giving Answers in Verse never appear'd so universally, but that sometimes they were deliver'd in Prose, as Plutarch hath prov'd by a great many Instances; so neither was it ever so wholly left off, but that Oracles were pronounc'd in Verse; an Instance whereof he giveth in his own Time. The Oracle concerning the Birth of our Saviour Christ, which was deliver'd in Heroick Verse to the Emperor Augustus, is mention'd by Eusebius, Zonaras, and others. And another, which was return'd in the same sort of Verse to Julian the Apostate, shall be repeated hereafter.

The Delphian Oracles, if compar'd with some others, might justly be call'd plain and perspicuous; and as Hormeas, the Philosopher, tells us, it was usual for those that had receiv'd an obscure Answer at Dodona, to desire Apollo at Delphi to explain the meaning of it: He adds also, that Apollo had interpreted a great many of them. Nevertheless, they were generally very obscure, and ambiguous; insomuch that Apollo, as some say, was call'd Λοξίας, because his Answers were Λοξὰ καὶ σκολιὰ, i. e. crooked, and hard to be understood. And Heraclitus in Plutarch, speaking of Apollo; saith, ἅτε λέγει, ἅτε κρύπτει, ἀλλὰ σημαίνει, i. e. He doth not speak the Truth plainly, nor yet wholly conceal it, but only gives small Hints of it; so that if the Event happen'd contrary to any Man's Expectation, he might rather find fault with his own Interpretation of the Oracles, than call in question either the Knowledge or Veracity of Apollo. The reason of this affected Obscurity, is said to have been this, viz. Οὐ καθαρῶ καθαυτῶ ἐρατῆσσι ἔσμιμον, &c. That impure Persons ought not to be admitted to sacred things: it being a Profanation of the Mysteries, and other things relating to Religion, to communicate them to the Vulgar and Ignorant.

The Veracity of this Oracle was so famous, that $\tau\alpha\ \epsilon\kappa\ \tau\epsilon\iota\pi\omicron\delta\ \Theta$, i. e. The Responses given from the Tripus, came to be used proverbially for certain and infallible Truths: and, as Cicero rightly argues, it is impossible the Delphian Oracle should ever have gain'd so much Repute in the World, or have been enrich'd with such vast Presents from almost all Kings and Nations, had not the Truth of its Predictions been attested by the Experience of all Ages. But in later Times the Case was alter'd; and so Cicero tells us, it was a long time before his Days. Demosthenes, who flourish'd three hundred Years before him, complain'd the Pythia did $\phi\iota\lambda\alpha\pi\epsilon\iota\zeta\epsilon\iota\nu$, or speak as Philip the Macedonian would have her. Before that time she was said to receive a Bribe of Cliftbenes, to persuade the Lacedæmonians to free the Athenians from the Tyrants that were impos'd on them. Periolla the Pythia was depriv'd of her Office for being corrupted by one of Cleomenes's Agents, to say that Demaratus, Cleomenes's Collegue, was not the true Son of Aristo, King of Sparta, to the end it might be thought he was not his lawful Successor, and upon that Account be dethron'd.

At what Time, or upon what Account this Oracle came to cease, is uncertain; *Strabo*¹ hath told us, that in his Time it had lost its ancient Reputation. Dio will have it to have been extinct from the time that it was polluted by Nero, who kill'd Men $\epsilon\iota\varsigma\ \tau\omicron\ \varsigma\omicron\mu\iota\omicron\nu\ \epsilon\zeta\ \epsilon\iota\epsilon\rho\delta\ \tau\omicron\ \omega\nu\epsilon\upsilon\mu\omega\ \delta\upsilon\nu\alpha\iota$ in the Cavern's Mouth, out of which the sacred Inspiration ascended. In Juvenal's^k time the Gods had quite forsaken it, if any Credit may be given to the following Words:

————— Delphis Oracula cessant.

The Delphian Oracles are now no more.

Minutius Felix reports, that cautum illud & ambiguum defecit oraculum, cum & politiores homines & minus creduli esse cœperunt^l: This cautious and ambiguous Oracle gave over speaking, when Men began to be more polite and less credulous. Lucan^m telleth us, that it had ceas'd a long time before the Battle at Pharsalia:

————— Non ullo secula dono

Nostra carent majore Deum, quam Delphica sedes

Quod siluit. —————

No greater Gift can bounteous Heav'n bestow,

Nor does our Age a greater Blessing want

Than silenc'd Delphi. —————

H. H.

But this must not be understood of a total Defect, or perpetual Silence; for this Oracle, as *Van Dale*ⁿ hath abundantly prov'd, did several times lose its prophetick Faculty, and again recover it. Lucian reports^o, That Answers were given in his Time, which was about the Reigns of Marcus Aurelius and his Son Commodus. But he is at a loss, whether those Oracles were indeed Apollo's, or only supposititious. And farther, 'tis certain that this, and those at Delos and Dodona, with some others, continued till the Reign of Julian the Apostate, and were consulted, saith Theodoret, by him. And he is said to have received from Apollo Delphicus the following Answer :

Εἴπατε τῷ βασιλεῖ, χαμαὶ πῖσε δαίδαλος αὐλά,
 Οὐκίτι Φοῖβος ἔχει καλύβαν, ἔ μαντιδα δάφνην,
 Οὐ πάλαν λάλεισαν, ἀπίστωτο κ' καλὸν ὕδαρ.

By which it appears, this Oracle was then in a very low and declining Condition; but at what time it was finally extinct is uncertain: Whoever desireth to be more particularly inform'd may consult Van Dale's Treatise on that Subject.

When the God forsook Delphi, he betook himself to the Hyperborean Scythians; as we learn from Claudian :

————— pulcher Apollo
 Lustrat Hyperboreas Delphis cessantibus aras.

Ah! abject Delphi, see thy God resides
 In distant Hyperborean Climates. —————

E. D.

And in former times he was thought to be a Lover of that Nation, and at certain Seasons to remove thither out of Greece. Abaris, one of that Country, the Priest of Apollo, who travell'd into Greece about the Time of Pythagoras, is said to have written a Book concerning Apollo's Oracles, καὶ ἀφίξιν εἰς ὑπερβορέας, and Removal to the Hyperbores ^p. And the Athenians, at a time when the Plague raged over all Greece, receiv'd an Oracle from thence, commanding them to make Vows and Prayers in behalf of the rest; and they continued to send Gifts and Offerings thither, as they had formerly done to Delphi.

I might enlarge about the Magnificence and Splendor of the Delphian Temple, but I fear I have already trespass'd too far upon the Reader's Patience; if any one therefore have Curiosity and Leisure, he may have a large and exact Description of all the magnificent Structures, rich Presents, curious Pieces of Art, and other Rarities belonging to that Place, in Pausanias. There was another of Apollo's Oracles at Cirrha, a Sea-port belonging to Delphi, from which it was distant about LX Stadia. This is mention'd in Statius's Thebais ^q:

Tunc Ἐσ' Ἀπολλινεᾶ tacuere oracula Cirrhæ.

Where Lutatus observes, that in Cirrha tantum prospera Deorum dabantur oracula: nam cui exitium imminebat, taciturnitate templi penitus damnatur: At Cirrha none but prosperous Oracles were pronounced; and if any Calamity was to befall them who came for Advice, that was declar'd by the God's Silence. Several others have mention'd this Oracle, tho' neither taken notice of by Strabo nor Pausanias, the latter of which hath left us a particular Account of the Temple, sacred Field of Apollo, and other remarkable things in Cirrha. Some speak of this Oracle in such a manner as doth make it probable, that it was the same with the Oracle at Delphi: Thus Seneca will have it become Apollo's, by his Victory over Python, whereby he is known to have obtain'd the Delphian: :

^q Lib. vii. v. 411.

Cirrhaea Pæan templa, & ætheriam domum Serpente cæso meruit.

And a Prophetess is reported by the same Author to have deliver'd Oracles at Cirrha, as was done in the Delphian Temple :

*Et ipse nostris vocibus testis veni
Fatidicæ vatis ora Cirrhææ movens.*

Lastly, there was a Cavern at Cirrha, as in the other Place. This appears from Statius :

————— *Non Cirrha promiserit anno Certius, aut frondes lucis, quas fama Moloſſis
Chaonia sonuisse tibi.*—————

Next to this Oracle may justly follow that at Delos, the most celebrated of all the Cyclades, which were a Knot of Islands in the Ægean Sea. It is famous among the Poets for having been the Birth-place of Apollo and Diana, and was therefore accounted so sacred and inviolable, that the Persians, when they pillag'd or destroy'd almost all the other Grecian Temples, durst not attempt any thing upon the Temple in this Island; which was seated on the Sea-shore, looking towards Eubæa, in the very Place where Apollo was feigned to be born. He had an Image erected in this Place, in the Shape of a Dragon; and gave Answers, for their Certainty and Perspicuity, not only not inferior to those at Delphi, but, as some report ^u, far exceeding them, and all other Oracles of Apollo, being deliver'd in clear plain Terms, without any Ambiguity or Obscurity. But these Answers were not to be expected all the Year; Apollo only kept his Summer's Residence in this Place, and in Winter retir'd to Patara, a City of Lycia, as Servius hath observ'd in his Comment upon these Words of Virgil:

*Qualis ubi hybernam Lyciam, Xanthique fluenta
Deserit, ac Delum maternam invisit Apollo* ^w.

Such Pomp and Splendor God Apollo grace,
When he his Winter Lycia, or that Place
Which Xanthus' Silver Streams wash kindly, leaves,
And Delos visits, whence he Answers gives
In Summer Seasons.

One of the Altars was by some reckon'd amongst the seven Wonders of the World. It was erected by Apollo at the Age of four Years, and compos'd of the Horns of Goats kill'd by Diana upon Mount Cynthus, which were compacted together in a wonderful Manner, without any visible Tye or Cement; whence Ovid saith of it ^x:

And make an Altar bound with ne'er a Tie.

E. D.

To sacrifice any living Creature upon this Altar was held unlawful, and a Profanation of the Place, which it was the God's Will to have preserv'd pure from Blood, and all manner of Pollution. Thucydides reports, that no Dogs were permitted to enter into this Island; and it was unlawful for any Person to die, or be born in it; and therefore, when the Athenians were by the Oracle commanded to purify it, they dug up the dead Bodies out of their Graves, and wafted them over the Sea, to be interred in one of the adjacent Islands; this done, the better to preserve it from Pollution, they put forth an Edict, commanding, that whoever lay sick of any mortal or dangerous Disease, and all Women great with Child, should be carried over to the little Isle call'd Rhena.

I must not omit in this place the annual Procession made by the Athenians to this Place. The Author of this Custom was Theseus, who, being sent with the rest of the Athenian Youths into Crete, to be devour'd by the Minotaur, made a Vow to Apollo, that if he would grant them a safe Return, they would make a solemn Voyage to his Temple at Delos every Year. This was call'd $\Delta\omega\rho\acute{\epsilon}\iota\varsigma$, the Persons employ'd in it $\Theta\epsilon\omega\rho\acute{o}\iota$ and $\Delta\eta\lambda\iota\alpha\sigma\alpha\iota$, from the Name of the Island; the Chief of them Αρχιδέωρος , and the Ship in which they went $\Theta\epsilon\omega\rho\acute{\iota}\varsigma$ or $\Delta\eta\lambda\iota\acute{\alpha}\varsigma$, which was the very same that carried Theseus and his Companions to Crete; being (saith Plutarch) preserv'd by the Athenians till Demetrius the Phalerean's Time, they restoring always what was decay'd, and changing the old and rotten Planks for those that were new and entire, insomuch that it furnish'd the Philosophers with Matter of Dispute, whether after so many Reparations and Alterations it might still be call'd the same individual Ship; and serv'd as an Instance to illustrate the Opinion of those that held the Body still remain'd the same numerical Substance, notwithstanding the continual Decay of old Parts, and Acquisition of new ones, through the several Ages of Life; for which Reason Callimachus calls its Tackle ever-living, [$\alpha\epsilon\iota\zeta\omega\nu\eta$]:

————— $\alpha\epsilon\iota\zeta\omega\nu\eta$ $\Theta\epsilon\omega\rho\acute{\epsilon}\iota\delta\Theta$, $\text{ιερω}\ \text{φοίβω}$,

To great Apollo's Temple every Year,

Yet, spite of envious Time and angry Seas,
The Vessel ever whole will be.

The Beginning of the Voyage was computed from the Time that Apollo's Priest first adorn'd the Stern of the Ship with Garlands, saith Plato ^a; and from that time they began to cleanse and lustrate the City; and it was held unlawful to put any Malefactor to death till its Return, which was the Reason that Socrates was repriev'd thirty Days after his Condemnation, as we learn from the same Author, and from Xenophon ^b. The Theori wore Garlands of Laurel upon their Heads, and were accompanied by two of the Family of the Κύρκες, who were appointed to be Παράσιλοι at Delos for that Year. Before them went certain Men with Axes in their Hands, in shew as if they design'd to clear the Ways of Robbers; in memory that Theseus, in his Journey from Træzen to Athens, freed the Country from all the Robbers that infested those Parts. To this Custom Æschylus ^c seems to allude, when he saith,

Πέμπεται δ' αὐτὸν, καὶ σεβίζουσι μέγα
Κελευθοποιοὶ παῖδες Ἡφαίστου, χθόνα
Ἀνήμερον τιθέντες ἡμερομήνου.

Mov'd with the Sense of Piety,
To him th' Athenians do repair,
Still as they on their Journey go,
Whatever Parts infested be
With Robbers cruel Outrages,
Setting 'em free.—————

When they went thither, they were said ἀναβαίνειν, to ascend; when they return'd καταβαίνειν, to descend. When they arriv'd, they offer'd Sacrifice, and celebrated a Festival in Honour of Apollo: This done, they repair'd to their Ship; and sail'd homewards. At their Return, all the People ran forth to meet them, opening their Doors, and making Obeisance as they pass'd by; the Neglect of which Respect makes Theseus complain in Euripides ^d:

Οὐ γὰρ τις μ' ὡς Θιερὸν ἀξιῶ δόμου
Πύλας ἀνοίξας ἐυφρόνας προσενέπειν.

My scornful Citizens, I find, neglect
Rushing to crowd about the open'd Doors,
And pay me that Respect which is decreed
For one that from the Embassy returns.

The next Oracle I shall speak of is that of Apollo Didymæus, so named ^e from the double Light imparted by him to Mankind, the one directly and immediately from his own Body, and the other by Reflexion from the Moon. The Place of it was also call'd Didyma, and belong'd to the Milesians, whence Apollo is call'd Milesius. It was also call'd the Oracle of the Branchidæ; and Apollo himself was call'd

^a In Pædone.^b Memorab. lib. iv.^c Eumenid. initio.^d Hippolyto.^e Macrob. l. b. i. cap. xvii.

Branchides from Branchus, who was reputed the Son of Macareus, but begotten by Apollo; for it was no unusual thing for the ancient Heroes to be call'd the Sons of two Fathers, the one Mortal, who was always their Mother's Husband; the other some lascivious Deity, that had fallen in Love with her: So Hercules was reputed the Son of Jupiter and Amphitryon; Hector of Priamus and Apollo, with many others. The Original of this Oracle is thus described by Varro, where speaking of Branchus's Mother, he reports, "That, being with Child, she dream'd the Sun enter'd into her Mouth, and pass'd thro' her Belly: Whence her Child was named Branchus from Βρῆγχι, the Throat, thro' which the God had penetrated into the Womb. The Boy afterwards having kiss'd Apollo in the Woods, and receiv'd from him a Crown and Scepter, began to prophesy, and presently after disappear'd. Whereupon a magnificent Temple was dedicated to him and Apollo Phileus, so call'd from φιλῆν, to kiss, whence Statius saith he was —————patrioque æqualis honori.

In Honour equal to his Father Phœbus.

Others derive the Name from Branchus, a Thessalian Youth, belov'd by Apollo, who receiv'd him into his own Temple, and commanded that Divine Honours should be paid him after Death. But Stephanus the Byzantian ^f telleth us, that this Oracle was sacred to Jupiter and Apollo, and perhaps it might belong to all three. However that be, we are assur'd by Herodotus, that this Oracle was ἐκ παλαιῦ ἱδρυμένον, τῷ Ἴωνί τε πάντες καὶ Αἰολέες εἰώθεισαν χρεῖσθαι very ancient, and frequented by all the Ionians and Æolians: And are farther told by Conon in Photius's Bibliotheca, that it was accounted χεῖρ ἡσίων Ἑλληνικῶν ἢ τῆς Δελφῆς κράτιστον the best of all Grecian Oracles, except the Delphian.

In the time of the Persian War ^g this Temple was spoil'd and burn'd, being betray'd into the Hands of the Barbarians, by the Branchides, or Priests, who had the Care of it; but they, conscious of their own Wickedness, and fearing lest they should meet with condign Punishment, desired of Xerxes, that, as a Requital of their Service, he would grant them a Habitation in some remote Part of Asia, whence they might never return into Greece, but live secure, being placed beyond the Reach of Justice. Xerxes granted their Request; whereupon, notwithstanding a great many unlucky Omens appear'd to them, they founded a City, and call'd it, after their ancient Name, Branchidæ. But for all this, they could not escape Divine Vengeance, which was inflicted on their Children by Alexander the Great, who, having conquer'd Darius, and possess'd himself of Asia, utterly demolish'd their City, and put all its Inhabitants to the Sword, as detesting the very Posterity of such impious Wretches.

The Persians being vanquish'd, and Peace restor'd to Greece ^h, the Temple was rebuilt by the Milesians, with such Magnificence, that it surpass'd almost all the other Grecian Temples in Bigness, being rais'd to such a Bulk, that they were forc'd to let it remain uncover'd ; for the Compass of it was no less than that of a Village, and contained at least four or five Stadia.

Another of Apollo's Oracles we read of in Abæ, a City of Phocis, mention'd by Herodotus ⁱ, and Stephanus the Byzantian ^k ; by the latter of whom we are told, it was more ancient than the Delphian. Sophocles ^l also hath taken Notice of it :

Οὐκέτι τὸν ἄδικτον εἶμι
 Τὰς ἐπ' ὀμφαλῶν σέβων,
 Οὐδ' εἰς Ἀεαῖσι γάβν.

Hence all Religion, now I will no more Trouble that hallow'd Fane, which equally Parts the divided Earth, no Journies make
 To Abæ for the Answers of a God ;
 In vain 'tis be good.

E. D.

The Scholiasts on this Place are of Opinion, that Abæ was a City in Lycia, but are sufficiently refuted by the Testimonies already cited. We are told by Pausanias ^m, that the Temple of this Oracle was burn'd by Xerxes.

At Claros, a City of Ionia, not far from Colophon, there was another Oracle sacred to Apollo, first instituted by Manto, the Daughter of Tiresias, who fled thither in the second Theban War, when the Epigoni, i. e. the Sons of those that were slain in the former War, invaded Thebes, under the Conduct of Alcæon, in Revenge of their Fathers Deaths. The Person that deliver'd Answers was a Man generally chosen out of some certain Families, and for the most part out of Miletus ⁿ : He was usually unlearned, and very ignorant, yet return'd the Oracles in Verses wonderfully satisfactory, and adapted to the Intention of the Enquirers ; and this by the Virtue of a little Well, feign'd to have sprung out of the Tears of Manto when she bewail'd the Desolation of her Country : Into this he descended when any Man came to consult him ; but paid dear for his Knowledge, Water being very prejudicial to his Health ; and, as Pliny ^o hath told us, a Means to shorten his Life. By this Oracle the untimely Death of Germanicus was foretold, as we are inform'd by Tacitus ^p, by whom also the foremention'd Account of Pliny is confirm'd.

At Larissa, a Fort of the Argives, there was an Oracle of Apollo, firnam'd Δειραδιώτης, from Diras, a Region belonging to Argos. The Answers in this Place were return'd by a Woman, who was forbidden the Company of Men : Every Month she sacrific'd a Lamb in the Night, and, then having tasted the Blood of the Victim, was immediately seiz'd with a Divine Fury ^q.

'Apollo had another famous Oracle at Eutresis, a Village in *Bœotia, feated in the Way between the Theſſians and the Platæans.

Oropæan Apollo deliver'd Oracles at Orope, a City of Eubœa, as we are inform'd by Stephanus.

At Orobæ in Eubœa there was ἀΨευδέτατον μαντεῖον, a most infallible Oracle of Apollo Sellinuntius; as we find in the Beginning of Strabo's tenth Book.

Another Oracle of Corypæan Apollo, at Corype in Theſſaly, is mention'd in Nicander's Theriaca:

Μαντείας Κορυπαῖοι ἐδάκρυτο καὶ δέμιον ἀνδρῶν.

'Tis reported by Athenæus†, that the Carians on a certain time conſulted Apollo's Oracle at Hybla; which Casaubon would have to be read Abæ, but for no better Reason, than that he finds no Mention of the Hyblæan Oracle in any other Author.

There was an Oracle of Apollo Ichnæus at Ichnæ in Macedonia‡.

At Tegyraæ, a City in Bœotia, there was an Oracle ſacred to Tegyraean Apollo, which was frequented till the Persian War, but after that remain'd for ever ſilent^u.

Not leſs famous was Ptous, a Mountain in Bœotia, for the Oracles given by Apollo, ſirnam'd Ptous from that Place, where was a Temple dedicated to him. This Oracle ceas'd when Thebes was demolish'd by Alexander^v.

Apollo, ſirnam'd Δαφναῖοι from Daphne his beloved Miſtreſs, or the Laurel, into which ſhe was transform'd, had an Oracle near the Cafſalian Fountain, the Waters of which were alſo endued with a prophetick Virtue^x.

Apollo was call'd Iſmenius, from Iſmenus, a River and Mountain in Bœotia, in which he had a Temple, and gave Answers to thoſe that came to enquire of him.

Pausanias† hath told us of another Place in Bœotia where Apollo return'd Answers, viz. a Stone call'd Σωφροειδής, upon which he had an Altar, erected out of the Aſhes of Viſtims offer'd to him; whence he was call'd Spodius from Σποδός i. e. Aſhes; whence for Σπόδισοι in Pausanias muſt be read Σπόδισοι. He did not here, as in other Places, ſignify his Will by inspir'd Prophets, but by κληδόνες, ominous Sounds, in the Obſervation of which he instructed Perſons appointed for that purpoſe; for this Way of Divination was in uſe amongſt the Grecians, eſpecially at Smyrna, ſaith my Author, where was a Temple built on the Out-ſide of the City-Wall for that Purpoſe. Thus much of the Oracles of Apollo.

Of the Oracle of Trophonius.

T*rophonius*, the Son of Erefinus, and Brother of Agamedes, a being possess'd with an immoderate Thirst of Glory, built himself a Mansion under Ground, at Lebadea a City of Beotia, into which when he enter'd, he pretended to be inspired with an extraordinary Knowledge of future Events; but at length, either out of Design to raise in Men an Opinion, that he was translated to the Gods, or being some way necessitated thereto, perish'd in his Hole ^b. Cicero ^c giveth us a very different account of his Death, when he tells us, that Trophonius and Agamedes, having built Apollo's Temple at Delphi, requested of the God, that, as a Recompence for their Labour, he would give them the best Thing that could happen to Man; Apollo granted their Petition, and promis'd them, that it should be effected the third Day after; accordingly, on that Day in the Morning they were found dead. Several other Fables concerning him, and the manner of his Death, are related in the Scholiast upon the Clouds of Aristophanes.

However that be, Trophonius had Divine Honours paid him after Death, and was worship'd by the name of Jupiter Trophonius ^d. Nor was it a thing unusual for Men deified to be honour'd with the name of a God, several Instances whereof might be produc'd, but one shall suffice for all, viz. that of Agamemnon, who was worship'd at Sparta by the name of Jupiter Agamemnon, as Lycophron witnesseth ^e.

Εμὸς δ' ἀκούτης, δμῶιδος, νόμφος ἀναξ,
 Ζεὺς Σπαρτιάταις ἀμύλιος κληθεήσεται,
 Τιμὰς μεγίστας παρ' Οἰβήλου τίκνους λαχών.

Then shall my Husband, whom a Captive Bride
 I now obey as my superior Lord,
 By subtle crafty Spartians Jove be call'd,
 And worship so, from their Posterity
 Receiving greatest Honours,——

Which words Cassandra speaks of Agamemnon, whose Captive and Concubine she was after the Destruction of Troy.

This Oracle came first into repute on this Account: On a time, when for the Space of two Years there had been no Rain in Beotia, all the Cities of that Country, with a joint Consent, appointed chosen Persons to go to Delphi, there to pay their Devotions to Apollo, in the Name of their Country, and desire his Advice and Assistance: The God accepted their Piety, but return'd them no other Answer, than that they should go home, and consult Trophonius at Lebadea. The Ambassadors immediately obey'd, and repair'd to Lebadea, still re-maintaining as much in the dark, as at first; there being not the least Sign or Foot-step of any Oracle in that Place: At length, when they had search'd a long time to no purpose, and began to despair of Success, one Saon, an Acrephian, the Senior of all the Ambassadors, espy'd a Swarm of Bees, and immediately took up a Resolution to follow them; by this means he came to a Cave, into which he had no sooner enter'd, but by some evident Tokens perceiv'd, that in that Place was the Oracle, Apollo had commanded them to enquire of. Upon this he pay'd his Devotion to Trophonius, and receiv'd from him a welcome and satisfactory Answer, together with Instructions, in what Manner, and with what Rites and Ceremonies he would have those that should come for Advice, to approach him^f.

The Place of this Oracle was under the Surface of the Earth, and therefore it was commonly call'd κατακόσμιον, and Persons that consulted it κατακαίοντες, because the way to it was a Descent. Concerning it there are innumerable Fables, which it would not be worth the while to mention in this Place; I shall therefore pass them by, only giving you the Accounts Pausanias and Plutarch have left of it; the former of which consulted it in Person, and thereby had opportunity of being an Eye-witness of what he reports. His Words are thus translated by Mr. Abel:

“ Whoso'er's Exigencies oblige him to go into the Cave, must in “ the first Place make his abode for some set-time in the Chapel of “ Good Genius and Good Fortune; during his stay here he abstains from “ hot Baths, and employs himself in performing other sorts of Atonement
 “ for past Offences; he is not wholly debarr'd bathing, but then
 “ it must be only in the River Hercynna, having a sufficient Sustainance “ from the Leavings of the Sacrifices. At his going down, he sacrificeth “ to Trophonius and his Sons, to Apollo, Saturn, and Jupiter, (who “ hath the Title of King) to Juno Heniocha, and Ceres, call'd Europa, “ reported to be Trophonius's Nurse. There's a Priest stands consulting
 “ the Bowels of every Sacrifice, who, according to the Victim's Aspects, “ prophesies whether the Deity will give an auspicious and satisfactory “ Answer. The Entrails of all the Sacrifices confer but little towards “ the revealing of Trophonius's Answer, unless a Ram, which they “ offer in a Ditch, to Agamedes, with supplication for Success, that “ Night on which they descend, presents the same Omens with “ the former; on this depends the Ratification of all the rest, and “ without it their former Oblations are of none Effect: If so be this “ Ram doth agree with the former, every one forthwith descends, “ back'd with the eagerness of good Hopes; and thus is the Manner:
 “ Immediately they go that Night along with the Priests to the River “ Hercynna, where they are anointed with Oil, and wash'd by two Citizen's “ Boys, aged about Thirteen Years, whom they call Ἐρμῆς, i. e.
 “ Mercuries: These are they that are employ'd in washing whoever “ hath a mind to consult; neither are they remiss in their Duty, but,
 “ as much as can be expected from Boys, carefully perform all things “ necessary. Having been wash'd, they are not straightway conducted “ by the Priests to the Oracle, but are brought to the River's Rifes,
 “ which are adjacent to one another: Here they must drink a Dose

^f Pausanias Bœoticis,

“ of the Water of it, call'd Lethe, or Oblivion, to deluge with oblivion
 “ all those things, which so lately were the greatest part of their con“ cerns. After that, they take the Water of Mnemosyne, viz. Remem- “ brance, to retain the remembrance of those things, that shall be “ exhibited to them in their Descent; amongst which is expos'd a Sta“ tue, adorn'd with that admirable carving, that it's set up by the “ People for Dædalus's workmanship; whereupon they never exhibit,
 “ it, unless to Descendants: to this therefore, after some venerable “ obeisance, having mutter'd over a Prayer or two, in a linen Habit, “ set off with Ribbands, and wearing Pantoffles, agreeable with the “ fashion of the Country, they approach the Oracle, which is situated “ within a Mountain near a Grove, the Foundation of which is built “ spherical-wise, of white Stone, about the size, in circumference,
 “ of a very small Threshing-floor, but in height scarce two Cubits, “ supporting brazen Obelisks, encompass'd round with Ligaments of “ Brass, between which there are Doors that guide their Passage into “ the midst of the Floor, where there's a sort of a Cave, not the “ product of rude Nature, but built with the nicest accuracy of Me“ chanism and Proportion; the Figure of this Workmanship is like an “ Oven, its breadth diametrically (as high as can be guest) about nine “ Cubits, its depth eight, or thereabouts; for the Guidance to which “ there are no Stairs, wherefore 'tis requir'd that all Comers bring a “ narrow and light Ladder with them, by which when they are come “ down to the bottom, there's a Cave between the Roof and the Pave“ ment, being in breadth about two σπιθυμαι, and in height not “ above one; at the mouth of this, the Descendant, having brought “ with him Cakes dipt in Honey, lies along on the Ground and “ shoves himself Feet foremost into the Cave; then he thrusts in his “ Knees, after which the rest of his Body is roll'd along, by a Force
 “ not unlike that of a great and rapid River, which over-powering a “ Man with its Vortex, tumbles him over Head and Ears. All that “ come within the Approach of the Oracle, have not their Answers “ reveal'd the same Way: Some gather their Resolves from outward “ Appearances, others by word of Mouth; they all return the same “ way back, with their Feet foremost. Among all that have descend“ ed, 'twas never known that any was lost, except one of the Life-“ guard of Demetrius; and besides, 'tis credible the Reason proceed“ ed from the Neglect of the Rituals in his Descent, and his ill Design,
 “ for he went not out of necessity to consult, but out of an avarici“ ous Humour, for the sacrilegious Conveyance back of the Gold and “ Silver, which was there religiously bestow'd; wherefore 'tis said;
 “ that his Carcase was thrown out some other way, and not at the “ Entrance of the sacred Shrine. Among the various Reports that fly “ abroad concerning this Man, I've deliver'd to Posterity the most “ remarkable. The Priests, as soon as the Consultant is return'd, “ place him on Mnemosyne's Throne, which is not very far from “ the Shrine; here they enquire of him, what he had seen or heard;
 “ which when he hath related, they deliver him to others, who
 “ (as appointed for that Office) carry him stupify'd with Amazement,
 “ and forgetful of himself, and those about him, to the Chapel
 “ of Good Genius and Good Fortune, where he had made his former “ stay at his going down ; here, after some time, he’s restor’d to his “ former Senses, and the chearfulness of his Visage returns again. What “ I here relate, was not receiv’d at second-hand, but either as by ocular “ Demonstration I have perceiv’d in others ; or what I’ve prov’d true

 “ by my own Experience ; for all Consultants are oblig’d to hang up, “ engraven on a Tablet, what they have seen or heard.

Thus far Pausanias. Plutarch’s Relation concerns the Appearances exhibited to Consultants ; which tho’ they were various, and seldom the same, being it is a remarkable Story, I will give it you, as it is translated by the same Hand :

“ Timarchus, being a Youth of Liberal Education, and just initi“ ated in the Rudiments of Philosophy, was greatly desirous of know“ ing the Nature and Efficacy of Socrates’s Dæmon ; wherefore commu“ nicating his Project to no Mortal Body but Me and Cebes, after the “ Performance of all the Rituals requisite for Consultation, He de“ scended Trophonius’s Cave ; where having stay’d two Nights and one “ Day, his return was wholly despair’d of, insomuch that his Friends “ bewail’d Him as dead : In the Morning He came up very brisk, and “ in the first Place paid some venerable Acknowledgments to the God ;
 “ after that having escap’d the staring Rout, He laid open to us a “ prodigious Relation of what he had seen or heard, to this Pur“ pose : In his Descent, he was beset with a caliginous Mist, upon “ which he pray’d, lying prostrate for a long time, and not having Sense “ enough to know whether he was awake or in a Dream, He sur“ mises, that he receiv’d a Blow on his Head, with such an ecchoing “ Violence, as dissever’d the Sutures of his Skull, thro’ which his Soul “ migrated ; and being disunited from the Body, and mixt with bright
 “ and refin’d Air, with a seeming Contentment, began to breathe “ for a long time, and being dilated like a full Sail, was wider than “ before. After this, having heard a small Noise, whistling in “ his Ears a delightful sound ; he look’d up, but saw not a Spot of “ Earth, only Islands reflecting a glimmering Flame, interchangeably “ receiving different Colours, according to the various Degrees of “ Light. They seem’d to be of an infinite Number, and of a stupendous “ size, not bearing an equal Parity betwixt one another in this, tho’
 “ they were all alike, viz. Globular : it may be conjectur’d, that the “ Circumrotation of these mov’d the Æther, which occasion’d that “ Whistling, the gentle Pleasantness of which bore an adequate A“ greement with their well-tim’d Motion. Between these there was “ a Sea, or Lake, which spread out a Surface glittering with many “ Colours, intermixt with an azure ; some of the Islands floated in its “ Stream, by which they were driven on the other side of the Tor“ rent ; many others were carried to and fro, so that they were well-“ nigh sunk. This Sea, for the most part, was very shallow and ford“ able, except towards the South, where ’twas of a great Depth ; it “ very often ebb’d and flow’d, but not with a high Tide ; some part “ of it had a natural Sea-colour, untainted with any other, as miry
 “ and muddy as any Lake : The Rapidness of the Torrent carry’d “ back those Islands from whence they had grounded, not situating “ them in the same Place as at first, or bringing them about with a “ Circum-

“ Circumference ; but in the gentle turning of them, the Water makes “ one rising Roll : Betwixt these, the Sea seem'd to bend inwards a“ bout (as near as he cou'd guess) eight parts of the whole. This Sea
 “ had two Mouths, which were Inlets to boisterous Rivers, casting out “ fiery Foam, the flaming Brightness of which cover'd the best part “ of its natural Azure. He was very much pleas'd at this Sight, until he “ look'd down, and saw an immense Hiatus, resembling a hollow'd “ Sphere, of an amazing and dreadful Profundity : It had Darkness to a “ Miracle ; not thin, but thicken'd, and agitated : Here he was seiz'd “ with no small Fright, by the astonishing Hubbubs, and Noises of all “ Kinds, that seem'd to arise out of this Hollow, from an unfathomable “ Bottom, viz. He heard an Infinity of Yells and Howlings of Beasts, “ Cries and Bawlings of Children, confus'd with the Groans and Out“ rages of Men and Women. Not long after, he heard a Voice invi-
 “ sibly pronounce these Words.” ———

What follows is nothing but a prolix and tedious Harangue upon various Subjects. One thing there is more especially remarkable in this Account, viz. That he makes Timarchus to return from Consultation with a brisk and chearful Countenance, whereas 'tis commonly reported, that all the Consultants of this Oracle became pensive and melancholy ; that their Tempers were sour'd, and their Countenances, however gay and pleasant before, render'd dull and heavy ; whence, of any Person dejected, melancholy, or too serious ; it was generally said, εις Τροφωνίῳ μανάντεραι, i. e. He has been consulting the Oracle of Trophonius. But this is only to be understood of the Time immediately ensuing Consultation ; for, as we learn from Pausanias, all Enquirers recover'd their former Chearfulness in the Temple of Good Genius and Good Fortune.

Of other Grecian Oracles.

A Amphiaras was the Son of Oicleus, and married Eriphyle the Sister of Adrastus, King of Argos ; he was an excellent Sootch-fayer, and by his Skill foresaw, that it would prove fatal to him, if he engag'd himself in the Theban War. Wherefore, to avoid inevitable Destruction, he hid himself, but was discover'd by his Wife, Eriphyle, whom Polynices had corrupted with a Present of a golden Chain. Being discover'd, he was oblig'd by Adrastus, to accompany the Army to Thebes, where, as he had foretold, together with his Chariot and Horses, he was swallow'd up by the Earth, whence Ovid saith of him, Notus humo mergis Amphiaras equis.

Some say this Accident happen'd in the Way betwixt Thebes and Chalcis, and for that Reason the Place is call'd Αρμα, i. e. a Chariot, to this Day, saith Pausanias a.

After his Death, he was honour'd with Divine Worship; first by the Oropians, and afterwards by all the other Grecians: And a stately Temple, with a Statue of white Marble, was erected to him in the Place where he was swallow'd up, saith my Author, being about XII Stadia distant from Oropus, a City in the Confines of Attica and Bœotia, which, for that Reason, is sometimes attributed to both Countries: There was also a remarkable Altar, dedicated to him in the same Place; it was divided into five Parts; the first of which was sacred to Hercules, Jupiter, and Pæonian Apollo: The second, to the Heroes and their Wives: The third, to Vesta, Mercury, Amphiaraus, and the Sons of Amphiloebus (for Alcmæon, the Son of Amphiaraus, was not allow'd to partake of any of the Honours paid to Amphiloebus, or Amphiaraus, because he slew his Mother Eriphyle;) The fourth to Venus, Panacea, Jasón, Hygia, and Pæonian Minerva. The fifth Part to the Nymphs, Pan, and the Rivers Achelous and Cephefus.

Answers were deliver'd in Dreams: Jophon the Gnostian, who publish'd the ancient Oracles, in Heroick Verses, reports, That Amphiaraus return'd an Answer to the Argives in Verse; but my Author herein contradiceth him, and reports farther, that it was the general Opinion, that only those, who were inspir'd by Apollo, gave Answers after that manner; whereas all the rest made Predictions either by Dreams, or the Flight of Birds, or the Entrails of Beasts. He adds, for a Confirmation of what he had said before, viz. That these Answers were given in Dreams. That Amphiaraus was excellently skill'd in the Interpretation of Dreams, and canoniz'd for the Invention of that Art.

They that came to consult this Oracle were first to be purify'd by offering Sacrifice to Amphiaraus, and all the other Gods, whose Names were inscrib'd on the Altar: ^b Philostratus adds, they were to fast 24 Hours, and abstain three Days from Wine. After all, they offer'd a Ram in Sacrifice to Amphiaraus, then went to Sleep, lying upon a Victim's Skin, and in that Posture expected a Revelation by Dream. In the same manner did the People of Apulia Daunia expect Answers from Podalirius, who died there, and return'd prophetick Dreams to those that came to enquire of him. Whoever consulted him was to sleep upon a Sheep's Skin at his Altar, as we learn from these Words of Lycophron c,

Δραῖς δὲ μύλων τύμβῳ ἐσκοιμῶμενοι
Χεῖται χεῖρ' ὕπνου πᾶσι νημερτῆ φατιν.

They, whose aspiring Minds curious to pry
Into the mystick Records of Events,
Ask Aid of Podalirius, must sleep
Prostrate on Sheep-Skins at his hallow'd Fane,
And thus receive the true prophetick Dreams.

To return: All Persons were admitted to this Oracle, the Thebeans only excepted, who were to enjoy no Benefit from Amphiaraus in this way: For, as Herodotus reporteth ^d, He gave them their Option of two Things, viz. His Counsel and Advice, to direct them in time of Necessity, or his Help and Protection, to defend them in time of Danger; telling them they must not expect both: Whereupon they chose the latter, thinking they had a greater need of Defence, than Counsel, which they could be sufficiently furnish'd with by Delphian Apollo.

This Oracle was had in a very great Esteem: Herodotus ^c reckons it amongst the five principal ones of Greece, consulted by Cræsus, before his Expedition against Cyrus, viz. the Delphian, Dodonæan, Amphiaræus's, Trophonius's, and the Didymæan; and Valerius Maximus ^f saith, it was not inferior either to the two first of those already mention'd, or that of Jupiter Hammon.

Near the Temple was the Fountain, out of which Amphiaræus ascended into Heaven, when he was receiv'd into the number of the Gods, which for that Reason was call'd by his Name: It was held so sacred, that it was a Capital Crime to employ the Waters of it to any ordinary Use, as washing the Hands, or Purification; nay, it was unlawful to offer Sacrifice before it, as was usual at other Fountains: The chief Use it was employ'd in was this, viz. They that by the Advice of the Oracle had recover'd out of any Disease were to cast a piece of coin'd Gold or Silver into it; and this ^e Pausanias tells us, was an ancient Custom, and deriv'd from the Ptimitive Ages.

At Pharæ, a City of Achaia, Answers were given by Mercurius Apyæi ^g, so nam'd from ἀγορά, i. e. the Market-place, where was a Statue of Stone erected to him, having a Beard, which seems to have been a thing unusual in his Statues; before it was plac'd a low Stone Altar, upon which stood brazen Basons foldered with Lead. They that came for Advice first offer'd Frankincense upon the Altar, then lighted the Lamps, pouring Oil into them; after that, they offer'd upon the right-side of the Altar a piece of Money, stamp'd with their own Country Impression, and call'd χαλκός, then propos'd the Questions they desir'd to be resolv'd in, placing their Ear close to the Statue, and after all, departed, stopping both their Ears with their Hands, till they had pass'd quite through the Market-place; then they pluck'd away their Hands, and receiv'd the first Voice that presented itself, as a Divine Oracle. The same Ceremonies were practis'd in Egypt, at the Oracle of Serapis, as ^h Pausanias reports.

ⁱ At Bura in Achaia there was an Oracle of Hercules, call'd from that City Baraicus; the Place of it was a Cave, wherein was Hercules's Statue: Predictions were made by throwing Dice. They that consulted the God first address'd themselves to him by Prayer; then taking four Dice out of a great Heap that lay ready there, they threw them upon the Table: All the Dice had on them certain peculiar Marks, all which were interpreted in a Book kept for that purpose; as soon therefore as they had cast the Dice, they went to the Book, and there every Man found his Doom.

At Patra ^k a City on the Sea-coast of Achaia, not far from the sacred Grove of Apollo, there was a Temple dedicated to Ceres, in which were erected three Statues, two to Ceres and Proserpina, standing; the third to Earth, sitting upon a Throne. Before the Temple there was a Fountain, in which were deliver'd Oracles, very famous for the Truth of their Predictions. These were not given upon every Account, but concern'd only the Events of Diseases. The manner of consulting was this; They let down a Looking-glass by a small Cord into the Fountain, so low that the bottom of it might just touch the surface of the Water, but not to be cover'd by it: This done, they offer'd Incense and Prayers to the Goddesses, then look'd upon the Glass, and, from the various Figures and Images represented in it, made conjectures concerning the Patient.

^l At Træzen, a City of Peloponnesus, there was an old Altar dedicated to the Muses and Sleep, by Ardalus, one of Vulcan's Sons; who was the first Inventor of the Flute, and a great Favourite of the Muses, who from him were call'd Ardalides. They that came for Advice were oblig'd to abstain certain Days from Wine. Afterwards they lay down by the Altar to sleep, where, by the secret inspiration of the Muses, proper Remedies for their Distempers were reveal'd to them.

^m At Epidaurus, a City of Peloponnesus, there was a Temple of Æsculapius, fam'd for curing Diseases; the Remedies of which were reveal'd in Dreams. When the Cure was perfected, the Names of the diseas'd Persons, together with the manner of their Recovery, were register'd in the Temple. This God was afterwards translated to Rome, by the Command of Delphian Apollo, who told them, that was the only way to be freed from the Plague, which at that time rag'd exceedingly amongst them: Whereupon they sent Ambassadors to Epidaurus, to desire the God of them: But the Epidaurians being unwilling to part with so beneficial a Guest: Æsculapius of his own accord, in the shape of a great Serpent, went strait to the Roman Ship, where he repos'd himself, and was with great Veneration convey'd to Rome, where he was receiv'd with great Joy; and having deliver'd them from the Distress they lay under, was honour'd with a Temple in the little Island, encompass'd by the River Tiber, and worship'd in the same Form he had assum'd, This Story is related by *Pliny*ⁿ, and Ovid^o.

At Amphiclea, call'd by Herodotus, Ophitea, by Stephanus Amphicæa, there was a Temple sacred to Bacchus, but no Image, at least, none expos'd to publick View. To this God, saith Pausanias^p, the Amphicleans ascribe both the Cure of their Diseases, and the Foretelling of future Events: The former he effected by revealing proper Remedies in Dreams; the latter, by inspiring into his Priests Divine Knowledge.

Strabo, in his Description of Corinth, telleth us, Juno, had an Oracle in the Corinthian Territories, in the way between Lechaëum and Pagæ.

There was also in Laconia a Pool sacred to Juno, by which Predictions were made after this manner; They cast into it Cakes made of Bread-corn; if these sunk down, Good; if not, something Dreadful was portended.

Cælius Rhodiginus ^p telleth us out of Philostratus, that Orpheus's Head at Lesbos gave Oracles to all Enquirers, but more especially to the Grecians, and told them, that Troy could not be taken without Hercules's Arrows: He adds, that the Kings of Persia and Babylon often sent Ambassadors to consult this Oracle, and particularly Cyrus, who, being desirous to know by what Death he was to die, receiv'd this Answer, Τὰ ἐμὰ, ᾧ Κύρε, τὰ σά: My Fate, O Cyrus, is decreed you. Whereby it was meant he should be beheaded; for Orpheus suffer'd that Death in Thrace, by the Fury of the Women, because he profess'd an Hatred and Aversion to the whole Sex: His Head being thrown into the Sea, was cast upon Lesbos, where it return'd Answers in a Cavern of the Earth. There were also Persons initiated into Orpheus's Mysteries, call'd Ορχειταλαισται, who assur'd all those that should be admitted into their Society of certain Felicity after Death: Which when Philip, one of that Order, but miserably poor and indigent, boasted of, Leotychidas the Spartan reply'd, Why do you not die then, you Fool, and put an End to your Misfortunes together with your Life. At their Initiation little else was requir'd of them besides an Oath of Secrecy.

An Oracle of the Earth is said to have been in the Country of Elis ^q.

An Oracle of Pan, which was consulted by the Inhabitants of Pisa, seems to be meant in the following Words of Statius ^r:

In Laconia in the way betwixt Oebylus and Thalamia, Pausanias ^u faith, there was a Temple and Oracle of Ino, who gave Answers by Dreams to those that enquir'd of her.

Plutarch ^x maketh mention of another famous Oracle in Laconia, at the City Thalamia, which was sacred to Pasiphae, who, as some say, was one of the Daughters of Atlas, and had by Jupiter a Son call'd Ammon. Others are of Opinion, it was Cassandra the Daughter of King Priamus, who dying in this Place, was called Pasiphae, παρὰ τὸ πᾶσι δαίνειν τὰ μαντήια, from revealing Oracles to all Men. Others will have it, that this was Daphne the Daughter of Amyclas, who flying from Apollo, was transform'd into a Laurel, and honour'd by that God with the Gift of Prophecy. This Oracle, when Agis King of Sparta endeavour'd to reduce the Spartans to their ancient Manner of Living, and put in force Lycurgus's old Laws, very much countenanced and encouraged his Undertaking, commanding the People to return to the former State of Equality. Again, when Cleomenes made the like Attempt, it gave the same Advice, in this Manner, as my Author relates the Story: "About that Time, saith he, one of the Ephori " sleeping in Pasiphae's Temple dream'd a very surprizing Dream; for " he thought he saw the four Chairs remov'd, where the Ephori used " to sit and hear Causes, and only one placed there; and whilst he " wonder'd, he heard a Voice out of the Temple, saying, This is the " best for Sparta.

Upon the Top of Cithæron, a Mountain in Bœotia, was a Cave call'd Spragidium, where many of the Inhabitants of that Country were inspir'd by the Nymphs call'd Sphragitides, and thence nam'd *Νυμφό- ληπτοι*², i. e. inspir'd by the Nymphs.

Ulysses had an Oracle among the Eurytanes, a Nation of Ætolia, as *Aristotle*² is said to report by Tzetzes in his Comment upon Lycophron, who hath these Words concerning Ulysses:

Ο, τ' αἰπὸν γάτων Τραμπύας ἰδεδίον.

Several other Oracles we read of in Authors, as that of Tiresias and Ægeus, with others of less Repute, which for that Reason I shall forbear to mention.

Of Theomancy.

HAVING given you an Account of the most celebrated Oracles in Greece, which make the first and noblest Species of Natural Divination, I come now to the second, call'd in Greek Θεομαντεία, which is a compound Word, consisting of two Parts, by which it is distinguish'd from all other sorts of Divination; by the former (viz. Θεός) it is distinguished from Artificial Divination; which, tho' it may be said to be given by the Gods, yet does not immediately proceed from them, being the Effect of Experience and Observation. By the latter (viz. μαντεία) it is oppos'd to Oracular Divination; for tho' Μαντεία be a general Name, and sometimes signifies any sort of Divination; yet it is also used in a more strict and limited Sense, to denote those Predictions that are made by Men; and in this Acceptation it is oppos'd to Χρησμός, as the *Scholias*t upon Sophocles has observ'd^c.

^b Ver. 799. ^c In Oedip. Tyr.

Thus much for the Name. As to the Thing, it is distinguish'd from Oracular Divination (I mean, that which was deliver'd by Interpreters, as the Delphi, for in others the Difference is more evident) because that was confin'd usually to a fixed and stated Time, and always to a certain Place; for the Pythia could not be inspir'd in any other Place but Apollo's Temple, and upon the sacred Tripus; whereas the Θιομαντιες were free and unconfin'd, being able (after the offering of Sacrifices, and the Performance of the other usual Rites) to prophesy at any Time, or in any Part of the World.

As to the Manner of receiving the Divine Inspiration, that was not always different; for not only the Pythia, but the Sibyls also, with many others, were possess'd with Divine Fury, swelling with Rage like Persons distracted, and beside themselves. ^b Virgil describes the Sibyl in this hideous Posture:

— — — Cui talia fanti
*Ante fores subito non vultus, non color unus,
 Non comæ mansere comæ, sed pectus anhelum,
 Et rabie fera corda tument; majorque videri,
 Nec mortale sonans: afflata est numine quando
 Jam propiore Dei* — — —

Thus at the Entrance spake the sacred Maid;
 And now no settl'd Air or Feature staid
 Thro' the whole Symmetry of her alter'd Face,
 For fleeting Colours seiz'd each other's Place.
 But when the head-strong God, not yet appear'd,
 With holy Phrenzy had the Sibyl seiz'd,
 Terror froze up her grisly Hair; her Breast
 Throbbing with holy Fury, still exprest
 A greater Horror, and she bigger seems Swol'n with th' Afflatus, whilst in holy Screams
 Sh' unfolds the hidden Mysteries of Fate.

H. H.

Few that pretend to Inspiration, but raged after this manner, foaming and making a strange terrible Noise, gnashing with their Teeth, shivering and trembling, with other antick Motions: And therefore some will have their Name (viz. μάντις) to be deriv'd ἀπὸ τῆ μαίνεσθαι, i. e. from being mad.

Other Customs there were common to them with the Pythia; I shall only mention those about the Laurel, which was sacred to Apollo, the God of Divination, being sprung from his beloved Daphne, and thought to conduce very much to Inspiration, and therefore call'd μαντικὸν φυτόν, the Prophetick Plant: Whence Claudian saith of it, — — — Venturi præscia Laurus.

The Laurel skill'd in Events.

With this they us'd to crown their Heads. Thus Cassandra is describ'd by Euripides. And Æschylus ^d speaks thus of her:

^a Æn. lib. vi. v. 47.

^c Andromache.

^d Agamemnone, v. 1273.

Καὶ σκῆπτρα, καὶ μαντιῖα παρὰ δέξιν ἑστῆν.

Her Hand a Laurel Scepter grasp'd, her Neck
The same prophetick Plant with Garlands grac'd.

Where by σκῆπτρον he means a Staff of Laurel, which Prophets usually carried in their Hands; it was called in Greek ἰδυνθῆιον, as we learn from Hesychius. It was also usual to eat the Leaves of this Tree; whence Lycophron's faith of Cassandra, Δαρνηράγων φαίβαζεν ἐκ λαϊμῶν ὄπα.

The Mouth with Laurel Morfels often blest'd,
In mystick Words unriddl'd future Truths.

And the Sibyl in Tibullus speaks of it, as one of her greatest Privileges, placing it in the same Rank with that of Virginitiy, a Thing held by her very sacred, tho' not always observ'd by other Prophets; for Cassandra was Agamemnon's Concubine; and tho' the Condition of a Captive might lay some Force upon her, yet 'tis agreed by all, that *Helenu*s married Andromache; and that blind Tirefias was led up and down by his Daughter Manto. But to return to the Sibyl, whose Words in Tibullus are these:

—Sic usque sacras innoxia laurus
Vescar, & æternum sit mihi virginitas.

With holy Laurel may I e'er be fed,
And live and die an unpolluted Maid.

It was also customary for Diviners to feed upon the κρυώταλα μύεα ζώων μαντικῶν, principal Parts of the propheticall Beasts; such were the Hearts of Crows, Vultures, and Moles; thinking that by these they became Partakers of the Souls of those Animals, which by a natural Attraction follow'd the Bodies, and by Consequence receiv'd the Influence of the God, who us'd to accompany the Souls. Thus we are inform'd by Porphyry †.

Thus much of these Prophets in general; I shall only add, that they, as also other Diviners, were maintain'd at Athens at the publick Charge, having their Diet allow'd in the Πρυτανεῖον, or Common Hall, as the Scholiast upon Aristophanes observes.

Of the Θεομαντεῖς there were three sorts among the Grecians, distinguish'd by three distinct manners of receiving the Divine Afflatus.

One sort were possess'd with prophesying Dæmons, which lodged within them, and dictated what they should answer to those that enquired of them, or spoke out of the Bellies or Breasts of the possessed Persons, they all the while remaining speechless, and not so much as moving their Tongues or Lips; or pronounced the Answer themselves, making use of the Members of the Dæmoniac. These were call'd Δαιμονόληπτοι, i. e. possess'd with Dæmons; and because the Spirits either lodg'd or spoke within their Bodies, they were also nam'd Εγχεσπίμοι, e Cassandr. v. 6.

† Lib. II, de Abſtinentia ab Animal.

(which

(which Name was also attributed to the Dæmons) Εγασεϊμάντις, Σπερνομάντις, Εγασεϊται, &c. This way of Prophecy was practis'd also in other Countries, and particularly amongst the Jews, as also Necromancy: For the Prophet Isaiab denounced God's Judgments upon those that made use of either of them. ⁸ His Words, as they are translated by the Seventy, run thus: Καὶ ἐὰν εἴπωσι πρὸς ὑμᾶς, ζήτησατε τὸ ἐγασεϊμάντις, καὶ τὸ ἀπὸ τῆ γῆς φωνῶντας, τὸ κενολογύοντας, οἱ ἐκ τῆ κοιλίας φωνῶσιν· ἐκ ἔθνῳ πρὸς θεὸν ἀπὸ ἐκζητήσεως; πῶς ἐκζητήσῃ πρὸς τὸ ζώντων τὸ νεκρῶς; And if they say unto you, Seek unto them whose Speech is in their Belly, and those that speak out of the Earth, those that utter vain Words, that speak out of their Belly: Shall not a Nation seek unto their God? Why do they enquire of the Dead concerning the Living? These Diviners were also nam'd Εὐρυκλεῖς, and Εὐρυκλείται, from Eurycles, the first that practis'd this Art at Athens, as the Scholiast upon Aristophanes hath inform'd us, at these Words,

Μιμωσάμενος τὴν Εὐρυκλεῖς μαντείαν καὶ διάνοιαν
Εἰς ἀλλοτρίας γαστήρας ἐθέδος, κωμωδικά πολλά χίασθαι ^h.

Like that fantastick Divination,
Which Eurycles of old did first invent,
To enter Bellies, and from thence pronounce Ridic'ulous Whims —————

H. H.

They were also call'd Πύθωνες, and Πυθωνικοὶ, from Πύθων, a prophesying Dæmon, as Hesychius and Suidas have told us. The same is mention'd in the Acts of the Apostles ¹: Ἐγένετο ἡ περὶ δομένων ἡμῖν εἰς προσέσχιν, παιδίσκῃ νῦν ἔχουσιν πνεῦμα Πύθωνος, ἀπαγγέλλουσα ἡμῖν. Our Translators have rendred it thus: And it came to pass, as we went to Prayer, a certain Damsel possess'd with a Spirit of Divination met us. But the Margin reads Python, instead of Divination, which is a general Name, and may be us'd in that Place, as more intelligible by the common People. Plutarch, in his Treatise concerning the Cessation of Oracles, saith, these familiar Spirits were anciently call'd Εὐρυκλεῖς, and only Πυθωνες in latter Ages: "It is absurd (saith he) and childish to suppose, that God himself, like the Εγασεϊμάντις, which were formerly call'd Εὐρυκλεῖς, but "are now named Πύθωνες, should enter into the Bodies of Prophets, "and make use of their Mouths and Voices, in pronouncing their "Answers.

As to the Original of this Name (Python) there are various Conjectures; the most probable of which seems to be, that it was taken from Apollo Pythius, who was thought to preside over all sorts of Divination, and afterwards appropriated by Custom to this Species; for so we find a great many Words of a general Signification, in time, made peculiar to some one Part of what they signified before. To give one Instance: Τύραννος, by the ancient Greeks was apply'd to all Kings, as well the just and merciful, as the cruel, and whom we now call Tyrannical; but in more modern Ages was appropriated to that latter fort, and became a Name of the greatest Ignominy and Detestation. On the contrary, Words of a narrow and limited Sense have sometimes pass'd their Bounds, and taken upon them a more general and unconfined one: so Μαντία, which at first signified only that sort of Prophecy which was inspir'd with Rage and Fury; being derived (as Plato and others after him will have it) ἀπὸ τῆς μανίας, from being mad; and by Homer * in that Sense oppos'd to some other Ways of Divination, as that by Dreams and Entrails came at length to be a general Name for all sorts of Divination.

The second sort of Θεομαντεῖς were call'd Ενθουσιασταί, Ενθουσιαστοί, and Θεοκλυεῖς, being such as pretended to what we also call Enthusiasm; and different from the former, who contain'd within them the Deity himself; whereas these were only govern'd, acted, or inspir'd by him, and instructed in the Knowledge of what was to happen. Of this sort were Orpheus, Amphion, Museus, and several of the Sibyls.

A third sort were the Εκστατικοί, or those that were cast into Trances or Ecstasies, in which they lay like Men dead, or asleep, depriv'd of all Sense or Motion, but after some Time (it may be Days, or Months, or Years, for Epimenides the Cretan is reported to have lain in this Posture LXXV Years) returning to themselves, gave strange Relations of what they had seen and heard. For it was a vulgar Opinion, that Man's Soul might leave the Body, wander up and down the World, visit the Place of the Deceased, and the heavenly Regions, and, by conversing with the Gods and Heroes, be instructed in things necessary for the Conduct of human Life. Plato, in the tenth Book of his Politicks, speaks of one Pamphilus, a Phærean, that lay ten Days amongst the Carcasses of slain Men, and afterwards being taken up, and placed upon the Funeral Pile to be burn'd, returned to Life, and related what Places he had seen in Heaven, Earth and Hell, and what was done there, to the Astonishment of all that heard him. And Plutarch, in his Discourse concerning Socrates's Dæmon, saith, it was reported of the Soul of Hermodorus the Clazomenian, that for several Nights and Days it would leave his Body, travel over many Countries, and return after it had view'd Things, and discours'd with Persons at a great Distance; till at last, by the Treachery of a Woman, his Body was deliver'd to his Enemies, who burn'd the House while the Inhabitant was abroad. Several other Stories of the same Nature are recorded in History; which whether true or false, it matters not much, since they were believ'd, and receiv'd as such.

Hither may also be reduc'd another sort of Divination. It was commonly believ'd, that the Souls of dying Men, being then in a manner loos'd from the Body, could foresee future Events. Whence Hector is introduc'd by Homer †, foretelling to Achilles the Authors and Place of his Death. In Imitation of whom Virgil brings in Orodes foretelling the Death of Mezentius ‡. I will only mention one Example more, which is related by Cicero §, concerning Calanus the Indian Philosopher, who being ask'd by Alexander, whether he had a mind to speak any thing before his Death, reply'd, Optime, propediem te videbo: Yes I shall see you shortly. Quod ita contigit : Which accordingly (saith Cicero) came to pass.

Thus much for Natural Divination. I come, in the next Place, to speak something of that which is call'd Artificial; in doing which, because Divination, or Prediction by Dreams, seems to bear a more near Affinity to the Natural than the rest, and is by some reckon'd amongst the Species of it; I shall therefore in the first place give you an Account of the Customs practis'd in it.

C H A P. XIII.

Of Divination by Dreams.

I SHALL not in this Place trouble you with the various Divisions of Dreams, which do not concern my present Design, which is only to speak of those by which Predictions were made, commonly call'd Divine; and of these there were three Sorts.

The first was Χρηματισμός, when the Gods and Spirits in their own or under any assumed Form convers'd with Men in their Sleep: Such an one was Agamemnon's Dream, at the Beginning of the second Iliad; where the God of Dreams, in the Form of Nestor, adviseth him to give the Trojans Battle, and encourageth him thereto with the Promise of certain Success and Victory. Such an one also was the Dream of Pindar, in which (as Pausanias^a reports) Proserpina appear'd to him, and complain'd he dealt unkindly by her, for that he had compos'd Hymns in Honour of all the other Gods, and she alone was neglected by him: She added, that when he came into her Dominions, he should celebrate her Praises also. Not many Days after the Poet died, and in a short time appear'd to an old Woman, a Relation of his, that us'd to employ a great part of her Time in reading and singing his Verses, and repeated to her an Hymn made by him upon Proserpina.

The second is Οραμα, wherein the Images of Things which are to happen are plainly represented in their own Shape and Likeness; and this is by some call'd Θεωρηματικός. Such an one was that of Alexander the Great, mention'd by Valerius Maximus^b, when he dream'd that he was to be murder'd by Cassander: And that of Cræsus, King of Lydia, when he dream'd that his Son Atys, whom he design'd to succeed him in his Empire, should be slain by an Iron Spear, as Herodotus relateth.

The third Species, call'd Ονειρος, is that in which future Events are revealed by Types and Figures; whence it is named Αλληγορικός, an Allegory, being, according to Heracledes^d of Pontus, a Figure by which one Thing is express'd, and another signify'd. Of this sort was Hecuba's, when she dream'd she had conceiv'd a Firebrand; and Cæsar's, when he dream'd he lay with his Mother; whereby was signified he should enjoy the Empire of the Earth, the common Mother of all living Creatures. From this Species, those, whose Profession it was to interpret Dreams, have defum'd their Names, being call'd in Greek Ονειροκριται, Ονειροτων Ψωκυται, from Judging of Dreams; Ονειροσκοποι; from Prying and Looking into them; and Ονειροπόλοι, because they were conversant about them. To one of these three Sorts may all Prophetical Dreams be reduc'd; but the Distinction of their Names is not always critically observ'd.

The first Author of all Dreams, as well as other Divinations, was Jupiter, as I have already intimated, — κῆ γάρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστίν.

For Dreams too come from Jove.

faith Homer. But this must not be understood, as if Dreams were thought immediately to proceed from Jupiter: It was below his Dignity to descend to such mean Offices, which were thought more fit for inferior Deities.

To omit therefore the Apparitions of the Gods, or Spirits in Dreams, upon particular Occasions, such as was that of Patroclus's Ghost to Achilles, to desire his Body might be interr'd; The Earth was thought to be the cause of Dreams, faith Euripides ⁵:

— ὦ πέτρεα χθών,
Μελανοπτερυγῶν μᾶτερ ὄνειρων*

Hail, reverend Earth, from whose prolifick Womb
Sable wing'd Dreams derive their Birth.

Where the Scholiast gives this Reason for it, viz. That the Earth, by obstructing the Passage of the Light of the Sun, causeth the Night, in which Dreams present themselves, which are upon this account imputed to the Earth as their Mother. Or, that out of the Earth proceeds Meat, Meat causeth Sleep (Sleep being nothing but the Ligation of the exterior Senses, caus'd by humid Vapours ascending from the Stomach to the Brain, and there obstructing the Motion of the Animal Spirits, which are the Instruments of Sensation, and all other Animal Operations) and from Sleep come Dreams; But these were esteem'd meer Cheats and Delusions, as Eustathius telleth us, in his Comment upon the nineteenth Book of Homer's Odyssey, not far from the end; and such as these he faith the Poet speaks of, when he makes Dreams to inhabit near the Ocean, the great Receptacle of the humid Element,

Πὰρ δ' ἴσαν Ωκεανῶν τεταεῖ, κῆ Λευκάδα πέτρεα,
Ἡδὲ παρ' ἠελίου πίλας, κῆ δῆμον ὄνειραι*

H. H.

Others were ascrib'd to Infernal Ghosts. Thus Virgil at the end of his sixth Æneid:

Sed falsa ad cælum mittunt insomnia Manes.

By this th' Infernal Deities convey
Into the upper World phantastick Dreams.

Hence Sophocles brings in Electra saying, that Agamemnon, out of a concern for Orestes and his Designs, haunted Clytemnestra with fearful Dreams,

^b Οἶμαι μὲν ἄν, οἶμαι τι κακίονο μίλον,
Πιμψας τὰδ' αὐτῆ δυσπρίσσοιτ' ἰνίρατα.

For He, solicitous of those Affairs,
In frightful Dreams doth Clytemnestra haunt:

Others were imputed to Hecate, and to the Moon, who were Goddesses of the Night, and sometimes taken for the same Person; they were also suppos'd to have a particular Influence, and to preside over all the Accidents of the Night, and therefore invoked at Incantations, and other Night-mysteries, as shall be shewn afterwards.

But the chief Cause of all was the God of Sleep, whose Habitation, as ⁱ Ovid describes it, was among the Cimmerii, in a Den dark as Hell, and in the Way to it; around him lay whole Swarms of Dreams of all sorts and sizes, which he sent forth when, and whither, he pleas'd; but Virgil assigns to the false and deluding Dreams another place, upon an Elm at the Entrance of Hell:

*In medio ramos annosaque brachia pandit
Ulmus opaca, ingens: quam sedem somnia vu'go
Vana tenere ferunt, foliisque sub omnibus hærent*^k.

I' th' midst an ancient spreading Elm doth grow,
Whose clasping Arms diffuse a shade below;
And here, if Fables don't the World deceive,
To ev'ry Branch, to ev'ry trembling Leaf
Clings a phantastick Dream. ———

H. H.

It may be, he supposes this to have been the Receptacle of some part of them, and the rest to accompany the God of Sleep. Ovid tells us, He had three Attendants more ingenious than the rest, which could transform themselves into any Form; their Names were Morpheus, Phobetor, or Icelos, and Phantafus: The Employment of the first was to counterfeit the Forms of Men, the second imitated the Likeness of Brutes, and the last that of inanimate Creatures;

H. H. }

In Virgil, the God of Sleep descended from Heaven upon Palinurus; which is not to be understood, as if Heaven was his proper Seat; but that he was sent thence, by some of the Ethereal Gods, by whom He had been call'd thither: Or else He is to be suppos'd to rove up and down through the Heavens, or Air, to disperse his Dreams among Men, as He sees convenient: The Poet's Words are these ^m:

————— *levis æthereis delapsus Somnus ab astris
Æra dimovit tenebrosam, & dispulit umbras;
Te, Palinure, petens, Tibi tristia Somnia portans.*

When nimble Sleep glides through the liquid Air,
Dispeils the Clouds, and makes the Skies more clear,
Laden with fearful Dreams, which he doth bear
For thee, unhappy Palinurus —————

H. H. }

There was another Deity also, to whom the care of Dreams was committed, call'd Brizo, from the old Greek word Ἐπιζευ, to sleep: Cælius ⁿ saith she was worship'd in the Island Delos, and that Boats full of all sorts of Things were offer'd to her, except Fish. But she was thought rather to assist at the Interpretation of Dreams, than to be the efficient Cause of them, and is therefore by Hesychius call'd Βεζζουαρντς.

^m Æneid, v. v. 838.

ⁿ Antiq. Lect. lib. xxvii. c. x.

This Account Cælius hath taken out of the eighth Book of Athenæus, who adds farther, that they used to pray to her for the Publick Safety and Prosperity; but more particularly, that she would vouchsafe to protect and preserve their Ships.

Lastly, 'Twas believed that Hawks or Vultures (ἰρέακες) when they were dead, did μῶν τεύεσθαι, καὶ ὄνειράτα ἐπιπέμπειν prophesy and send Dreams; being then divested of their Bodies, and become γυμναὶ ψυχὰι, naked Souls °.

Having treated of the reputed Authors of Dreams, I shall in the next Place describe the Ways by which they were suppos'd usually to come. These were two, one for delusive Dreams, which pass'd thro' a Gate of Ivory; another for the true, which pass'd through a Gate of Horn. Descriptions of these two Gates occur both in the Greek and Latin Poets, one of which I shall give you in each Tongue: The first shall be that of P Homer, where speaking of Dreams, he saith,

Τῶν οἱ ὤψ' ἢ ἔλθωσι διὰ πρὶς ἑλέφαντος,
 Οἱ δ' ἐλεφαίρονται ἐπὲ ἀκράντα φέροντες·
 Οἱ δ' ἢ διὰ ξυσῶν κέραν ἔλθωσι θύραζε,
 Οἱ δ' ἢ ἔτυμα κραίνεσι βροτῶν ὅτε κέν τις ἴδῃται·

The second shall be that of Virgil, imitated from the former :

*Sunt geminae Somni portæ, quarum altera fertur
 Cornea, quâ veris facilis datur exitus Umbris :
 Altera candenti perfectâ nitens elephanto,
 Sed falsa ad Cælum mittunt insomnia Manes.*

Vain and phantastick are the Dreams that fly
 Thro' the great Gate of polish'd Ivory,
 With senseless Whims these to our Heads repair,
 Gull us with golden Mountains in the Air;
 But when i' th' Morn we wake our drowzy Eyes,
 Big with th' expectance of the lovely Prize,
 With eager haste the giddy Phantasm flies. }
 But no such Whims infest our easy Pate,
 When Sleep conveighs our Dreams thro' th' other Gate, Compos'd of polish'd Horn. For those from hence
 Are true prophetick Dreams, and full of solid Sense. H. H.

In allusion to these Gates, we are told by Philostratus, that it was customary to represent any Dream in a white Garment, wrap'd over a black one, with a Horn in his Hand. And Eustathius, in his Comment upon the fore-mention'd Passage of Homer, hath made several Conjectures concerning it, most of which are so frivolous, that to mention them would be lost Labour. Such as desire farther satisfaction may consult the Author.

• Ælianus de Animal. lib. xi. cap. xxxix.

° Odyss. xix. v. 562.

• Æneid. vi. v. 893.

The Time in which true Dreams were expected, was Νυκτὸς ἀμολγῶδες, and therefore Homer telleth us, that Penelope, having an auspicious Dream concerning her Son Telemachus, who was travelling in search of his Father Ulysses, rejoiced the more, because it appear'd to her at that time,

————— ἡ δ' ἐξ ὕπνου ἀνόρουσε
 Κέρη Ἰκαρίοιο, φίλον δὲ οἱ ἦτορ ἰάνθη,
 Ὡς οἱ ἐναργεῖς ἔνιμον ἐφαίνετο νυκτὸς ἀμολγῶ^ς *.

But when Penelope awak'd, her Breast
 With greater Joy and Gladness was possess'd,
 Because at Break of Day the Dream appear'd.

H. H.

What Time that was Grammarians do not agree: Some derive it (saith Eustathius) from the privative Particle α and μολῶ, to walk, or μολῶ, to labour and toil, as tho' it were ἀμολῶ, or ἀμολῶ, and by Erethēsi, ἀμολγῶς, as tho' it should signify the dead of the Night, in which People neither labour nor walk abroad. Others also think it may signify the middle or depth of the Night, but for a different reason; for ἀμολγῶ (say they) is the same with πυκνός, i. e. thick or close compacted; and Hesiod hath us'd the word in this sense, when he saith,

Μάζα τ' ἀμολγαίη—————

That is, as Athenæus expounds it, ποιμασική ἀμμοαία, a thick Cake, such as the Shepherds, and Labouring Men eat. Others allow it the same Signification, but for a third reason: Αμολγῶς, (say they) according to the Glossographers, amongst the Achæans, is the same with ἀκμή, which signifies the midst, or height of any thing, as ἀκμή θερος, that part of Summer, when the Heat is most violent, Midsummer; and Men are said to be ἐν ἀκμῇ, when they are in their full Strength; and therefore ἀμολγῶς, or ἀκμή νυκτὸς, must be the depth, or midst of the Night. But this Signification concerns not our present Purpose, for I no where read, that Dreams had more Credit, because they came in the dead of the Night. It must therefore be observ'd, that ἀμολγῶς was us'd in another Sense, for the time in which they us'd to milk Cattle, being derived from ἀμέλω, to milk; and then ἀμολγῶς νυκτὸς must signify the Morning, in opposition to ἡμέρας ἀμολγῶς, or the Evening milking-time. That it was us'd in this Sense is evident from Homer's twenty-second Iliad, where he saith the Dog-star (which riseth a little before the Sun) appears ἐν νυκτὸς ἀμολγῶ^ς: His words are these,

Παμφαίνονθ' ἄστ' ἄσπερ' ἐπισσύνωμον πεδίω,
 Ὅς ἴα τ' ὀπάρας εἶσιν, ἀρίζηλοι δὲ οἱ αὐγαί
 Φαίνονται πολλοῖσι μετ' ἄσπασσι νυκτὸς ἀμολγῶ^ς, Ὅν τε κύν Ωρίωνος ἐπίκλωσιν καλέεσιν *.

* Fine Odyss. iv.

* Il. χ'. v. 26.

— Rushing he shone,
As when th' Autumnal Dog-star hast'ning on
To set himself 'fore Morning in the Sky,
Darts down his fiery blazing Beams from high;
A dazzling Lustre all around is seen,
It burns the brightest in the heavenly Plain.

E. D.

And that this was the time, in which Dreams were thought to deserve the greatest regard * Horace assures us,

*Ast ego quum Græcos facerem natus mare citra
Versiculos, vetuit me tali voce Quirinus,
Post mediam noctem 'visus, quum somnia vera.*

— Now being a Roman born,
And Grecian Numbers once resolv'd to try,
Quirinus kindly did my Wish deny;
Methought the Night near spent, when Dreams are true,
'Twas at the Dawn of Day he came unto my View,
And spoke such Words as these. —

E. D.

Ovid appears of the same Opinion from the following Words :

*Namque sub Auroram jam dormitante lucernâ,
Tempore quo cerni somnia vera solent.*

Near Morn, when Lamps are dwindling out their Light,
And seem to nod for sleep, that part of Night,
When Dreams are truest offer'd to our Sight.

E. D. }

Theocritus also agrees with them,

— ἴγγυθι δ' ἡαίς,
Εὔτε καὶ ἀτρύγων ποικιλίεται ἔθνος ὄνειρον

And now Aurora's just about t'appear,
When surest Dreams do most excuse our Fear.

E. D.

The reason of which Opinion was this, viz. They thought all the remainders of the Meat upon their Stomachs might by that time be pretty well digested, and gone; for till then, Dreams were believ'd rather to proceed from the Fumes of the last Night's Supper, than any Divine or Supernatural Cause: And therefore Pliny tells us, a Dream is never true presently after Eating or Drinking: And Artemidorus farther observes, that small Credit is to be given to a Morning Dream, if you have eaten too plentifully the Night before; because all the Crudities cannot then be carried off.

For that Reason, they who desired a prophetick Dream, us'd to take a special Care of their Diet, so as to eat nothing hard of Digestion, as particular Beans, or raw Fruit. Some, that they might be sure to be free from Fumes, fasted one Day before, and abstain'd from Wine for three. Fish is not soon, or easily digested, and therefore ('tis probable) was thought to obstruct true Dreams, which seems to have been the Reason why, such Quantities of other things being offer'd in Sacrifice to the Goddess Brizo, Fish only were excepted, as appears from the fore-mentioned Passage of Athenæus. Plutarch observes, that the Polypus's Head was prejudicial to those who desir'd prophetic Dreams;

Πελοπόδος κεραλή ἐν μὲν κακόν, ἐν δ' ἢ καὶ ἐσθλόν.

— I' th' Polypus's Head
Something of Ill, something of Good is bred.

Because it is sweet and pleasant to the Taste, but disquieteth Men in their Sleep, and maketh them restless, causing troublesome and anxious Dreams; and therefore he compares Poetry to it, which containeth many things, both profitable and pleasant, to those that make a right Use of it; but to others is very prejudicial, filling their Heads with vain, if not impious Notions and Opinions. In short all things apt to burden the Stomach, to put the Blood into a Ferment, and the Spirits into too violent a Motion; all things apt to create strange Imaginations, to disturb Men's Rest, or any way hinder the free and ordinary Operations of the Soul, were to be avoided; that so the Mind and Phantasy being pure, and without any unnatural, or external Impressions, might be the fitter to receive Divine Insinuations. Some Choice there was also in the colour of their Clothes: Suidas hath told us, it was most proper to sleep in a white Garment, which was thought to make the Dreams and Visions the clearer.

Besides all this, (to omit those that expected Dreams from Amphiaræus or other Deities in an Oracular way, of which I have spoken in another Place) before they went to Bed, they us'd to sacrifice to Mercury. The Calasiris in Heliodorus, after he had pray'd to all the rest of the Gods, calls upon Mercury to give him ἐν ὀνείρων νύκτῃ, i. e. a Night of good Dreams. Mercury was thought to be ὕπνου δοτὴρ, the giver of Sleep, as Eustathius telleth us; and therefore they usually carved his Image upon the Bed's-feet, which were for that Reason call'd ἐρμῆνες, which word Homer hath made use of, when he saith that Vulcan caught Mars in Bed with Venus:

Ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' ἐρμῆσιν χεῖς δίσματα κύκλω ἅπαντα*.

Great massy Chains on ev'ry Bed-post round,
With restless Force God Vulcan bound.

Again, in the twenty-third Book of his Odysses.

Ἐρμῖν ἀσκήσας —

* Odyss. 3. v. 278.

* Ver. 198.
Then

Then having with the Rule first shap'd it out,
H' a polish'd Bed-post made. —

Others will have ἐρμῦς to be deriv'd from ἔρμα, i. e. a Prop, or Support, because by it the Bed was upheld or supported. However that be, certain it is, that one of Mercury's Employments was to preside over Sleep and Dreams, and the Night also, with all things which belong to it. Thus we are inform'd by Homer, in his Hymn upon this God, wherein he calls him,

* Ἀνίστρ', ἐλατῆρα βοῶν, ἠρήτορ' οὐρανῶν,
Νυκτὸς ὀπαπιτήρα, πολυδόκοι' —

A thieving God, a Cattle-stealer, one Whose Care are Dreams and Noises in the Night.

After all this Preparation, they went to Sleep, expecting to discover whatever they were solicitous about, before the Morning: But if their Fate was reveal'd in obscure, or allegorical Terms, so that themselves could not dive into their meaning; then an Interpreter was consulted. The first of this Kind, as Pliny,^a reports, was Amphictyon, Deucalion's Son: Pausanias (as hath been mention'd before) would have it to be Amphiaraus, who had divine Honours paid him, for the Invention of that Art. Others ascribe it to the Inhabitants of Telmessus ^b: But whoever was the Author of it, it is certain, that, amongst the ancient Grecians, it had very great Credit, as appears from the number of Books written concerning it: Geminus Pyrius compos'd three Books upon this Subject; Artemon the Milesian two and twenty; beside Panyasis the Halicarnassian; Alexander the Myndian; Phæbus the Antiochian, Demetrius the Phalerean; Nicostratus the Ephesian; Antipho the Athenian; Artemidorus; Astramsyebus; Philo Judeus; Achines the Son of Scyrimus, Nicephorus, &c. Yet it was never in so great request, as the other Species of Divination. The many false and frivolous Dreams, which happen to every Man, cast a Suspicion upon all the rest; and those, which were nothing but Delusions, made the truly διόπμιπτοι, Prophe-tical, to be call'd in Question; and therefore, when the Hero in ^c Homer adviseth the Grecians to enquire of some Prophet, what Means they should use to appease the Anger of the Gods, he speaks boldly, and without hesitation, of μάντις, or the inspired Prophet; and ἱερεῦς, or him that consulted the Entrails of Victims offer'd in Sacrifice (for so ἱερεῦς must signify in that Place) but when he comes to ὄνειροπόλος, or the Interpreter of Dreams, he's forc'd to make a sort of an Apology, in this manner:

Ἀλλ' ἄγε δὴ τίνα μάντιν ἐρίομεν ἢ ἱερεῖα,
Ἡ κ' ὄνειροπόλος, καὶ γὰρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστίν·

But come, let's call some Prophet here or Priest,
Or Dream-Interpreter, for sure, at least,
Some Dreams are sent from Jove.

^d Clemens Alexandrinus Strom. i. pag. 306.

Whereby he anticipates a Question, which he foresaw might be propos'd to him thus: Why should we ask Counsel of one, whose Business is only to expound these Delusions? Why should we trust the Safety of the whole Army in the Hands of a cunning Impostor! To this he answers, That indeed there were many false and deceitful Dreams; yet some also were true, and came from Jupiter, the common Father of all Prophetical Predictions, and therefore might be depended upon. After this Manner Eustatbius has paraphras'd the Poet's Words. In later Ages Dreams came to be little regarded, except by old doating Women, who were very superstitious in observing them, as ^d Propertius intimates in the following Verse:

Quæ mea non decies somnia versat anus?

A hundred times old Women have I told My frightful Dreams.

In more remote Ages, the People who lived near the Gades, and Boryphenes, and the Inhabitants of Telmessus, and Hybla Gereatis, a City belonging to the Cataneans, in Sicily, were famed for their Skill in this Art. The Signs by which they made Conjectures would be too tedious to mention in this Place; and whoever has leisure may consult Artemidorus.

When any frightful or obscure Dream appear'd, the Dreamer us'd to disclose his Fears to some of the Gods, offering Incense, or some other Oblation; and praying, that, if Good was portended, it might be brought to pass: If the contrary, that the Gods would avert it. This telling of Dreams was not appropriated to any particular Deity. Some discover'd them to Hercules, others to Jupiter, as one doth in Plautus; however, because the Household-Gods were nearest at hand, and thought to have a particular Concern and Care for the Family, in which they were worship'd, it was most useful to declare Dreams to them, and particularly to Vesta, as appears from ^e Propertius;

Vadit & hinc castæ narratum Somnia Vestæ, Quæ sibi, quæque mihi non nocitura forent.

Chaste Vesta too my Dreams she went to tell,
Such Dreams, as both for You and Me were well.

E. D.

Apollo also had a peculiar Title to this Worship, under the Name of Ἐξακῆσθῆι ⊙, ἀποτρόπαι ⊙, or Averruncus; so called from averting Evils, and προσαθήι ⊙, because he presided over, and protected Houses; and therefore, as the old Scholiast upon Sophocles informs us, had Images erected to him in the Porches. Whence, in Sophocles's Electra, Clytemnestra, having seen a terrible Dream, calls upon her Woman thus,

*Ἐπαίρει δὲ σὺ θυμάθ', ἢ παρῶσ' αἰμοί,
Πάγκαρπ', ἀνακτι τῶν δ' ὅπως λυτῆρίσ
Εὐχὰς ἀνάσχω δειμάτων αἰ νῦν ἔχω †.*

And then she begins her Prayer :

E. D.

But before that she had discover'd her Fears to the Sun, whence Chrysothemis learn'd the Dream from one that overheard her :

Ἔ τοιαῦτα τῷ παρέντος, ἐνὶ χ' ἡλίῳ
Δίκυσι τῶναρ, ἔκλυον ἐξηγημήνα.

This was told by one that present was,
When to the Sun her Dream she did rehearse.

E. D.

Both the Scholiasts upon that Place tell us, that it was done conformably to the ancient Custom of relating Dreams to the Sun ; and Triclinius giveth his Reason for it, viz. That the Sun, being contrary to the Night, did avert or expel all the Evils which proceeded from it. The same we find done by Iphigenia in Euripides ^h with this Difference, that she discloses her Thoughts to the Heavens, whereas Clytemnestra had done it to the Sun alone : Her Words are these :

Α καινὰ δ' ἤκει νύξ φέρουσα φάσματα,
Δίξω πρὸς αἰθέρ, εἴτι δ' ἡ τόδ' ἴσ' ἄκος.

But what new Dreams this present Night affords,
To th' Sky I'll tell, if that will benefit.

The doing this they call'd ἀποπέμπευξ, ἀποδιόμπειυξ, and ἀποτρίπειυξ ἐννουχον ὀψιν, or ἀποτροπαζεῖυξ τῷ ἡλίῳ. &c.

But before they were permitted to approach the Divine Altars, they were oblig'd to purify themselves from all the Pollutions of the Night ; whence in Æschylus ⁱ one faith,

Ἐπι δ' ἀνέστην, ἢ χερσὶν καλλιήρως
 Ἐφαύσα πηγῆς, σὺν θυηπόλῳ χερσὶ
 Βωμῶ πρόσεισεν, ἀποτροπαίαις δαίμοσι

As first I rose, I to the Rivers went,
 And wash'd away those foul Impurities,
 Which had my Body stain'd ; this being done,
 I approach'd the holy Fanes, and offer'd up
 A Sacrifice to the deliv'ring Gods.

E. D.

Æneas in Virgil is purify'd after the same manner, taking Water out of the River in his Hands ^k :

——— rite carvis undam de flumine palmis Sustulit.———

But Silius has introduced one washing his whole Body ^l :

——— sub lucem ut visa secudent
Oro cœlicolas & vivo purgor in amne.

I cleanse myself in running Streams, and pray
 My Dreams may lucky prove.

It appears from Perfus ^m, that it was usual amongst the Romans to dip their Heads five times in Water before Morning Prayer :

Hæc sanctè ut poscas Tiberino in gurgite mergis,
Manè caput his terque, & noctem flumine purgas.

And lest your Pray'r should speak a sinful Mind,
 You purge away the Filthiness you find
 Procur'd by Night ; you to the Tiber go,
 And down into the Tide you flouncing bow
 Five times your Head.———

Of Divination by Sacrifices.

DIVINATION by Sacrifices, call'd ἱερομαντεία, or ἱεροσκοπεία, was divided into different Kinds, according to the Diversity of the Materials offer'd to the Gods. They first made Conjectures from the external Parts and Motions of the Victim ; then from his Entrails, ⁱ Perfus. ^k Æneid, lib. viii, ver. 67. ^l Lib. viii. ^m Sat. ii. v. 16.

from the Flame in which it was consum'd, from the Cakes and Flour, from the Wine and Water, with several other Things, of which in their their Order.

The Art, which made Observations in killing, and cutting up the Victim, was call'd ΘΥΤΙΚΗ. Unlucky Omens were, when the Beast was drawn by Force to the Altar, when it escap'd by the Way, and avoided the fatal Blow, did not fall down quietly and without Reluctancy, but kick'd, leap'd up, or bellow'd, bled not freely, was long a dying, shew'd any Tokens of great Pain, beat upon the Ground, expired with Convulsions, or did any thing contrary to what usually happens at the Slaughter of Beasts; especially if the Beast prevented the Knife, and dy'd suddenly. Whence Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, being about to make a League with two other Kings, Theodotus forbid him to proceed, and withal foretold the speedy Death of one of the Kings, when one of the three Victims, which was brought to the Altar, suddenly fell down dead^a. But on the contrary, the Gods were judg'd to be propitious, and kindly to receive the Devotions paid to them, when every thing was carried on with Ease: When the Victim went voluntarily and without Compulsion to the Slaughter, endur'd the Blow patiently, fell down quietly, bled freely, and expir'd without groaning, then the Victim seem'd willingly to submit to Death: Any Sign of this was a most fortunate Omen. Such an one is that mention'd by Seneca ^b:

*Stat ecce ad aras hostia, expectat manum
Cervice pronâ.*

Hence it was customary to pour Water into its Ear, ὡς ἐπιρεύη ταῖς πελετοῖς, that it might by a Nod consent to be sacrificed. Somewhat also was observ'd in the Wagging of the Tail; whence the Poet saith,

————— Κέκχθ' ποιῆ καλῶς.

On this Account it was usual to draw a Knife from the Victim's Head to its Tail. Other Predictions were made from the Tail, when cast into the Fire: When it was curl'd by the Flame, it portended Misfortunes; when it was extended out in length and hung downwards, it was an Omen of some Overthrow to be suffer'd; but when erected, it signify'd Victory ^d.

After this, the Victim being cut open, they made Observations from its Entrails; these were term'd ἔμπυρα, from the Fire, wherein they were burn'd. The Omens are call'd by Plato, τὰ ἔμπυρα σημάδια, and the Divination was distinguish'd by the Name of ἡ δὲ ἐμπύρων μαντεία. By some it was feign'd to have been first occasion'd, or very much improv'd by the Death of the Delphian Sibyl, whose Body being reduc'd to Earth, imparted first to the Herbs, and by their Means to the Beasts, which fed on them, a Power of Divining: As also those other Parts of her, which, mix'd with the Air, are said to have occasion'd the Divination by ominous Words ^d. If the Entrails were whole and sound, had their natural Place, Colour, and Proportion, then all was well; but if any Part was decay'd, or wanting, if any thing was out of Order, or not according to Nature, Evil was portended. Hereof Seneca hath furnish'd the Example ^e:

*Mutatus ordo est, sede nil propriâ jacet:
Sed acta retro cuncta. Non animæ capax
In parte dextrâ pulmo sanguineus jacet,
Non læva cordis regio.*

The Palpitation of the Entrails was a very unfortunate Omen, as appears from the same Author ^f, who there enumerates several other direful Passages:

————— *non levi motu, ut solent,
Agitata trepidant exta, sed totas manus
Quatiunt.* —————

The first and principal Part to be observ'd was the Liver: If this was corrupted, they thought that both the Blood, and by Consequence all the Body must be so too; and therefore, if it was found very bad, they desisted immediately, not caring what the other Parts might promise: These Signs was call'd ἀέλευσα, as hindering them from going any farther ^g. This observing the Liver was call'd ἡπαίσκοπία, which also became a general Name for Divination by Entrails, being the chief Part of it. If the Liver had a pleasing and natural Redness, if it was found, without Spot or Blémish, if its Head was large, if it had two Heads, or there were two Livers; if its Lappets were turned inwards, then Prosperity and Success was expected. On the other hand, nothing but Dangers, Disappointments, and Misfortunes were to be look'd for, if there was δριάζε, too much Driness, or δεσμός, a Tie between the Parts, especially if it was ἀλόβη, without a Lappet, or the Liver itself was altogether wanting. Pythagoras the Soothsayer, foretold Alexander's Death, ὅτι ἀλόβον οἱ τὸ ἥπαρ ἦν ἰεῖσις because his Victim's Liver had no Lobes. And his Friend Hephestion's Death was prognosticated by the same Omen ^h. Bad Signs also were accounted such as these: If there appear'd upon it any Blisters, Wheals, or Ulcers; if it was parch'd thin, hard, or of an ugly, blackish Colour; had any corrupt and vitiated Humours, was any way displaced; or, lastly, if in boiling it did not conspicuously appear among the rest of the Entrails, was polluted with any nasty corrupt Matter, became very soft, and as it were melted into a Jelly. The concavous part of the Liver was call'd ἐσιάζε i. e. belonging to the Family, because the Signs observ'd there concern'd themselves and their Friends; the gibbous side ἐπβολίε or ἀβίε ἀτιε, because the Tokens in it concern'd their Enemies: If either of these Parts was shrivelled, corrupted, or any way changed for the worse, it boded Ruin to the Person concern'd in it; but if large and sound, or bigger than usual, it was a prosperous Omen. To this Seneca alludes, when he introduces Manto, the Daughter of Tiresias, thus describing the Liver's Heads † :

*Et capita paribus bina confurgunt toris,
Sed utrumque caesum tenuis abscondit caput
Membrana, latebram rebus occultis negans:
Hostile valido robore insurgit latus,
Septemque venas tendit.*—————

And that the Romans also used this Method appears from Lucan, who tells us, that Cæsar's Victory over Pompey was foretold this way: His Words are these :

*Quodque nefas nullis impune apparuit extis,
Ecce videt capiti fibra'um increfcere molem,
Alterius capiti pars ægra & marcida pendet,
Pars micat, & celeri venas movent improba pulſu.*

Another ill-prefaging Sign was ſeen ;
For of the Liver's Heads was one overgrown,
And as 'twere ſqueez'd was by the other down,
Sickiſh, and wither'd one ſide quiet lay,
The other leap'd, and ſportfully did play.

E. D.

The Place, or Seat where all the Parts of the Liver lay, was call'd δέξις and δοχή. The Place between the Parts in the middle was term'd πυλαία, and εὐρυχωρία * ; by Heſychius ἐδὲι, or ἐκτροπαί ; by Euripides πύλαι.

————— πύλαι κὺ δόχη πύλαι
Κακίς ἔφαινον τῷ σκοπέῳσι πρὸς βολάς.

This was an unfortunate Omen, when found comprefs'd or clos'd ; whence Dio † relates, that the Soothſayers warn'd Caracalla to take Care of himſelf, ὅτι αἱ τῆ ἡπατὸς πύλαι κλείονται, because the Gates of the Liver were clos'd.

The next thing to be taken notice of was the Heart, which, if it was very little, palpitated much, leaped, was shrivel'd, or wrinkled, or had no Fat at all, portended bad Fortune ; if there was no Heart to be found, it was a moſt deadly Omen.

Next to the Heart they obſerv'd the Gall, the Spleen, the Lungs, and the Membranes in which the Bowels were inclos'd. If there were two Galls, if the Gall was large, and ready to burſt out of its Skin ; then ſharp and bloody, but yet proſperous Fights were expected. If the Spleen lay in its own Place, was clear and found, of its natural Colour, without Wheals, Hardneſs, or Wrinkles, it boded nothing but Succes ; as the contrary Signs preſaged Miſfortunes : So did alſo the Entrails, if they chanced to ſlip out of the Hands of him that offer'd the Sacrifice ; if they were beſmear'd with Blood, of a livid Colour, or spotted; were full of Blisters, or Pimples, fill'd with corrupt or salt Matter, broken or torn in Pieces, or stunk like putrified Bodies; lastly, if Serpents crawling, or any thing else terrible and unusual was found in them. If the Lungs were cloven, the Business in hand was to be defer'd; if whole and entire, it was to be proceeded in with all possible Speed and Vigour.

Other Parts of the Victim did sometimes preface Things to come, especially if any thing had happen'd extraordinary, and contrary to the common Course of Nature. For Instance, on the Day that King Pyrrhus was slain at Argos, his Death was foretold by the Heads of the Sacrifices, which being cut off, lay licking their own Blood, as Pliny^m reports. Another unlucky Omen happen'd to Cimon, the Athenian General, a little before his Death; for when the Priest had slain the Sacrifice according to Custom, the Blood that ran down, and congeal'd upon the Ground, was by a great many Pismires carried to Cimon, and placed all together at his great Toe: They were a long Time in doing this before any Man perceiv'd them; but Cimon had no sooner espy'd them out, but the Augur brought him Word that the Liver had no Head; and in a very short time after that famous Captain died.

Hither are to be reduced some other Ways of Divination, by things made use of at Sacrifices; as first, Πεσομαντεία, Divination by the Fire of the Sacrifice. Good Signs were such as these; If the Flames immediately took hold of and consum'd the Victim, seizing at once all the Parts of it; on which account they usually prepar'd τὰ φρύγανα, dry Sticks, which would easily take fire. Also if the Flame was bright, and pure, and without Noise or Smoke; if the Sparks tended upward in the Form of a Pyramid; if the Fire went not out till all was reduc'd to Ashes. Contrary Signs were, when it was kindled with difficulty, when the Flame was divided, when it did not immediately spread itself over all the Parts of the Victim, but, creeping along, consumed them by little and little; when, instead of ascending in a straight Line, it whirled round, turned sideways, or downwards, and was extinguish'd by Winds, Showers, or any other unlucky Accident; when it crackled more than ordinary, was black, casting forth Smoke, or Sparks, or died before all the Victim was consum'd. All these, and such like Omens, signified the Displeasure of the Gods. Some of these Signs Tiresias speaks of in *Sophocles*ⁿ, as very fatal and pernicious:

ἐκ τῶν θυμάτων
 Ηοαῖς ὄκ ἐκ ἔλαμπεν· ἀλλ' ἐπὶ σποδῶ
 Μυδῶσα κηκίς κηρίων ἐτίκετο,
 Κἄτυφε, κἀνέπλυε· καὶ μετάρσιοι
 Χολαὶ δεσπέεοντο, καὶ κατάρρεις
 Μηροὶ καλυπτοῖς ἐξέκειντο τιμηλῆς.

— At the Sacrifice

No sparkling Flames up from the Fire flew,
 But a black Smoke, with cloudy Vapours mixt, ⁿ Antigon. ver. 1122.

That roll'd about, and smother'd all the Place ;
Scatter'd abroad the mangl'd Entrails lay,
And Thighs defil'd without their wonted Fat.

E. D.

Sometimes, when the Entrails foretold nothing certain by Dissection, the Priest made Observations from them in the Fire. In order hereto, he took the Bladder, and binding the Neck of it with Wool (for which Reason Sophocles calls the Bladders μωλλαδέποις κώσεις) put it into the Fire, to observe in what Place it would break, and which Way it would dart the Urine °. Sometimes they took Pitch of the Torches, and threw it into the Fire ; whence if there arose but one entire Flame, it was taken for a good Omen. In matters of War, or Enmity, they took notice of the ἀκρα λαμπάε, or uppermost part in the Flames, and the Gall : πιχρὸν ἔχθρῶν, Enemies being bitter like Gall.

Καπνομαντεία, Divination by the Smoke of Sacrifices. in which they observ'd what Windings and Turnings it made, how high it ascended, and whether in a direct or oblique Line, or in Wreaths ; also how it smell'd, whether of the Flesh that was burned, or any thing else.

Λιβανομαντεία, Divination by Frankincense, which if it pretently caught Fire, and sent forth a grateful Odour, was esteem'd an happy Omen ; but if the Fire would not touch it, or any nasty Smell contrary to the Nature of Frankincense proceeded from it, it boded Ill.

Οινομαντεία, and Υδρομαντεία, Divination by Wine and by Water, when Conjectures were made from the Colour, Motion, Noise, and other Accidents of the Wine, of the Libations ; or the Water in which the Victims were washed, and some Parts of them boiled. Virgil hath made mention of them both in the Story of Dido :

*Vidit, thuricremis cum dona imponeret aris,
Horrendum dictu ! latices nigrescere sacros,
Fusaque in obscænum se vertere vina cruorem.*

Off'ring before the Altar, as she flood,
(Amazing Sight !) lo, into putrid Blood
The Wine is chang'd, the Water, clear before,
A sudden, muddy Blackness covers o're.

E. D.

Κεισομαντεία, and Αλευρομαντεία, Divinations by which Predictions were made from the Flour with which the Victim was besprinkled.

Hither also may be referr'd Ιχθυομαντεία, Divination by the Entrails of Fishes, for which Tiresias and Polydamas are said to have been famous : As also Ωοσκοπία, which made Predictions by Eggs, and several others.

Who was the first Inventor of this Divination is uncertain. By some it is attributed to Prometheus, the great Father of most Arts. Clemens of Alexandria ascribes it to the Hetrurians : And Tages, one of that Nation, whom they feign'd to have sprung out of a Furrow in the Tarquian Fields, was commonly thought by the Italians to have been the first who communicated this Divination to Mankind, as appears from Cicero^r. The same is mention'd by Lucan^s:

*Et fibris fit nulla fides, sed conditor artis
Finxerit ista Tages.* —————

It was certainly very ancient, and obtain'd so great Credit amongst the Grecians, that they would desist from the greatest and seemingly most advantageous Undertakings, and attempt things most hazardous and unlikely to be attain'd, if the Entrails of Victims dissuaded them from the former, or encouraged them to the latter. Whereof we have this remarkable Instance in Plutarch's Life of Aristides: " When Mardonius the Persian made an Assault upon the Grecians, Pausanias the Lacedæmonian, at that time General of all the Grecian Forces, offer'd Sacrifice, and, finding it not acceptable to the Gods, commanded the Lacedæmonians, laying down their Shields at their Feet, to abide quietly, and attend his Directions, making no Resistance to any of their Enemies. Then offering a second time (for if the first Victim afforded not auspicious Omens, it was usual to offer on, till they obtained what they desired) as the Horse charged, one of the Lacedæmonians was wounded: At this Time also Callicrates, who by report was the most comely proper Man in the Army, being shot with an Arrow, and upon the point of expiring, said, That he lamented not his Death (for he came from home to lay down his Life in the Defence of Greece) but that he had died without Action. The Cause was heard, and wonderful was the Forbearance of the Men; for they repelled not the Enemy that charged them, but expecting their Opportunity from the Gods, and their General, suffered themselves to be wounded and slain in their Rank; and so obstinate they continued in this Resolution, that tho' the Priests offer'd one Victim after another without any Success, and the Enemy still pressed upon them, they moved not a Foot, till the Sacrifices proved propitious, and the Soothsayers foretold the Victory.

Of Divination by Birds.

I COME in the next place to speak of Divination by Birds; the Invention of which is by some ascribed to Prometheus, or Melampus the Son of Amythaon and Dorippe. Pliny^r reports that Car, from whom Caria receiv'd its Name, was the first that made Predictions by Birds; and Orpheus by other Animals. Pausanias^u telleth us, That Parnassus, after whose Name the Mountain Parnassus was called, first observed the Flight of Birds. The same Clemens of Alexandria^x reports concerning the Phrygians. This Art was very much improved by Calchas, who, as Homer tells us, was οἰωνοπόλον δ' ἄριστος

Of Augurs far the best.

At length it arriv'd at such Perfection, and gained so much Credit in the World, that seldom any thing of moment was undertaken, either in Time of War or Peace, seldom any Honours conferred, any Magistrates created, without the Approbation of Birds: Nay, other Divinations were sometimes passed by unregarded, if not confirmed by them. At Lacedæmon, the King and Senate had always an Augur attending upon them, to advise with; and Cælius^d reports, that Kings themselves used to study the Art. The Birds, because they were continually flying about, were thought to observe and pry into Men's most secret Actions, and to be acquainted with all Accidents; whence that Verse of Aristophanes^e,

Οὐδείς εἶδε τὸν θεσαυρὸν τὸν ἐμὸν, πλὴν εἴ τις αἴ ὄρνις·

None, but perhaps some Bird, knows any thing
About my Treasure.—————

And the Scholiast quotes such another Saying out of him;

Οὐδείς με θεωρεῖ πλὴν ὁ παριπτάμενος ὄρνις·

None see me, but the Bird that flieth by.

There is a Proverb also much to the same Purpose; for when they thought themselves secure from the Knowledge of all Persons, they used to say, Οὐδείς εἶδε τί ὁμιλοῦσα, πλὴν γε εἴ τις ὄρνις· None is conscious to what I have been conversing about except perchance some Bird. Aristophanes^f hath introduced the Birds themselves, telling what religious Observance was paid them,

Ἐμὲν δ' ὑμῖν Ἀμμον, Δελφοί; Δεδῶν, Φαῖβος Ἀπέλλων, Ἐλθόντες γὰρ πρῶτον ἐπ' ὄρνις, ἔπει πρὸς ἅπαντα τρέπεσθε.

For we to you instead of Hammon are,
Instead of Delphi, and Dodona's Oak,
Instead of Phæbus; for our Oracles
You first consult, then prosecute Designs.

The Omens given by Birds were by the Greeks called ὄρνεις, ὄρνεοσκοπικῆ, αἰσιμα, οἰωνοί, οἰωνισμάτα, &c. And the Observers of them, ὄρνεοσκόποι, ὄρνιδουάσεις, ὄρνιδοσκόποι, οἰωνισαί, οἰωνοδίται, οἰωνοπόλοι, &c. But, afterwards, these Names were promiscuously used for almost all the Species of Artificial Divination; as Aruspicium and Augurium were among the Latins. The Scholiast of Aristophanes hath observed, that οἰωνες κελῦσι καὶ τὰ μὴ ὄρνεα they called Omens, which are not made by Birds, by the name of οἰωνοί. And the same Author affirms, that πᾶν σύμβολον ἐκ-φευκτικόν, ἢ προτρεπτικόν λέγεται ὄρνις: Every Omen, which either encourages to, or dissuades from any thing, was termed ὄρνις. Plato is of Opinion that οἰωνιστικὴ was originally a general Name, and written with an ὀ Micron, οἰωνιστικὴ, signifying any thing, δὲ ἔοικε τὰ μέλλοντα, by which we make Conjectures of what is to come; but now (saith Aristides) they write it with ὦ Mega τὸ ὦ σμυνῶτες, to give the better Grace to it.

^d Antiq. Lect. Lib. viii. cap. i.

^f Loc. citat.

The Grecian Augurs were not, as the Latin, clothed in Purple, or Scarlet, but in White, having a Crown of Gold upon their Heads when they made Observations, as * Alexander ab Alexandro informs us. They had also οἰωνιστήριον, i. e. a Place, or Seat appointed for that purpose, called sometimes by the general Names of Δῶκ⊕, and Δῶκ⊙, as in Sophocles's^b Antigone, where Tiresias speaks thus:

Εἰς γὰρ παλλαῖον Δῶκον ὀρνιθοσκοπεῖν
 Ἰζών, ἢν ἦν μοι παντὸς οἰωνῶν λιμὴν.

For sitting in my wonted hallow'd Place,
 Whither all Birds of Divination flock.

And the *Scholias*t upon that Place telleth us, this Seat was peculiarly named Δῶκ⊕, and that Tiresias had Power to assemble the Birds from all Quarters, when he had Occasion for them. They us'd also to carry with them writing Tables, as the *Scholias*t upon Euripides reports, in which they wrote the Names and Flights of the Birds, with other things belonging thereto, lest any Circumstance should slip out of their Memory.

The Omens that appeared towards the East were accounted fortunate by the Grecians, Romans, and all other Nations; because the great Principle of all Light and Heat, Motion and Life, diffuses its first Influences from that Part of the World. On the contrary, the Western Omens were unlucky, because the Sun declines in that Quarter.

The Grecian Augurs, when they made Observations, kept their Faces towards the North, the East being upon their Right-hand, and the West upon their Left: That they did so, appears from Homer, who brings in ⁱ Hector, telling Polydamas, that he regarded not the Birds,

Εἴτ' ἐπιδέξει ἴσασι πρὸς ἠῶ τ' ἡλιόν τε,
 Εἴτ' ἐπ' ἀμισρὰ τοί γε κατὰ ζέρον ἠέροντα.

Whether o'th' Right Hand, tow'rds the gilded East,
 Or on the Left, towards the dusky West,
 They take their Flight.

The Reason of this, as it is deliver'd by Plutarch from Plato and Aristotle, was, that ἀρχὴ τῆς κινήσεως, the Beginning of the Celestial Motions, was in the Oriental Parts of the World, and that therefore these were accounted δεξιὰ τῆ κόσμου, the right side of the World; and the

* Gen. Diet. xv. cap. x.

West, where the Motion terminates, ἀριστερά, the left. Hence the Signs that were presented to them on the Right-hand, were accounted fortunate; and those on the left unlucky. On the contrary, the Romans, making Observations with their Faces towards the South, had the East upon their Left-hand, and the West upon the Right: Of which there are innumerable Proofs, which, for Brévity's sake, I shall pass; by remitting such as desire farther Satisfaction, to Varro and other Latin Authors. For this Reason, whatever was fortunate, the Grecians called δεξιόν, the Romans, Sinistrum, on what Hand soever it appeared. And tho' the Roman Poets do sometimes call Things unlucky, Sinistra; yet then they speak Græco more: and so doth ^k Virgil, when he saith, Sæpe sinistra cavâ prædixit ab ilice cornix.

Oft has th' ill-boding Crow from hollow Oaks
These Miseries presag'd.————

On the contrary, Stattius, tho' the Business in hand concern'd the Grecians, speaks more Romano, when he saith in his Thebais,

Signa feras, lævumque tones.————

Hence it came to pass, that things aukward and foolish were called Sinistra or Læva, in which sense ^l Virgil has used this latter Word,

*Sæpe malum hoc nobis (si mens non læva fuisset)
De cælo tacitas memini prædicere quercus;*

That is, My Misfortunes were often presaged by the Oaks torn in pieces by Thunder, if I had but had Wit, or Fore-sight enough to have understood the Divine Prodigies. In ^m Sophocles the Word ἀριστερός has the same Signification,

Οὐποτε γὰρ φρονίδιν γ' ἐπ' ἀριστερά,
Παῖ Τηλαμῶνος, ἔβας————

He means, that if Ajax had been in his right Wits, he would never have committed Actions so foolish and ridiculous; and the old Scholiast upon that Place tells us in express Terms, that the Right-hand signified Prudence, and the Left Folly; ἀριστερά (saith he) οἱ παλαιοὶ τὰ μωρὰ ἐχάλον, δεξιὰ δὲ τὰ σοφειά.

Birds were fortunate, or unfortunate, either by their own Nature, or by the Place and Manner of their Appearance: for the same Birds at different Times have boded different and contrary Events. The unlucky Birds were called ἐξώλαιμοι, pernicious; ἀπιδύμοι, bated, or ungrateful; ἀνεύλοιοι, troublesome, ab a priv. and ἔχω cedo, q. non Sinistra; i. e. non sinentes, because they would not permit a Man to proceed in his Undertakings; so Sinistra (if we may believe Festus) is rather derived à sinendo, than à sinistrâ manu. For the same Reason they were also named κολυπηγὰι, and εἰρηπηγὰι, because they restrained Men from what they had design'd. Those that appear'd out of their wonted Place, or in any unlucky Place, were called ἄεθροι, and ἔξεθροι, which Words are peculiar to the Soothsayers, though they be sometimes applied to other Things that are displaced; as when Euripides saith, ἔξεθροι χθονός, i. e. Persons banished, and that had left their own Country; and ἔξεθεο φρενῶν, a Man distracted and out of his Wits. In Hippolytus ⁿ the same Phrase signifies a Thing done contrary to right Reason :

ἡκλήσισί με
Φόνοι παραλλάσσοντες ἔξεθροι φρενῶν.

On the contrary, lucky Birds are called αἰθίοι, αἰθίμοι, ἐναίσιμοι, ὄδοι, and συνέθροι. I shall give a brief Account of some of both sorts, and the Omens signified by them; only give me Leave first to add, that there were two sorts of ominous Birds: The τυνυπήρυγες, or Alites, whose Flight was observ'd by the Augurs: And the φθικαὶ, or Oscines, which gave Omens by their Voices and Singing.

First then, if a Flock of all Sorts of Birds came flying about any Man, it was an excellent Omen, and portended some extraordinary Felicity, or unexpected Success; such as Diodorus Siculus observes happened to Gordius, who, from a poor Country Farm, was exalted to a Kingdom.

The Eagle, if she appeared brisk, clapping her Wings, sporting about in the Air, and flying from the Right-hand to the Left, was one of the best Omens the Gods could give; as Niphus ^o telleth us out of Appion. King Priamus, designing to go to the Grecian Fleet to redeem Heſtor, begs of Jupiter, that he would give him Assurance of his Protection, by sending his beloved Bird, the Eagle,

Πέμφον δ' οἶανόν ταχὺν ἄγγελον, ὃς τε σοὶ αὐτῷ
Φίλατος οἶανόν, καὶ ἑκράτος ἐστὶ μέγιστον,
Δεῖδόν, ὄρα μὴ αὐτὸς ἐν ἐφθαλμοῖσι νοήσῃ,
Τῷ πίσυνος ἐπὶ γῆας ἴω Δαναῶν ταχυπάγων."

Command, great Jove, the Eagle your Delight,
And Queen of Birds, to take her lucky Flight.
Let her upon my Right-hand straight appear,
And move with noisy Flutt'rings thro' the Air:
This happy Sight some cheerful Hopes will give,
That from the Greeks my Son I shall receive.

Aristander, observing an Eagle to fly from Alexander's Camp to the Enemies, foretold, that Alexander should obtain the Victory. Observations also were made from the Manner of taking their Prey: For Instance, ^p when Telemachus was at Sparta in Search of Ulyſſes, an Eagle came flying upon his Right-hand, bearing in her Talons a tame Goose, which she had caught in her Roost: From which Omen Helena then foretold, that Ulyſſes would return, surprize all Penelope's

Courtiers in his House, and inflict upon them the Punishment they deserved. And Penelope is said to have made the same Conjecture, from an Eagle that seiz'd upon twenty Geese whilst they were feeding in her House. When an Eagle dragg'd a Fawn by the Feet, and cast it down upon Jupiter Panomphaus's Altar, the Grecians, tho' before quite disheartened, took such Courage, that they gave the Trojans a Signal Defeat. On the contrary, when Hector attempted to burn the Græcian Fleet, an Eagle appear'd towards the Left-hand, carrying in her Talons a Serpent, which made such Resistance, that she, not able to convey it to her Nest, was forc'd to let it fall; whereupon Polydamas presently foretold that Hector would be constrain'd to desist from his Enterprize. When Penelope's Suitors way-laid Telemachus, there appear'd an Eagle on the Left, with a Dove in her Talons; and Amphinomus concluded from that Omen, that their Design would not succeed. When two Eagles appear'd, tearing each other with their Talons, and hovering over the Assembly wherein the Suitors were: Haliherfes foretold that they should be all slain by Ulysses. Lastly, to mention but one Instance more, an Eagle which snatch'd a Javelin out of the Hand of a Soldier of Dionysius the Syracusan, and cast it into the Deep, portended the Downfal and Miseries that Tyrant was to suffer ⁹.

The Flight of Vultures was very much observ'd, because (as some say) they do but seldom appear, and their Nests are rarely or never found; wherefore a Sight so unusual was thought to portend something extraordinary: or, (according to Herodotus of Pontus) because Vultures feed only upon Carcasses, not meddling with living Creatures; and therefore he tells us, Hercules was always well pleas'd when a Vulture appear'd to him at the Undertaking of any Enterprize; because he esteem'd it the most just of all the Birds of Prey ^r. But Aristotle and Pliny reckon them among the unlucky Birds; and add, that they were usually seen two or three Days before any great Slaughter; and it was the common Opinion, that Vultures, Eagles, Kites, and other Birds of Prey, if they follow'd an Army, or continued for a considerable Time in any Place, were certain Signs of Death, and Bloodshed.

The Hawk is a ravenous Bird, and an unlucky Omen, portending Death (saith Niphus) if she appeared seizing of her Prey; but if the Prey slipped from her, or made its Escape, thereby was signified Deliverance from Dangers. The Buzzard, called in Greek, Τειορχνος, because he has three Stones, was accounted by Phæmonoe a very ominous Bird. The Falcon-hawk, in Greek Κίρκη, as Pliny ^s reports, was very lucky to People that were about Marriage, or any Money-business. This Bird was sacred to Apollo, as Homer ^r tells us; and, when Telemachus was solicitous in Mind about his Mother's Suitors, appear'd in this manner,

Ως ἄρα οἱ ἐπίοντι ἐπίπτατο θεῶν ὄρνις,

Κίρκη, Ἀπόλλωνος ταχὺς ἀγέλαος, ἐν δὲ πίδεσσιν

By which Theoclymenus foretold, that Telemachus should prevail over his Enemies.

Swallows flying about, or resting upon a Place, were an unlucky Omen. In Darius's Expedition against Scythia, the Appearance of them presaged the total Defeat of his Army by the Scythians. The same Birds sitting upon Pyrrhus's Tent, and Antony's Ship, are said to have signified the Overthrow of the Armies of both those Generals.

Owls were for the most part looked upon to be unlucky Birds, but at Athens were Omens of Victory and Success, being sacred to Minerva, the Protectress of that City ; and therefore the Proverb Γλαυξ ἵπταται, was usually apply'd to Persons, whose Undertakings met with Success. * Plutarch reports, that when Themistocles was consulting with the other Officers, upon the uppermost Deck of the Ship, and most of them opposed him, being unwilling to hazard a Battle, an Owl coming upon the Right-side of the Ship, and lighting upon the Mast, so animated them, that they unanimously concurred with him, and prepared themselves for the Fight. But in other places, as we are told by Ælian †, Owls were unlucky Omens, when they appeared to Men going about any serious Business : an Instance of which we have in King Pyrrhus, whose inglorious Death at Argos was portended by an Owl, which came and sat upon the top of his Spear, as he held it in his Hand. And for this Reason, when Diomedes and Ulysses went as Spies to the Trojan Camp, though it was Night, the most proper Time for Owls to appear in, yet † Homer reports that Minerva gave them a lucky Omen, by sending an εἰρωσίδης, or Hern,

Παλλὰς Ἀθηναίη—————

As they were marching on, a lucky Hern
Minerva sent.

Where Eustathius saith, that this Bird was a Token of Success to Men that lay in Ambush, or were engag'd in any such secret Designs. Yet Owls were not at all times esteem'd inauspicious, as appears from Hieron, at whose first Admission into Military Service, an Eagle came and sat upon upon his Shield, and an Owl upon his Spear ; by which was signified,

signified, that he should be Valiant in War, and Wise in Counsel, and at length arrive to the Dignity of a King. This Story you may find in Justin, at the End of his third Book.

The Dove in Homer is a lucky Bird. So also was the Swan, especially to Mariners, being an Omen of Fair Weather, for which we have a Reason in Æmilius, as he is cited by Niphus :

*Cygnus in auspiciis semper lætissimus ales :
Hunc optant Nautæ, quia nunquam mergit in undis.*

The Mariner, when tost by angry Seas,
Straight for a Swan, the luckiest Omen, prays ;
For she herself i'th' Waters ne'er doth drown.

Ravens are very much observ'd, being thought to receive a Power of portending future Events from Apollo, to whom they were ἱερεῖς καὶ ἀκόλουθοι Sacred and Companions *. When they appear'd about an Army, they were dangerous Omens : If they came croaking upon the Right-hand, it was a tolerable good Omen : If on the Left, a very bad one ; as also the Chattering of Magpies seems to have been. When Alexander entered into Babylon, and Cicero fled from Antony, their Deaths were foretold by the Noise of Ravens : and these Birds alone were thought to understand their own Predictions, because (as Pliny affirms †) the worst Omens were given by them, when they made a harsh sort of a Noise, rattling in their Throats, as if they were choak'd.

Cocks were also accounted prophetic, especially in Matters of War, for they were sacred to Mars, and therefore are called by Aristophanes Ἀρείου νεοττοῖ, and were usually offer'd in Sacrifice to him, and pictured with him. The Crowing of Cocks was an auspicious Omen, and presaged Themistocles's Victory over the Persians ; in Memory whereof he instituted an Annual Feast call'd Ἀλεκτρούων ἀγων, which was observ'd by fighting Cocks in the Theatre. And that signal Victory, wherein the Bæotians overthrew the Lacedæmonians, was foretold by the Crowing of Cocks some whole Nights before, which was interpreted to be an Omen of Success ; because the Cock, when he is overcome, sits silent and melancholy ; but, when he obtains the Victory, struts and crows, and as it were triumphs over his vanquish'd Enemy. On the contrary, if a Hen was heard to crow, they thought some dreadful Judgment was hanging over their Heads.

Thus I have given you a short Account of the principal Birds that were esteem'd ominous. There were several others, by which they made Predictions, and several other Ways of foretelling from those I have already mention'd ; but what I have said is, I think, sufficient ; and therefore shall not be much farther tedious to you. Only I must not forget to add, That some pretended to understand the Language of Birds, and thereby to be privy to the most secret Transactions ; such an one was the famous Magician Apollonius the Tyanean, of whom it is reported, that, as he was sitting in a Parlour with his Friends, there came a Sparrow, and chattered to a Flock of Birds that were before the Window ; Apollonius, having heard the Noise, said, She invited them to a Feast, to such a certain Place, where a Mule loaded with Corn, had let his Burden fall: The Company, desirous to know the truth of the Business rose up immediately, went to the Place, and found it as he had told them. Democritus also was a Pretender to this Art, and gave out, that he could teach others the Method of attaining it; which he did by telling them the Names of certain Birds, out of a Mixture of whose Blood a Serpent would proceed; which, being eaten, would, without any farther Trouble, inspire into them this Knowledge. It is also feign'd, that Melampus arrived at this Art by having his Ears licked by Dragons, Such another Story Eustathius relates of Helenus, and Cassandra, the Children of Priamus, the Trojan King, viz. That being left in Apollo's Temple, Serpents came to them, and, rounding themselves about their Ears, made them so quick of Hearing, that they could discover the Counsels and Designs of the Gods. I must add one thing more out of Apuleius, viz. That when any unlucky Night Birds, as Owls, Swallows, Bats, &c. got into a House; to avert the bad Omen, they took especial care to catch them, and hang them before their Doors, that so the Birds themselves might undergo, or atone for those Evils, which they had threatened to the Family.

Thus much for Birds. It will be convenient, in the next place, to speak something concerning the Predictions made by Insects, Beasts, and Signs in the Heavens. First then, Ants were made use of in Divination, as may appear from the Instance given in the last Chapter, where, I told you, Cimon's Death was presag'd by them. Another Instance we have in Midas, the Phrygian King; for when he was a Boy, and fast asleep, Ants came, and dropt Grains of Wheat into his Mouth; whereupon the Soothsayers being consulted, foretold, that he would be the richest Man in the World.

Bees were esteemed an Omen of future Eloquence, as appears from the Story of Plato; for as he lay in the Cradle, Bees are said to have come and sat upon his Lips; whereupon the Augurs foretold, that he should be famous for Sweetness of Language, and delightful Eloquence. And Pindar is said to have been exposed, and nourished by Bees with Honey instead of Milk. Other things also were foretold by them: But the Romans esteem'd them an unlucky and very dreadful Omen, as may be found in Plutarch's Life of Brutus. Before Pompey's Defeat, μλισσῶν ἐστμὸς ἐπὶ τοῖς ἑρμῶϊς ἐκάθισε: a swarm of Bees sat upon the Altar, as we are told by Appian.

There was a Locust green, and slow in Motion, call'd Μέντις, which was observ'd in Soothsaying, as Suidas taketh Notice. Toads were accounted lucky Omens. Snakes also, and Serpents were ominous; as appears by the Serpent, that in Homer's second Iliad devour'd eight young Sparrows with their Dam; which was by Calchas interpreted to signify, that the Siege of Troy should continue nine whole Years. Boars were unlucky Omens, boading an unhappy Event to all the Designs of Persons that met them. I shall mention but one more, viz. the Hare, a most timorous Animal; and therefore appearing in time of War, it signified Vanquishment and Running away. When Xerxes had prepared a vast Army to invade Greece, it happen'd that a Mare brought forth a Hare; which Prodigy was a Prefage of Xerxes's base and cowardly Flight, after his Fleet was destroy'd by Themistocles.

* Plinius Nat. Hist. lib. ix. cap. xlix.

* Lib. ii. Bell. Civil.

I come in the last place to Omens from the Heavens. I do not mean those by which Philosophers and Astrologers made their Predictions, but such as were usually observed by the common People: such were Comets, which were always thought to portend something dreadful.

Such also were Eclipses of the Sun or Moon, with which several Armies have been so terrified, that they durst not engage their Enemies, tho' upon never so great Advantages. Plutarch in his Treatise of Superstition reports, that Nicias the Athenian General, being surrounded on every side by his Enemies, was struck into such a Consternation by an Eclipse of the Moon, that he' commanded his Soldiers to lay down their Arms, and so, together with a numerous Army, tamely yielded up himself to the Slaughter. For the true Cause of them being unknown, they were imputed to the immediate Operation of the Gods, that were thought thereby to give notice of some signal and imminent Calamity; and so strongly were the Vulgar possess'd with this Opinion, that Anaxagoras brought himself into no small Danger, by pretending to assign the natural Reason for them.

Lightnings also were observed; and, if they appeared on the Right Hand, accounted good Omens; but if on the Left, unlucky, as Eustathius hath observ'd in his Comment upon the second Iliad; where Nestor tells the Grecians, earnestly desiring to return into their own Country, that Jupiter had made a Promise that they should take Troy, and confirm'd it by Lightning:

Ἀσφάπτων ἐπι δεξιῖ' ἰναίσιμα σημάτα φαίνων.

By ominous Lightning gave the lucky Sign.

Other Meteors also were observed by the Soothsayers, as the Ignis Lambens, which was an excellent Omen, presaging future Felicity; as appears from Servius Tullius, whose Promotion to the Kingdom of Rome was foretold by it. The Argonauts, in their Expedition to Colchos, were overtaken by a dangerous Tempest near the Sigean Promontory; whereupon Orpheus made Supplication to the Gods for their Deliverance; a little after there appear'd two lambent Flames about the Heads of Castor and Pollux, and upon this ensued a gentle Gale, the Storm ceasing, and the Sea becoming calm and still: This sudden Alteration begot in the Company a Belief, that the two Brethren had some Divine Power and Efficacy, by which they were able to still the Raging of the Sea; insomuch that it became a Custom for Mariners, whenever they were in any dangerous Storms, to invoke their Assistance. If the two Flames (which from this Story are call'd by the Names of the two Heroes) appear'd together, they were ever after esteem'd an excellent Omen, foreboding good Weather; and therefore Theocritus, in his Hymn upon the Dioscuri, praiseth them for delivering poor Seamen ready to be swallow'd up by the Deep:

Ἄλλ' ἔμπης ὑμεῖς τε κῆ ἐκ βυθῶ ἔλκετε νῆας
 Αὐτοῖσιν ναύταισιν ὀϊσμῶσι θανάσθαι.
 Αἴψα δ' ἀπολόγησθ' ἀνέμοι, λιπαρὰ δ' ἤ χαλᾶνα
 Ἀμπέλαγος, πέφιλαι δ' ὀϊσθραμον ἄλλυδις ἄλλαι,
 Ἐκ δ' ἄρτοι τ' ἐράνησαν, ὄνον τ' ἀνὰ μέσσον ἀμαυρᾶ
 Φάττη σμμαινοῖσα τὰ φρὸς πλῆον εὐδία πάντα.

And when the gaping Deep would fain devour
 The tatter'd Ship, you hinder't with your Power:
 The stormy Winds, that vex the troubl'd Seas,
 At your Command their roaring Blusters cease ;
 The pil'd-up Waves are still'd, and quiet lain,
 An even Calmness makes a watry Plain.
 The Clouds, that had before obscur'd the Sky,
 Vanish away, and quick dispersed fly.
 The Bears, and other lucky Stars appear,
 And bid the Seamen Safety not to fear.

E. D.

Horace speaketh to the same Purpose, calling these two Meteors Stellæ or Stars,

*Dicam ἔσ' Alciden, puerosque Ledæ ;
 Hunc equis, illum superare pugnis
 Nobilem ; quorum simul alba nautis
 Stella refulsit,
 Desluit saxis agitated humor,
 Concidunt venti, fugiuntque nubes,
 Et minax (quòd sic voluere) ponto

Alcides next my Muse must write,
 And Leda's Sons ; one fam'd for Horse,
 And one in close and handy Fight,
 Of haughty Brav'ry, and of noble Force :
 When both their Stars at once appear,
 The Winds are hush'd, they rage no more,
 (It is their Will) the Skies are clear,
 And Waves roll softly by the quiet Shore.

Mr Creech.

If one Flame appear'd single, it was call'd Helena, and was a very dangerous Omen, portending nothing but Storms and Shipwracks ; especially if it follow'd Castor and Pollux by the Heels, and as it were drovè them away. Tho' Euripides in his Orestes makes them all prosperous and desirable Signs, where speaking of Helena, he saith, Ζῶις γδ ἔσαν ζῆν νιν ἀθδίτον χρεῶν,

 Κάστω τε Πολυδύκῃ τ' ἐν αἰθέρι πτυχῆϊς
 Σύνθακος ἔσται ναυτίλοις σωτήριος.

^b Carm. lib. i.

For being sprung from Jove, she needs must be Immortal too ; and with her Brethren share
The heav'nly Regions, where her glorious Beams
Will shine alike, to help the Mariner.

E. D.

Earthquakes were unfortunate Omens. Hence Seneca, among other direful Prefages, mentions an Earthquake ^c :

*Lucus tremiscit, tota succusso solo
Nutavit aula, dubia quò pondus daret,
Ac fluctuanti similis.*—————

Earthquakes were commonly thought to be caus'd by Neptune, who is hence term'd ἐννοσίγαιος ^d and ἐννοσίχθων by the Poets ; and therefore it was usual to sing Pæans, and to offer Sacrifices on such Occasions, to avert his Anger. This we find to have been done by the Lacedæmonians in Xenophon ^e. A Gulf being open at Rome, Curtius leap'd into it to appease the angry Gods. And the same Occasion happening at Celæna, a City of Phrygia, King Midas cast many things of great Value, and at length his own Son into the Gulph, by the Command of an Oracle ^e.

The Winds also were thought to contain in them something prophetical, and were taken notice of in Soothsaying ; as appears from Statius ^f, when he saith,

————— *Ventis, aut alite visa,
Bellorum proferre diem.*—————

And, as the Birds or boding Winds presage, Defer the fatal Day of Battle.

Many others might be added, but I shall only mention one more, viz. the Thunder, the noblest and most observed of all the heavenly Omens. It was good, or bad, like other Signs, according to its different Position ; for on the Right Hand it was lucky, on the Left unfortunate. Thunder in a clear and serene Sky was a happy Sign, and given by Jupiter, in Homer ^g, as a Confirmation that he granted the Petitions made to him. The Poet's Words are these, where he speaks of Ulysses, who had pray'd to the Gods for some Sign to encourage him in his Enterprize against Penelope's Courtiers :

Ὡς ἔρατ' εὐχόμενος τῷ δ' ἔκλυς κεντήσα Ζεὺς, αὐτίκα δ' ἐβρόντησεν ἐπ' αἰθλῆντος Ὀλύμπου.
Ἵψέθεν ἐκ κρείων, γῆθησε δ' ἄϊος Ὀδυσσεύς.

Thus pray'd the Sire : And all-wise Jupiter
Forthwith, propitious to his earnest Prayer,
A Clap of well-presaging Thunder sent
From bright Olympus' crystal Firmament,
Which glads his Soul. —————

It was an unfortunate Omen to have any thing Thunder-struck. The Shepherd in Virgil^b relates, that all his Misfortunes were thus foretold :

*Sæpe malum hoc nobis, si mens non læva fuisset,
De cælo tactas memini prædicere quercus.*

There is a parallel Passage in Ovid's Letter to Livia :

*Jupiter ante dedit fati mala signa futuri,
Flammifera petiit cum tria templa manu.*

To avert unlucky Omens given by Thunder it was used to make a Libation of Wine, pouring it forth in Cups. And they stood in so much Fear of Lightning, that they adored it, as *Pliny*¹ observes. They endeavour'd to avert its malignant Influences, by hissing and whistling at it; which they call'd ωοππύζειν, as appears from Aristophanes^k, when he saith, κἄν ἀναστέλω, if I cast forth Lightning, ωοππύτῃσσι, they'll hiss; where the Scholiast observes, that it was usual ταῖς ἀστραπαῖς ωοππύζειν, to hiss at the Lightning. In Places which had suffer'd by Thunder Altars were erected, and Oblations made to avert the Anger of the Gods; and after that no Man adventur'd to touch or approach them. Hence Artemidorus^l observes, that by the Thunder obscure Places were made ἐξίστημα, remarkable, by reason of the Altars and Sacrifices which were there presented to the Gods; and that on the contrary, Places which had been frequented became ἐρημὰ καὶ ἀβῆτα, desert and solitary; ἐδεῖς γὰρ ἐν αὐτοῖς διατρίβειν ἔτι θελεῖ, because no Man would, after that Accident, stay there. At Rome, Places affected by Thunder were inclos'd by a publick Officer, and the Fragments of the Thunder-bolt, if any such could be found, were carefully bury'd, lest any Person should be polluted by touching them. And it was farther customary to atone for any thing which was Thunder-struck, by sacrificing a Sheep, which being call'd Bidens, the Thing affected by Thunder came to be term'd Bidental, as the old Scholiast observes from the following Passage of Perfius^m :

An quia non fibris ovium, Ergennaque jubente, Triste jaces lucis, evitandumque bidental?

Of Divination by Lots.

OF Lots there were four Sorts, viz. Political, Military, Luforious, and Divinatory: the three first do not at all concern my present Purpose, however treated of by some in this Place. Of the Prophetical there were diverse Sorts, two of which were most in use, viz. Σπυρομαντεία, and Κληρομαντεία.

^b Eclog. i. ver. 16.
^m Satir. ii. ver. 26.

^l Lib. xxviii. cap. ii.

^k Vespes.

Σημαντεία was a sort of Divination by Verses, wherein 'twas usual to take fatidical Verses, and, having wrote them upon little Pieces of Paper, to put them into a Vessel, and so draw them out, expecting to read their Fate in the first Draught. This was often practis'd upon the Sibylline Oracles, which were dispers'd up and down in Greece, Italy, and all the Roman Empire; whence there is frequent Mention in Authors of the Sortes Sibyllinæ. Sometimes they took a Poet, and, opening in one or more Places, accepted the first Verse they met with for a Prediction. This was also called Ραψωδομαντεία, from the Rhapsodies of Homer, and, as some are of Opinion, proceeded at the first from the Esteem which Poets had amongst the Ancients, by whom they were reputed Divine and Inspired Persons. But as Homer had of all the Poets the greatest Name, so also the Sortes Homericæ of all others were in the most Credit: Yet Euripides and other Poets were not wholly neglected. Virgil also and the Latin Poets were made use of in this Way, as appears as well from other Instances as that remarkable one of Severus in Lampridius, whose Promotion to the Roman Empire was foretold by opening at this Verse,

Tu regere imperio populos, Romane, memento.

Remember, Roman, with Imperial Sway
To rule the People. —————

The Christians also practis'd the like on the Bible, according to that of Nicephorus Gregoras ^a. Ανοίξεν ἔκρινε δὲν ἐν ψαλτικῷ περὶ λημὰ τῶν οἰκίων ἀπειῶν, i. e. He judg'd it necessary to dip into the Psalter, that there he might find a Support or Defence against the Distress he laboured under. And Heraclius is reported by Cedrenus to have asked Counsel of the New Testament, καὶ εὗρεν ἐπιβέβητα ἐν Ἀλβανίᾳ ὄχι χειμῶται, and to have been thereby persuaded to winter in Albania. And Saint Augustin himself, tho' he disallows this Practice in secular Affairs, yet seems to approve of it in spiritual Matters, as appears from his Epistle to Januarius ^b.

Κληρομαντεία was a sort of Divination, wherein they made Conjectures by throwing τὸ κλήρος, Lots; where you may observe, that Lots were call'd in the plural Number κλήροι, and by the Latins sortes; to distinguish them from κλήρος, and sors, which in the singular Number usually signified the Hint or Occasion given to Diviners to make their Conjectures by, as the *Scholias*t upon Euripides reports. These κλήροι were usually black and white Beans; amongst the Ancients little Clods of Earth; Pebbles also, Dice, or such like Things, distinguished by certain Characters: Hence this Divination was term'd by several Names, as Ἰσομαντεία, ἄσφαλαμαντεία, κωδομαντεία, πρωμαντεία, &c. They cast the Lots into a Vessel, and, having made Supplication to the Gods to direct them, drew them out, and according to the Characters conjectur'd what should happen to them. All Lots were sacred to Mercury, whom they thought to preside over this Divination; and therefore the Ancients, as Eusebius ^c observes, ἐνερμίας ἐνεκα, i. e. for Good Luck's Sake, and that Mercury might be propitious to them, used, with the rest of their Lots, to put in one which they call'd Ερμῆ κλήρον, Mercury's Lot, which was an Olive-Leaf, and was drawn out before the rest. Sometimes the Lots were not cast into Vessels, but upon Tables consecrated for that purpose. This Divination was either invented, or at least so much practis'd by the Thriæ, who were three Nymphs that nursed Apollo, that at length the Word Θείαι came to be a synonymous Term with κλήροι whence the Proverb,

Πολλοὶ Θρισόλοιοι, παῦροι δὲ τε μάντιες ἀνδρείοι

Crowds of your Lot-Diviners ev'ry-where,
But few true Prophets. —————

To this Species of Divination we may reduce Ραβδμαντεία, or Prophecy by Rods, mention'd also in the Holy Writings, wherein Hosea, amongst other abominable Wickednesses committed by the Israelites, reckons this as none of the smallest, Εν συμβόλοις ἐπιρώτων, καὶ ἐν ραβδοῖς αὐτῶ ἀπήγχελλον αὐτῶ, πνόμεαι πικρείας ἐπλανήθησθε, καὶ ἐξεπόρονθε ἀπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ αὐτῶν. Our Translation renders it thus: My People ask Counsel of their Stocks, and their Staff declareth unto them; for the Spirit of Whoredom hath caused them to err, and they have gone a whoring from under their God. This Divination, as it is described by St. Cyril of Alexandria and Theophylact, was thus perform'd: Having erected two Sticks, they murmur'd forth a certain Charm, and then according as the Sticks fell, backwards or forwards, towards the Right or Left, they gave Advice in any Affair. Not much different was Βελομαντεία, in which Divination was made by Arrows, shaken together in a Quiver. Others are of Opinion, that the Arrows were cast into the Air, and the Man was to steer his Course the same Way that the Arrow inclin'd in its Descent. This seems to be the Divination us'd by Nebuchadnezzar in Ezechiel, where he deliberates about invading the Israelites, and the Ammonites: The Words are these, as they are rendered by our Translators: Appoint a Way, that the Sword may come to Rabbah of the Ammonites, and to Juda in Jerusalem the defenced. For the King of Babylon stood at the Parting of the Way, at the Head of two Ways, to use Divination: he made his Arrow bright, (the Septuagint Translation speaks not of βέλϑ, but ραβδϑ) he consulted with Images, he looked into the Liver. At his Right-hand was his Divination for Jerusalem, to appoint Captains, to open the Mouth in the Slaughter, to lift up the Voice with Shouting, to appoint Battering-Rams against the Gates, to cast a Mount, and to build a Fort. But because the Prophet speaks of making his Arrows bright, some are of Opinion, that he divined by looking upon the Iron Heads of the Arrows, and observing the various Appearances in them; in the same manner, as some in our Days pretend to tell Fortunes, by looking upon their Nails, saith Clarius upon that Place. Another Method of Divination by Rods was us'd by the Scythians, and is described in Herodotus. From the Scythians it was derived, with some Alteration, to the Germans, and is described by Tacitus i. Others also you may read of in Strabo k, Athenæus l, and Ammianus Marcellinus m; but these and some others I shall pass by, as not pertinent to my present Design.

Another Way of Divination by Lots was used in Greece and Rome, in this manner: The Person that was desirous to learn his Fortune carried with him a certain Number of Lots, distinguish'd by several Characters or Inscriptions, and walking to and fro in the publick Ways, desired the first Boy that met him, to draw; and if that which came forth agreed with what he had conceiv'd in his Mind, it was taken for an infallible Prophecy. This Divination is by Plutarch, in his Treatise about Isis and Ofris, said to be derived from the Ægyptians, by whom the Actions and Words of Boys were carefully observed, as containing in them something Divine and Prophetical; and that for a Reason no less absurd than the Practice itself; all the Ground they had for it being only this, viz. That Isis, having wander'd up and down in a fruitless Search after Ofris, happen'd at last upon a Company of Boys at Play, and was by them inform'd about what she had so long sought for in vain. To this Custom of Divining by Boys, as some think, Tibullus n alludes, when he saith,

*Illa sacras pueri sortes ter sustulit, illi
Rettulit è triviis omnia certa puer.*

Thrice in the Streets the sacred Lots she threw,
And thence the Boy did certain Omens shew.

But I am rather of Opinion, that the Poet speaks of a different Kind of Lots, which was this: In the Market, High-ways, and other Places of Concourse, it was usual for a Boy, or a Man, whom the Greeks call'd Αγίστης, to stand with a little Tablet call'd in Greek πίναξ ἀγιστικῆς, or ἀγιστικὴ σάνις, upon which were written certain fatidical Verses, which, according as the Dice light upon them, told the Consultants what Fortune they were to expect. Sometimes, instead of Tablets, they had Pots or Urns, into which the Lots or fatidical Verses were thrown, and thence drawn by the Boys; and I am the rather inclined to think the Poet's Words to be understood in this Sense, because he saith, the Woman herself that had a mind to be instructed what was to befall her, took up the Lots; which can never be meant of the Boy's drawing Lots out of the Woman's Hand. Artemidorus, in his Preface, speaks of τῶ ἐν ἀγορᾷ μάντεω, i. e. Diviners in the Market-Place; and the Sortes viales were very common at Rome: The Circus was thronged with those, and a great many other Diviners, which the poor silly Women used to consult, as Juvenal o witnesseth: His Words are these:

*Si mediocris erit, spatium lustrabit utrumque
Metarum, & sortes ducet: frontemque, manumque
Præbebit vati crebrum poppysma roganti.
Divitibus responsa dabit Phryx augur, & inde*

Quæ nudis longum ostendit cervicibus aurum,

An saga videnti nubat caupone relicto.*

The middle sort, who have not much to spare,
Into the crowded Circus straight repair,
And from the cheaper Lots their Fortunes hear.
Or else to cunning Chiromancers go,
Who clap the pretty Palm, and thence their Fortunes know.
But the rich Matron, who has more to give,
Her Answers from the Brachman will receive.
Skill'd in the Globe and Sphere, he gravely stands,
And with his Compass measures Seas and Lands.
The poorest of the Sex have still an Itch
To know their Fortunes; equal to the Rich :
The Dairy-maid enquires if she may take
The trusty Taylor, and the Cook forsake.

Whereby it appears, that Lots had very small Credit in Juvenal's Days, being consulted only by the meaner Sort, and such as were not able to be at the Charge of more reputable Divination. Didymus tells us, this was brought to pass by Jupiter, who, being desirous that Apollo should preside in chief over Divination, brought Lots, which are said to have been invented by Minerva, into Disrepute.

C H A P. XVII.

Of Divination by ominous Words and Things.

ANOTHER sort of Divination there was, very different from all those I have hitherto spoken of, which foretold things to come, not by certain Accidents and casual Occurrences, that were thought to contain in them Presages of Good or Evil. Of these there were three Sorts : The first of Things Internal, by which I mean those that affected the Persons themselves. The second, of Things External, that only appeared to Men, but did not make any Impression upon them. The third were Ominous Words. Of these in their Order.

First, Of those Omens that Men receiv'd from themselves, which are distinguish'd into four Kinds ; 1. Marks upon the Body, as ελαια, Spots like Oil. Secondly, sudden Perturbations seizing upon the Mind ; such were the Panici Terrores, Panic Fears, which were sudden Consternations that seized upon Men without any visible Cause, and therefore were imputed to the Operation of Dæmons, especially Pan, upon Men's Fancies. Of these there is frequent Mention in History ; as when Brennus the Gallick General had been defeated by the Greeks, the Night following he and the Remainder of his Troops were seized with such Terrors and Distractions, that, ignorant of what they they were doing, they fell to wounding and killing one another; till they were all utterly destroy'd. Such another Fright gave the Athenians a great Advantage against the Persians, insomuch that Pan had a Statue erected for that piece of Service; as appears from one of Simonides's Epigrams,

Τὸν τραγόνην ἐμὲ Πᾶνα, τὸν κατὰ Μήδων,
Τὸν μετ' Ἀθωκίων εἰσάτο Μιλτιάδης.

Grateful Miltiades rais'd this Monument,
That Me Arcadian Pan doth represent;
Because I aided him, and warlike Greece
Against the powerful Medes.—————

The Reason why these Terrors were attributed to Pan was, because, when Osiris was bound by Typho, Pan and the Satyrs appearing cast him into a Fright. Or, because he affrighted the Giants that waged War against Jupiter. There is also a third Reason assigned by Mythologists, which will be explain'd in the following Book. In these Terrors, whereof there was either no apparent Cause, or at least none answerable to the Greatness of the sudden Consternation, it was a good Remedy to do something quite contrary to what the Danger would have required, had it been such as Men vainly imagin'd. Thus Alexander caused his Soldiers to disarm themselves, when they were on a sudden in a great Fear of they knew not what.

All sudden and extraordinary Emotions and Perturbations, in Body or Mind, were look'd upon as evil Omens; such was that of Penelope's Courtiers described by Homer, and said to have been caused by Miserva, their implacable Enemy;

————— μνηστῆρες ὃ Πάλλας Ἀθήνα
Ἀσπίσον γέλον ἄρασι, παρέπλαγγεν ὃ νόημα.
Οἱ δ' ἴδον γναθμοῖσι γελῶν ἀλλοτρίοισιν
Αἰμοφόρικτα δὲ δὴ κρέα ἔσθιον. ὅσσοι δ' ἄρα σφίον
Δακρύουσι πύμπηλαντο. γόνν δ' αὐτοῦ θυμῆς.

The Courtiers straight offended Pallas seiz'd
With profuse Laughter, not to be appeas'd,
And raving frantick Thoughts; they now appear O'erwhelm'd with Laughter, not what first they were:
Their Eyes with briny Tears o'erflow'd, their Food,
Amazing Sight! seem'd chang'd to putrid Blood.
Nothing their anxious Thoughts doth entertain,
But lamentable Grief.—————

An Augur then present was affrighted at this dreadful Omen, and presently broke out into this Exclamation,

Α δειρὸν τι κακὸν ἴδεο παρῆντι; ———

Ah wretched Men! what Fate is this you bear?

^a Lib. iii. cap. ix. pag. 84.

^b Odyss. l. v. 345.

The third sort of internal Omens were the Παλμοί, or Παλμικά οίονισματα, so call'd ἀπὸ τῆ πάλλειν, from Palpitating. Such were the Palpitations of the Heart, the Eye, or any of the Muscles, called in Latin Saltationes, and Βόμβη, or a Ringing in the Ears; which in the Right Ear was a lucky Omen; so also was the Palpitation of the Right Eye, as Theocritus telleth us,

Ἀλλέται ὀφθαλμός μου ὁ δεξιός ———

My Right-Eye twinkles. ———

^c Niphus hath enumerated all the Parts of the Body, with all the Omens to be gathered from the Palpitations of each of them; whom you may consult at leisure. Melampus, the famous Fortune-teller, dedicated a Book upon this Subject to Ptolomy Philadelphus: Another to the same Purpose was compos'd by Pofidonius, as Suidas reports; the Title of which was Παλμικὸν οἰώνισμα.

The fourth sort of internal Omens were the Πταρμοί, or Sneezings, which were so superstitiously observ'd, that Divine Worship was thought due to them; tho' some say this Adoration was only an Expiation of the Omen: Others are of Opinion, as ^d Casaubon observes, that Sneezing was a Disease, or at least a Symptom of some Infirmity; and therefore when any Man sneez'd, it was usual to say, Ζῆδι, May you live; or, Ζεῦ σῶσον, G O D blefs you. To this Custom Ammian alludes in an Epigram upon one who had a long Nose, which he saith was at so great distance from his Ears, that he could not hear himself sneeze,

Οὐδὲ λέγει, Ζεῦ σῶσον, ὅταν πταρῆ, εἰ γὰρ ἀκείνῃ
Τῆς ῥινός, πολὺ γὰρ τῆς ἀκοῆς ἀπέχει.

His long-beak'd Snout at such a distance lies
From his dull Ears, that he ne'er hears it sneeze;
And therefore never does he say, G O D blefs.

Where you may observe, That it was not only usual for Persons that stood by to cry, Ζεῦ σῶσον, but also for Men when themselves sneezed. However it be, it is certain, that Sneezing was accounted sacred, as appears from ^e Athenæus, who proves that the Head was esteemed holy, because it was customary to swear by it, and adore as holy the Sneezes that proceeded from it: And Aristotle tells us in express Terms ^f, That Sneezing was accounted a Deity, Τὸν Πταρμὸν θεὸν ἠγόμεθα. Casaubon has also proved the same out of ^g Xenophon; who reports, that the Soldiers with one accord worshiped it as a God. But it is scarce to be supposed, they could be so ignorant, as to think every Act of Sneezing a Deity; nor do Aristotle's words necessarily imply they did; for no more need be understood by them, than that there was a God of Sneezing, called Πταρμὸς and Xenophon may be expounded the same way, viz. That, when the Soldiers heard a Sneeze, they worshiped the God, i. e. the God of Sneezing: Or, it may be, no more is meant, than that they worshiped God perhaps in the usual Form of Ζεῦ σῶσον.

or by casting up some other short Ejaculation to any of the Gods, to avert the Omen.

However, it is certain, that great regard was given to Sneezing, inso-much that if a Man sneezed at certain Times, or on any certain side, it was enough to persuade them to, or discourage them from any Business of the greatest Moment. When Themistocles was offering Sacrifice, it happen'd, that three beautiful Captives were brought to him, and at the same time the Fire burn'd clear and bright, and a Sneeze happen'd on the Right-hand: Hereupon Euphrantides the Soothsayer, embracing him, predicted the memorable Victory, which was afterwards obtain'd by him ^h. Such a Sneeze happening, whilst Xenophon was making a Speech, was thought a sufficient Reason to constitute him General. And Socrates himself, though a great Despisers of Heathen Superstitions, judg'd it not unreasonable to make a Sneeze serve as an Admonition from the Dæmon, which always tended him. And that the Observation of Sneezing was very ancient appears from the Virgins in Theocritus ⁱ, who thus congratulate Menelaus upon his Marriage with Helena :

Ολβία γὰ μὲρ ἀγαθός τις ἐπέπταρον ἔρχομένῳ σοί
Εἰς Σπάρταν' ———

There is also mention of this Custom in Homer, who has introduced Penelope rejoicing at a Sneeze of her Son Telemachus ^k :

Οὐχ ὀρίας ὃ μοι υἱὸς ἐπέπταρον ; ———

Sneezing was not always a lucky Omen, but varied according to the alteration of Circumstances: τῶν παρορῶν οἱ μὲν εἰσὶν ἀνελίμμοι ; οἱ δὲ βλαβεροί. Some Sneezes are profitable, others prejudicial, according to the Scholiast upon the following Passage of Theocritus, where he makes the Sneezing of the Cupids to have been an unfortunate Omen to a certain Lover ^l :

Σιμηΐδα μὲν ἔρωτις ἐπέπταρον. ———

When Xenophon was persuading his Soldiers to encounter the Enemy, a Sneeze was accounted so dangerous an Omen, that they were forced to appoint publick Prayers to expiate it. If any Person sneezed, ἀπὸ μέσων νυκτῶν ἀχρεῦς μεσῆς ἡμέρας, between Midnight and the following Noontide, it was fortunate: But ἀπὸ μεσῆς ἡμέρας ἀχρεῦς μεσῶν νυκτῶν, from Noontide till Midnight, it was unfortunate: The Reasons of which difference Aristotle has endeavour'd to account for ^m. If a Man sneezed at the Table, while they were taking away; or if another happen'd to sneeze upon his Left-hand, it was unlucky; if on the Right-hand, fortunate. If in the undertaking any Business, two, or four Sneezes happen'd, 'twas a lucky Omen, and gave Encouragement to proceed; if more than four, the Omen was neither good nor bad; if one, or three, it was unlucky, and dehorted them from proceeding in what they had designed. If two Men were deliberating about any Business, and both of them chanced to sneeze together, it was a prosperous Omen, as Niphas relates in his Book of Auguries, where he has enumerated a great many other Circumstances in Sneezing, and the Omens thought to be given by them.

I come in the next place to speak something concerning the Omens which appear'd to Men, but were not contain'd in their own Bodies; of which there were several sorts: As first, The Beginnings of Things were look'd upon to contain something ominous; as Ovid has observed °,

Rerum principiis omnia inesse solent;
Ad primam vocem timidus advertimus aures,
Et primum visam consulit Augur avem.

A sudden and unusual Splendor in any House, or other place, was a very fortunate Prefage, as, on the contrary, Darkness was an Omen of Infelicity; the former being thought to accompany the Celestial Gods, whereas Darkness intimated the Presence of some of the Infernal Deities, which was thought to be commonly pernicious. Thus Telemachus in Homer describes a Prodigy appearing before the Victory, which Ulysses obtain'd against the Courtiers of his Wife Penelope,

Ω πάτερ, ἢ μέγα θαῦμα τόδ' ὀφθαλμοῖσιν ὄρωμαι,
 Ἐμπης μοι τοῦχοι μεγάρων, καλαί τε μεσόδμοι,
 Εἰδάνται τε δοκοί, κ' κίονες ὑψὸς ἔχοντες,
 Φαίνοντ' ὀφθαλμοῖς ὡσαὶ πύρεσ ἀθρομένοιο.
 Ἡ μάλα τις Θεὸς ἔνδον, εἰ ἔρανον εὐρὴν ἔχουσι*.

It was thought a direful Prefage, when any thing unusual befel the Temples, Altars, or Statues of the Gods. Such a one was that which Pausanias ^a relates concerning the brazen Statue of Diana, which παρήκε τὴν ἀσπίδα, let the Shield fall out of her Hand. Before the Lacedæmonians were vanquish'd at Leuctra, the two Golden Stars, consecrated by them at Delphi to Castor and Pollux, fell down, and could never be found again ^r. Hither must also be reduc'd the sweating, or falling down of Images, the Doors of Temples opening of themselves, and other Accidents whereof no account could be assign'd.

To this place likewise do belong all monstrous and frightful Births, sudden and unusual Deluges, the unexpected withering and decaying, or flourishing of Trees or Fruits, the Noise of Beasts, or any thing happening to Men, or other Creatures, contrary to the common Course of Nature, the Inversion of which was thought a certain Argument of the Divine Displeasure. Many of these are contain'd together in the following Passage of Virgil ^s:

Tempore quanquam illo tellus quoque, & æquora ponti,
Obscœnique canes importunæque volucres
Signa dabant. Quoties Cyclosum effervere in agros
Vidimus undantem ruptis fornacibus Ætnam,

Hither also are to be referr'd Ενόδια σύμβολα, Omens offering themselves in the Way, of which Polis and Hippocrates (not the Physician) are said to have written Books.

Such as these were, the meeting of an Eunuch, a Black, an Ape, a Bitch with Whelps, a Vixen with Cubs ; a Snake lying so in the Way, as to part the Company ; a Hare crossing the Way. A Woman working at her Spindle, or carrying it uncovered, was thought to be very prejudicial to any Design, and to blast whatever Hopes they had conceiv'd, especially about the Fruits of the Ground. A Weezle crossing the Way, was a sufficient Reason to defer a publick Assembly for that Day ; it was called γαλή, and Artemidorus gives the Reason, why its running by was so much taken Notice of ; viz. Because it is ισόληθο to δίαν ; that is, the Letters in each word signify the same Number, viz. 42. All these were δυσάντησα, δυσσιώνισα, and ἀπτερόπαια διαμαλία, i. e. unlucky and abominable Sight.

Another sort of external Omens were those that happen'd at Home, and the Divination that observ'd them was call'd Τὸ ῥήκοσκοπικόν, concerning which Xenocrates is said to have wrote a Treatise. Such as these were, the coming of a black Dog, a Mouse eating a Bag of Salt, the appearing of a Snake or Weezle upon the House-top. This sort of Divining by Beasts is reported by Suidas to have been invented by Telegonus. Such also were the throwing down of Salt, the spilling of Water, Honey, or Wine, taking the Wine away while any Person was drinking, a sudden Silence, and ten thousand other Accidents. In putting on their Clothes, the Right-side was served first ; and therefore, if a Servant gave his Master the left Shoe first, it was no small Fault. This Omen was particularly observ'd by Augustus Caesar, as we are told by Suetonius ; and Pliny reports, that on a certain Day wherein that Emperor had like to have been destroy'd in a Mutiny of some of his Soldiers, his left Shoe was put on before his Right.

* Augusto cap. xcii.

• Nat. Hist. lib. vii. cap. vii.

It was a direful Omen, when the Crown fell from any Man's Head: On which Account it is mention'd among other unfortunate Prefages in Seneca's Thyestes:

————— Regium capiti decus
Bis terque lapsum est.

Hither also may be referred the various Actions, which were thought to contain good or bad Fortune. For Instance, At Feasts it was accounted lucky to crown the Cup with a Garland. This we find done in Virgil^w:

Tum pater Anchises magnum cratera corona
Induit, implevitque mero.—————

And again in the same Poet^x:

Crateras magnos statuunt, & vina coronant.

This Practice was taken from Homer's Heroes, who used to drink out of Cups that were ἐπι εὐρεσι οὐραίοι the Reason of which (saith Eustathius, out of Athenæus) was this, viz. Because a Garland represents a Circle, which is the most capacious and complete of all Figures. It was usual also to carry home the Fragments left at Sacrifices, for good Luck's sake, as hath been observ'd in another Place; and these were call'd ὑπιερισί, as contributing to the preservation of Health^y, &c. Thus much concerning ominous Actions and Accidents, whereof I have only mention'd the most remarkable; for it would be an endless Undertaking to enumerate all of them, every Day's Reading being able to furnish almost infinite Numbers.

In the last Place I come to ominous Words, which, as they were good or bad, were believed to presage accordingly. Such Words were call'd ὄρται, κληρόνες, or εἴματα, ἀπὸ τῆς ὀρέας, as the Latin Omen is so call'd, q. Oremen, quia fit ab ore; i. e. because it proceeds from the Mouth, saith Festus: They may be interpreted Voices, for Tully hath call'd them by the Names of Voces^z. The Pythagoreans (saith he) used to observe the Voices of Men as well as of the Gods. Hence, as the same Author there observes, the old Romans before the beginning of any Action us'd this Preface, Quod bonum, faustum, felix fortunatumque sit: Wishing that their Enterprize might succeed well, happily, prosperously and fortunately. In Divine Service, he adds, that Proclamation was made, ut faverent linguis, that all there present might govern their Tongues. In bidding Festivals and Holidays, the People were commanded Litibus & jurgiis abstinere, to beware of Brawls and Quarrels. At publick Lustrations, the Persons who brought the Victims were required to have Bona nomina, fortunate Names. The same, he there tells us, was also observ'd by the Consuls in the choice of the first Soldier. This sort of Divination was most in use at Smyrna (as Pausanias reports) where they had κληρόνων ἱερὸν, a Temple in which Answers were return'd this way; and Apollo Spodius gave Oracles in Thebes, ^z Lib. i. Divinat.

after the same manner, as hath been already observed: But the first Invention of it is attributed to Ceres by Hesychius. Serapion in Clemens of Alexandria relates, that the Delphian Sibyl was endued with a Power of divining after her Death, and that the gross Parts of her Body being converted first into Earth, and then chang'd into Herbs, communicated the same Faculty to the Entrails of Beasts, which fed on them, whence proceeded the way of divining by Entrails; but that her finer Parts, mixing with the Air, presag'd future Events by these κληδόνες, ominous Voices, concerning which we are now treating.

Words that boded Ill were call'd κακαὶ ὄτραι, or δυσσημίαι and he that spoke them was said βλασημίειν, φθίζεσθαι ελασημίαν, as Euripides terms it; where he speaks of certain ominous Words let fall by a Servant at a Feast, as one of the Company was going to drink,

Βλασημίαν τις οἰκτιρᾶν ἐφθίζετο.

Unlucky Words one of the Servants spoke.

Plautus calleth it obscenare, or as some read obscæware; for scæva signifieth Luck, either good or bad; and the Words Horace calleth Male ominata Verba,

————— male ominatis

Parcite verbis.

Ill-boding Words forbear to name.

Such Words as these they were always careful to avoid; insomuch that instead of δεσμοτήριον, i. e. a Prison, they put often οἴκημα, i. e. an House, μέλι instead of ὄζυϑ, γλυκεῖα, instead of χολή, ὄχετος for βέσσοϑ, χαλλίας for αἰθικῶ, φιλατῆς for κλέπτης, *ἄγ*ϑ for *μῦσ*ϑ, κοινός for *δήμι*ϑ, Σεμναὶ θεαὶ or Ευμνίδες for Εριννύες. Which way of speaking chiefly obtain'd at Athens^b. In time of Divine Worship, as I have observ'd before, nothing was more strictly commanded, than that they should εὐφημεῖν, or avoid all ominous Expressions; which, if spoken by a Friend or near Relation, they accounted them so much the worse. Mr. Dryden hath excellently expressed this Custom in his Oedipus, where, after that Hero has been thundering most dreadful Imprecations upon the Murderers of Laius, Jocasta is introduced speaking thus,

Jocasta. At your Devotions? Heaven succeed your Wishes;
And bring th' effect of these your pious Pray'rs
On You, on Me, on All.

Priest. Avert this Omen, Heaven!

Oedipus. O fatal Sound! Unfortunate Jocasta!
What hast thou said? an ill Hour hast thou chosen
For these fore-boding Words; why, we were cursing:

Jocasta. Then may that Curse fall only where you laid it.

Oedipus. Speak no more!
For all thou say'st is ominous: We are cursing.
And that dire Imprecation hast thou fasten'd
On Thebes, on Thee, and Me, and All of us.

^a Strom. i, p. 304.

^b Plutarchus Solone, Heiladius apud Photium Bibliothec. p. 74.

Jocasta. *Are then my Blessings turn'd into a Curse?
O unkind Oedipus! My former Lord
Thought Me his Blessing! be thou like my Laïus.*

Oedipus. *What yet again! the third time hast thou curs'd Me:
This Imprecation was for Laïus's Death,
And thou hast wiss'd me like Him.* Mr. Dryden.

Which Verses I have here transcrib'd, because they fully represent the ancient Custom of catching ominous Expressions. There are other remarkable Examples in Cicero.

Some Words and Proper Names imported Success, answerably to their natural Signification: Leotychides, being desir'd by a Samian to wage War against the Persians, enquir'd his Name; the Samian reply'd, that it was ἡγεστράτης, i. e. the Leader of an Army. Then Leotychides answer'd, ἡγεστράτης δέχομαι τὸν οἶον, I embrace the Omen of Hegestratus; δέχομαι οἶον, amongst the Greeks importing the same with arripere Omen among the Latins, which signifies the accepting of an Omen, and applying it to the Business in hand: For it was thought to lie very much in the Power of the Hearer, whether he would receive the Omen or not. Ostentorum vires in eorum erant potestate quibus ostendebantur, saith Pliny: The Force and Efficacy of Omens depended upon the Persons to whom they appear'd. For if the Omen was immediately taken by the Hearer, or struck upon his Imagination, it was efficacious; but if neglected, or not taken notice of, it was of no Force. Hence it is observed, that Julius Cæsar; who paid no Deference to those Predictions, was never deterr'd by them from any Undertaking, whereas Augustus frequently desisted from his Designs on this Account. Virgil introduces Aeneas catching Ascanius's Words from his Mouth; for the Harpyes, and Anchises also, having foretold that the Trojans should be forc'd to gnaw their very Tables for want of other Provisions, f *Sed non ante datam cingetis mœnibus Urbem,

Quam vos dira fames, nostræque injuria cædis,
Ambesas subigat malis absumere mensas.*

With Walls the City shall not bulwark'd be,
'Ere Famine shall revenge our Injury;
Sad Famine, when the once luxurious Lord,
Instead of Food, shall gnaw his sapless Board.

H. H.

After this they landed in Italy; and happening to dine upon the Grass, instead of Tables or Trenchers, which their present Circumstances did not afford, they laid their Meat upon pieces of Bread, which afterwards they eat; whereupon g Heus! etiam mensas consumimus, inquit Iulus.

Aeneas presently caught the Omen, as the Poet subjoins :

—————ea vox audita laborum
Prima tulit finem ; primaque loquentis ab ore
Eripuit pater, ac stupefactus numine preffit.

The lucky Sound no sooner reach'd their Ears,
 But straight they quite dismiss'd their former Cares ;
 His good old Sire with Admiration struck,
 The boding Sentence, when yet falling, took,
 And often roll'd it in his silent Breast.

H. H.

This Custom of catching Omens was very ancient, and deriv'd from the Eastern Countries : That it was practis'd by the Jews is by some inferr'd from the Story of Jonathan, the Son of King Saul, who, going to encounter a Philistine Garrison, thus spoke to his Armour-bearer ^b : If they say unto us, Tarry until we come unto you ; then we will stand still in our Place, and will not go up unto them. But if they say thus, Come up unto us ; then we will go up : for the Lord hath deliver'd them into our Hand, and this shall be a Sign unto us.

For good Luck's sake, whenever they apply'd themselves to any serious Business, they began with such a Preface as this, Θεός, Θεός, or Εὖ πεισομεν, or Ἐσαί μὲν εἶναι τὴν τύχην, like to Persius's Hoc bene fit ; and that Saying of the Romans, Quod bonum, felix, fortunatumque fit. And all their Works and Speeches were begun in the Name of some God ; whence Aratus,

Εκ Διὸς ἀρχώμεσθα—————

Let us with Jove begin.

Which Theocritus has borrow'd from him in his seventeenth Eclogue, and Virgil in his Third. *Xenophon*ⁱ gives the Reason of this Practice, viz. That Things undertaken in the Name of the Gods were like to have the most prosperous Events.

It will not be improper to add in this Place, that certain Times also were ominous, some Days being accounted fortunate, and Causes of Success ; others unfortunate, and Causes of the Mis carriage of Things undertaken upon them, as Hesiod in his Days observes :

Ἄλλοτε μητρὸν πάλαι ἡμέρα, ἄλλοτε μήτηρ.

Some Days, like Step-Dames, adverse prove,
 Thwart our Intentions, cross what'er we love ;
 Others more fortunate and lucky shine,
 And, as a tender Mother, bless what we design.

ⁱ Lib. de Ration. rediv.

Some Days were proper for one Business, others for another, and some for none at all, as that Author relates in the foremention'd Poem; where he runs through all the Days of the Month, declaring the Virtue and Efficacy of them. Thus to observe Days was term'd αἰσθητικῶς τῶν ἡμέρας. This Practice was common in other Nations, and particularly at Rome. Augustus Cæsar never went abroad upon the Day following the Nundinæ, nor began any serious Undertaking on the Nonæ; and this he did on no other Account, as he affirm'd in one of his Letters to Tiberius, than to avoid δυσφορίαν Ομινίς, the unlucky Omen, which attended Things begun on those Days, as we find in Suetonius^k. And it was a general Opinion among the Romans, the next Days after the Nonæ, Idus, or Kalendæ, were unfortunate, as appears both from the ancient Grammarians, and from Livy, Ovid, and Plutarch. The like Observation of Days was practis'd by many Christians, when they had lately been converted from Heathenism, and hath been remark'd by St. Ambrose in his Comment on that Passage of St. Paul, where he reproves the Galatians for observing Days, and Months, and Times, and Years^l.

The Way to avert an Omen was either to throw a Stone at the Thing, or to kill it out-right, if it was an ominous Animal, that so the Evil portended by it might fall upon its own Head: If it was an unlucky Speech, to retort it upon the Speaker with an εἰς κεφαλὴν σοῦ, Tibi in caput redeat, i. e. Let it fall upon thy own Head: Which perhaps is an Expression borrow'd from the ἰεροσκόποι, who, when they espy'd any thing in the Victim that seem'd to portend any Misfortune to themselves or their Country, used to pray, that it might εἰς κεφαλὴν παντὸς τρέπεσθαι, be turned upon the Victim's Head. The like Expressions are sometimes made use of in Holy Scripture, as in the fifteenth Verse of Obadiab's Prophecy, Τὸ ἀναπαύσασθαι σε ἀναπαύσασθαι εἰς κεφαλὴν σοῦ: Or, as our English Translators have render'd it, Thy Reward shall return upon thine own Head. And again, in the third Chapter of Kings^m: ἔκλυε τὸ κεφάλαιόν σου κακίαν σου εἰς κεφαλὴν σου, in English thus: And the Lord hath returned thy Wickedness upon thine own Head. Herodotusⁿ reports, that it was an Egyptian Custom, from which it's probable the Grecians derived theirs: "They curse (saith he) the Head of the Victim in this manner, that if any Misfortune impended over themselves, or the Country of Egypt, it might be turned upon that Head." Instead of these Imprecations, sometimes they used to say, εἰς ἀγαθόν μοι, or Μὴ γένοιτο, Dii meliora, i. e. God forbid. It was customary to spit three times into their Bosoms at the sight of a Madman, or one troubled with an Epilepsy; of which Custom Theocritus hath taken Notice^o:

_____ τρίς εἰς ἑὸν ἔπτουσι κόλπον.

Into his Bosom thrice he spit.

This they did in Defiance, as it were, of the Omen; for Spitting was a Sign of the greatest Contempt and Averfation: Whence ἄπειθ, i. e.

to spit, is put for χαταφρονεῖν, ἐν ἕδρῃ λογιζεῖν, i. e. to contemn, as the Scholiast of Sophocles observes upon these Words in Antigone P :

Ἀλλὰ πύσας ὡςτὶ θυσιβῆν.

Spit on him as an Enemy.

Sometimes they pray'd, that the ominous Thing might in ultimas terras deportari, be carry'd away to the farthest Part of the World ; or in mare deferri, be cast into the Sea. This last was done to certain monstrous Births, particularly Hermaphrodites, which were accounted Prodigia. Hence that Saying of Tibullus, Prodigia indomitis merge sub æquoribus.

Sometimes the Thing was burned with ligna infelicia, that is, such Sort of Wood as was in tutela inferum Deorum, avertentiumque, sacred to the Gods of Hell, and those which averted evil Omens ; being chiefly Thorns, and such other Trees which were fit for no other Use than to be burn'd. Sometimes the Prodigy, when burnt, was cast into the Water, and particularly into the Sea, if it was not too far distant. The several Circumstances of this Custom Theocritus has thus described^r, where he speaks of the Serpents which assaulted Hercules in his Cradle :

Ἀλλὰ, γύναι, πῦρ μὲν τοι ὑπὸ σποδῷ ἔτυκον ἔσω,
 Κάλικαυα δ' ἀσπαλάθω ξύλ' ἑτοιμάσατ' ἢ παλλίερω,
 Ἡ βάρτω, ἢ ἀνέμῳ διεβδρημένον αἶον ἀχερδοίῳ
 Καίῃ δ' τὰ δ' ἀγρήσιν ἔπι χίλῃσι δρᾶκοντα
 Νυκτὶ μέσα, ἕκα παῖδα κακῆν τῆν ἠΐδιλον αὐτοῖ.
 Ἡρὶ δ' συλλέξασα κύνιν πυρὸς ἀμριπέλων τις,

 Ραγάδας ἐς πέτρας, ὑπὲρ ἔριον' ἀψ' ἢ νέουθαι
 Ἀσρέπιος, καθαρῶ δ' πυράσατε δῶμα θείο.

Lastly, upon the meeting an unlucky Omen, they often desisted from what they were doing, and began it afresh, as appears from Euripides, in whom a Person, upon the hearing of an ominous Word, immediately threw his Cup upon the Ground, and call'd for another :

Οἰανὸν ἔθετο, κακέλευσ' ἄλλον νέον
 Κρατῆρα πληρῶν' τὰς δ' πρὶν σπονδάς Θεῶ
 Δίδωσι γαίᾳ, πασί τ' ἐκσπένθειν λέγει

Of Magick and Incantations.

BESIDES the Methods of foretelling future Events already mentioned, and that Divination which is commonly called Physical, because it makes Predictions without any Supernatural Assistance, by the mere Knowledge of Physical or Natural Causes; there are several others, most of which are comprehended under the Names of Μαγία, and Επισημαί, i. e. Magick and Incantations; between which, though some make a nice Distinction, yet they bear a near Relation to each other, and therefore I shall treat of them conjunctly in this Place. And though some of the Species of these Divinations might be invented in later Ages, and never practis'd in old Greece, whose Customs alone it is my chief Design to describe, not meddling with those Innovations that were introduced in later Times, after the Grecians were subjected to the Roman Empire; yet since it is very difficult to determine exactly of all, which were truly ancient, and which were truly modern; since also there is frequent Mention of them in Writers of the middle Ages, especially those that lived towards the Declination of the Roman Greatness, I shall beg the Reader's Leave to give a brief Account of the most remarkable of them: For to enumerate all would be an endless as well as unreasonable Undertaking; and a great many of them (such as those wherein the Incubi and Succubi were concern'd) contain in them too much of Profaneness and Horror to be entertained by any civilized Ear.

Magical Arts are said by the Grecians to have been invented in Persia, where at the first they were had in great Honour and Reputation; for the Μάγοι were those that apply'd themselves to the Study of Philosophy, and the strict Search after the most curious Works and Mysteries of Nature: They were usually chosen to superintend the divine Worship, and all religious Rites and Ceremonies; they continually attended upon the Kings, to advise them in all Affairs of Moment, and were preferred to the highest Honours, and Places of the greatest Trust. But afterwards the Case was alter'd; for when they left off the Contemplation of Nature, and betook themselves to the Invocation of Dæmons and other mean Arts, their former Credit and Esteem was very much diminished.

This Art is said to have been introduced among the Grecians by Oetbanes, who came into Greece with Xerxes, and dispersed the Rudiments of it where-ever he had Opportunity. It was afterwards much improved, and brought to some Perfection by Democritus, who is said to have learned it out of the Writings of certain Phœnicians. But I shall not trouble you with any more Stories concerning its Original or Progress, it being more pertinent to my Design to give you a short Account of the various Species thereof.

First then, Νεκρομαντία was a Divination, in which Answers were given by deceased Persons. It was sometimes performed by the Magical Use of a Bone, or Vein of a dead Body; especially by the Thessalians:

ans: Or by pouring warm Blood into a Carcass, as it were to renew Life in it, as Eripho doth in Lucian; or by some other Inchantments, to restore dead Men to Life; with which the Poet was very well acquainted, when he said,

———— Dum vocem defuncto in corpore quærit,
Protinus adstrictus caluit cruor, atraque fovit
Vulnera. —————

While he seeks Answers from the lifeless Load,
 The congeal'd Gore grows warm with reeking Blood,
 And cheers each ghastly Wound. ———

Sometimes they used to raise the Ghost of deceased Persons by various Invocations and Ceremonies: Ulysses, in the Ninth Book of Homer's Odyssey, having sacrificed black Sheep in a Ditch, and pour'd forth certain Libations, invites the Ghosts, particularly that of Tiresias, to drink of the Blood, after which they become willing to answer his Questions. The like is done by Tiresias in Statius, by Æson in Valerius Flaccus, by Nero in Pliny. Gregory Nazianzen speaks also ἡ ἀνατεμνομένων παρθένων τε καὶ παιδῶν ἐπιψυχασθῆναι of Virgins and Boys slaughtered at the Evocation of Ghosts. The most usual Ceremonies used on these Occasions are thus describ'd by Seneca, who has introduced Tiresias consulting the Ghosts in a dark and gloomy Grove ²:

Hinc ut sacerdos intulit senior gradum,
Haud est moratus: præstitit noctem locus.
Tunc fossa tellus, & super rapti rogis faciuntur ignes. Ipse funesto integit
Vates amiciu corpus, & frondem quatit:
Lugubris imos palla perfundit pedes:
Squalente cultu mæstus ingreditur senex:
Mortifera canam taxus adstringit comam.
Nigro bidentes vellere, atque atræ boves
Retro trahuntur: flamma prædatur dapes,
Vinumque trepidat igne ferali pecus.
Vocat inde manes, Teque qui manes regis,
Et obsidentem claustra lethalis lacus:
Carmenque magicum volvit, & rapido minax
Decantat ore quicquid aut placat leues,
Aut cogit umbras. Irrigat sanguis focos,
Solidasque pecudes urit, & multo secum
Saturat cruore; libat & niveum insuper
Lactis liquorem, fundit & Bacchum manu
Læva, canitque rursus, & terram intuens
Graviore manes voce, & attonita ciet.
Latravit Hecates turba, &c.

Some other Ceremonies also were practised, which differ'd not much from those used in Parentations, of which I shall give a more particular Account in the following Books.

This Divination, if the Dead appear'd only in airy Forms, like Shades, was call'd Σμιομαντεία and Ψυχομαντεία. It might, I suppose, be perform'd in any Place; but some Places were appropriated to this Use, and call'd Νεκρομαντεία, several of which are mentioned by the ancient Poets; but two of them were most remarkable: The first in Theſprotia, where Orpheus is said to have restored to Life his Wife Eurydice; and Periander, the Tyrant of Corinth, was affrighted by the Apparition of his Wife Melissa, whom he had murder'd: The other in Campania, at the Lake Avernus, celebrated by Homer and Virgil, in their Stories of Ulyſſes and Æneas.

Υδρομαντεία, or Divination by Water, sometimes call'd Πηρομαντεία, when it was done by Fountain-Water: In this they observed the various Impressions, Changes, Fluxes, Reflexes, Swellings, Diminutions, Colours, Images, &c. in the Water. Sometimes they dipp'd a Looking-glass into the Water, when they desir'd to know what would become of a sick Person; for, as he look'd well or ill in the Glass, accordingly they presum'd of his future Condition. Sometimes they fill'd a Bowl with Water, and let down into it a Ring equally poised on each side, and hanging by a Thread tied to one of their Fingers; then in a Form of Prayer requested of the Gods to declare, or confirm the Question in dispute; whereupon, if the Thing propos'd was true, the Ring of its own accord would strike against the Side of the Bowl a set Number of Times. Sometimes they threw three Stones into the Water, and observed the Turns they made in sinking. Instead of Water, sometimes they made use of Oil and Wine, and then the Liquor was call'd χίτλα: and instead of Stones, they sometimes used Wedges of Gold or Silver. This Divination was sometimes performed in a Basin, and thence call'd

Δεξανομαντεία, which also was sometimes practis'd in a different manner, thus: They distinguish'd the Stones or Wedges with certain Characters, and then, having invoked the Dæmon in a set Form, propos'd the Question they had a mind to be satisfied about; to which an Answer was return'd in a small Voice, not unlike an Hiss, proceeding out of the Water. The Scholiast upon Lycophron is of Opinion, that this Method of Divination was as ancient as the Trojan War, and practis'd by Ulyſſes; which he thinks gave Occasion for all the Poetical Fictions of his Descent into the infernal Regions, to consult Tiresias's Ghost &c. Sometimes Divination by Water was performed with a Looking-Glass, and call'd

Καπηρομαντεία. Sometimes also Glasses were used, and the Images of what should happen represented without Water. Sometimes it was perform'd in a Vessel of Water, the middle Part of which was call'd ζάσπυ, and thence the Divination was termed

Γαστρομαντεία, the Manner of which was thus: They filled certain round Glasses with fair Water, about which they placed light Torches; then invoc'd a Dæmon, praying in a low, murmuring Voice, and propos'd the Question to be solv'd: A chaste and unpolluted Boy, or a Woman big with Child, was appointed to observe, with greatest Care and Exactness, all the Alterations in the Glasses; at the same time desiring, beseeching, and also commanding an Answer, which at length the Dæmon used to return by Images in the Glasses, which, by Reflection from the Water, represented what should come to pass.

^b Herodotus Terpsichore.

^c Alexandr. v. 813. p. 84. Edit. nostræ.

Κρυσταλλομαντεία was perform'd by polished and enchanted Crystals, in which future Events were signified by certain Marks and Figures.

Δακτυλομαντεία was a Divination by Rings enchanted, or made according to some Position of the Celestial Bodies. A Ring of this sort Gyges the King of Lydia had, which when he turned to the Palm of his Hand, he became invisible to others, but could see every body; and by the Help of this he enjoy'd his Mistress the Queen, and slew his Master Candaules, whom afterward he succeeded. Some ascribe the Invention of this Divination to Helena the Wife of Menelaus, who in Photius's Bibliotheca is said to have found out τὴ δια δακτύλων κλήσιν, the Lots which consisted of Rings, and with these to have conquer'd Alexander. But this is rather to be understood concerning the Game of Lots, than any sort of Divination.

Ουρομαντεία was perform'd by the Nails of an unpolluted Boy, cover'd with Oil and Soot, which they turn'd to the Sun, the Reflexion of whose Rays was believed to represent by certain Images the Things they had a mind to be satisfied about.

Αεραμαντεία foretold future Events from certain Spectres or other Appearances in the Air: and sometimes thus; They folded their Heads in a Napkin, and, having placed a Bowl full of Water in the open Air, propos'd their Question in a small whispering Voice; at which time if the Water boiled or fermented, they thought what they had spoken was approved of and confirmed.

Λιθμαντεία was sometimes perform'd by a precious Stone, call'd Siderites, which they wash'd in Spring-Water in the Night by Candle-light: the Person that consulted it was to be purify'd from all manner of Pollution, and to have his Face cover'd: this done, he repeated divers Prayers and placed certain Characters in an appointed Order; and then the Stone moved of itself, and in a soft, gentle Murmur, or (as some say) in a Voice like that of a Child, return'd an Answer. By a Stone of this nature Helena is reported to have foretold the Destruction of Troy.

Theocritus^d has given us an Account of two sorts of Divination practis'd by a Country Swain, to try what Share he had in his Mistress's Affections: His Words are these:

Εἶπον πρᾶν, ὅκα μιν μεμνηθῆναι εἰ φίλος με,
 Οὐδὲ τὸ τῆλεφίλον ποτιμάζατο τὸ πλατᾶγμα,
 Ἀλλ' αὐτως ἀπαλῶ ποτὶ παχὺ ἐξεμαρᾶνθη.
 Εἶπε κὲ Ἀγροῖῳ ταλαβία, κοσμινόμαντις,
 Ἄ πρᾶν ποιολογέσσα, παραϊβάτις, ἐκεῖ ἐγὼ μὲν
 Τιν ἔλος ἔγκριμαι. τὸ δ' ἔμ' λόγον εἰδένά ποιν.

All this I knew, when I design'd to prove Whether I shou'd be happy in my Love;

^d Idyll. iii. v. 28.

I prefs'd the Long-live, but in vain did prefs,
 It gave no lucky Sound of good Success:
 To Agrio too I made the same Demand,
 A cunning Woman she, I cross'd her Hand;
 She turn'd the Sieve and Sheers, and told me true,
 That I shou'd love, but not be lov'd by you.

Mr. Creech.

Where the Shepherd complains he had found his Suit was rejected these two Ways: First, by the Herb Telephilum, which being crush'd in his Hand, or upon his Arm, returned no Sound; for it was usual to strike that, or some other Herb against their Arms, and if they crackled in breaking, Good; if not, it was unlucky Omen. Not much unlike this was the Divination by Laurel-leaves, which they threw into the Fire, and observ'd how they crackled in burning; from which Noise, some say, Laurel was call'd δάρυρ, q. δὰ φωνή. The other Way of Divining, mention'd by Theocritus, was by a Sieve, which an old Gypsie used in telling silly People their Fortunes. This they call'd Κοσκινομαντεία; it was generally practis'd to discover Thieves, or others suspected of any Crime, in this manner: They tied a Thread to the Sieve, by which it was upheld, or else placed a Pair of Sheers, which they held up by two Fingers; then prayed to the Gods to direct and assist them; after that, they repeated the Names of the Persons under Suspicion, and he, at whose Name the Sieve whirled round, or moved, was thought to have committed the Fact. Another sort of Divination was commonly practis'd upon the same Account, which was called Αξινομαντεία, from Αξίον, i. e. an Ax or Hatchet, which they fixed so exactly upon a round Stake, that neither End might out-poise, or weigh down the other; then they pray'd, and repeated the Names of those they suspected; and the Person, at whose Name the Hatchet made any the least Motion, was found guilty.

Κεφαλονομαντεία was by the Head of an Ass (as the Name imports) which they broil'd on Coals; and, after having mutter'd a few Prayers, they repeated the Persons Names as before; or the Crime, in case one was only suspected; at which, if the Jaws made any Motion, and the Teeth chatter'd against one another, they thought the Villain sufficiently discover'd.

Αλεξσομαντεία was a very mysterious Divination, in which they made use of a Cock in discovering secret and unknown Transactions, or future Events. It was effected after this Manner: Having wrote in the Dust the twenty-four Letters of the Alphabet, and laid a Grain of Wheat or Barley upon every one of them, a Cock magically prepared was let loose amongst them, and those Letters, out of which he picked the Corns, being join'd together, were thought to declare whatever they were desirous to be certified of. This Divination the famous Magician Jamblichus, Proclus's Master, is said to have made use of with a Design to find out the Person who was to succeed Valens Caesar in the Empire: but the Cock picking up only four of the Grain, viz. those that lay upon the Letters Δ. ε. ο. Ϛ, left uncertain, whether Theodosius, Theodotus, Theodorus, or Theodestes, was the Person design'd by the Fates to be Emperor. However, Valens being informed of the Matter, Matter, was enraged at it, put to Death several Persons for no other Reason, than that their Names began with those Letters; and made a diligent Search after the Magicians themselves; whereupon Jamblichus, to prevent the Emperor's Cruelty, ended his Life by a Draught of Poison.

Σιδερομαντεία was perform'd by red-hot Iron, upon which they laid an odd Number of Straws, and observed what Figures, Bendings, Sparklings, &c. they made in burning.

Μολυβδομαντεία was by observing the Motions, Figures, &c. of melted Lead. The three following Methods of Divination are by some reckon'd amongst the various Sorts of Incantations.

Τεφρομαντεία, or Divination by Ashes; which was perform'd in this Manner: They wrote the Things they had a mind to be resolv'd about in Ashes upon a Plank, or any such thing; this they expos'd to the open Air, where it was to continue for some Time; and those Letters that remain'd whole, and no ways defac'd by the Winds or other Accidents, were thought to contain in them a Solution of the Question.

Βοτανουμαντεία, or Divination by Herbs, especially Ελελίτσακη, or Salvia; or by Fig-leaves, and thence call'd Συκομαντεία, was practis'd thus: The Person thus consulted wrote their own Names, and their Questions upon Leaves, which they expos'd to the Wind, and as many of the Letters as remain'd in their own Places were taken up, and being joined together contained an Answer to the Question.

Κεριμαντεία, or Divination by Wax, which they melted over a Vessel of Water, letting it drop withi'n three definite Spaces, and observed the Figure, Situation, Distance, and Concretion of the Drops. Besides these, there were infinite other Sorts of Divination; as Χειρομαντεία, Φυσιγνωμία, which was practis'd in Socrates's Time, Ονοματομαντεία, Αειθωμαντεία, Γεωμαντεία, Δουχνημαντεία, mention'd with several others, by Aratus in his Prognosticks, and Pliny in his Natural History; but these I shall pass by, and only trouble you with one more, which is so remarkable, that it must not be omitted, viz.

Φαρμακεία, which was usually performed by certain medicated and enchanted Compositions of Herbs, Minerals, &c. which they call'd φαίμακα. By these strange and wonderful things were effected: Some of them, taken inwardly, caus'd Blindness, Madness, Love, &c. such were the Medicaments by which Circe transform'd Ulysses's Soldiers. Others infected by a Touch; such was the Garment which Medea sent to Creüsa. Others spread their Venom afar off, and operated upon Persons at a great Distance. There were also Φαρμακασωτήρια, which were Amulets against the former; such were the Herb Moly, which preserv'd Ulysses from Circe's Inchantments; the Laurel, the Swallow-tree, the Rhamn or Christ-thorn, Flea-bane, the Jasper-stone, and innumerable others mentioned by Albertus Magnus, and Orpheus in his Book De Lapillis; likewise certain Rings, which Aristophanes, in his Plutus, calls Δαστυλίνης φαρμακίτης. For this Art the Thessalians were most famous of all the Grecians; Democritus and Pythagoras are also said to have been skilled in it. Every Story is full of the prodigious

Operations wrought by it, some of which I shall give you from the Inchantress's own Mouth in Ovid :

—————*Cum volui, ripis mirantibus, amnes
 In fontes rediere suos ; concussaue sisto.
 Stantia concutio cantu freta ; nubila pello
 Nubilaque induco : ventos abigoque vocoque ;
 Vipereas rumpo verbis & carmine fauces :
 Vivaque saxa, sua convulsaue robora terrâ,
 Et sylvas moveo ; jubeoque tremiscere montes ;
 Te quoque, Luna, trabo.*—————

Whene'er I please, the wond'rous Banks behold
 Their Waters backwards to the Fountains roll'd ;
 The Seas, if rough, and in vast Ridges rise,
 As tho' their angry Waves wou'd dash the Skies,
 I give the Word, and they no longer roam,
 But break, and glide away in silent Foam.
 If plain, and calm, the Ocean's Surface lie,
 Smooth, like some well-spread azure Canopy,
 I rouse the unruly Waves with hid'ous Roar,
 And bid their swelling Heaps insult the Shore ;
 Then straight the watry Mountains heave their Heads,
 O'erleap their Bounds, and drown th' enamell'd Meads,
 Clouds me obey, and at my Summons sent,
 Infest, or quit th' ethereal Firmament.
 Winds too on downy Wings attend my Will.
 And, as I bid, or boist'rous are, or still.
 I burst the Vipers by my magick Verse,
 And from their Basis rend both Rocks and Trees.
 The thronging Woods I move ; at my Command
 The Moon shrinks back, and Mountains trembling stand.

Where you may observe the last Verse, wherein she boasts, that she was able to draw the Moon from her Orb ; for the Ancients really be-liev'd, that Incantations had Power to charm the Moon from Heaven ;
 according to that Saying of Virgil :

Carmina vel cælo possunt deducere Lunam [†].

The Moon my Verses from her Orb can draw.

And whenever the Moon was eclipsed, they thought it was done by the Power of Magick ; for which Reason it was usual to beat Drums and Kettles, to sound Trumpets and Haut-boys, to drown, if it was possible, the Voices of the Magicians, that their Charms might not reach her. The Moon also was thought to preside over this Art, and therefore was invoked together with Hecate, to whom the Invention of it was ascribed ; whence Medea in Euripides saith, that, of all the Gods, she paid the greatest Veneration to Hecate [‡] :

Some of the Rites used at the Invocation of this Goddess are given us by ^h Apollonius in these Words ;

When lab'ring Night has half her Journey run,
Wash'd in some purling Stream, repair alone,
Clad in a dusky Robe, and dig a Pit,
Round let it be, and raise a Pile in it.
Then kill a tender Ewe ; when this is done,
O'th' new-rai'd Pile, unquarter'd lay her on.
And if you Perfes' Daughter wou'd appease,
Pour a Libation, which the painful Bees
Have first wrought up within their waxen Hives:
Next pray the Goddess wou'd propitious prove,
Then backwards from the flaming Altar move ;
But let no Yells of Dogs, or seeming Noise
Of Feet behind, turn back thy steady Eyes,
And frustrate all thy former Sacrifice.

To this Sort of Divination are to be referred Charms and Amulets against Poison, Venom, and Diseases. Suidas reports, that the curing of Distempers by Sacrifices, and the Repetition of certain Words, was practis'd ever since the Time of Minos King of Crete ; and ⁱ Homer relates, how Butolycus's Sons stanch'd Ulysses's Blood, flowing from a Wound he received in hunting a wild Boar, by a Charm ;

^h Argon. iii. v. 1028.

ⁱ Odyss. i. v. 456.

With nicest Care, the skilful Artists bound
 The brave, divine Ulysses's ghastly Wound ;
 And th' Incantations stanch'd the gushing Blood.

The same is observ'd by Pliny ^k, who adds farther, that Sic Theophrastus ischidiacos sanari, Cato prodidit luxatis membris carmen auxiliari, Marcus Varro podagris : It was reported by Theophrastus, that the Hip-Gout was cured in the same Manner ; by Cato, that a Charm would relieve any Member out of Joint ; and by Marcus Varro, that it would cure the Gout in the Feet. Chiron in Pindar is said to use the same Remedy in some Distempers, but not in all ^l :

————— λίσαις ἄλλων ἀλ'
 λούων ἀχέων
 Ἐξαχεν. τὸς μὲν μαλακαῖς
 Ἐπκοιδαῖς ἀμύμωνων.

And it is probable, that the Use of these Incantations gave Occasion to the Invention of that Fable, whereby Orpheus is said to have recover'd his Wife Eurydice from the Dead by the Force of his Musick ; for we are told by Pausanias ^m, that Orpheus was skill'd in the Art of Magick ; and by Euripides ⁿ, that he publish'd a Book concerning the Remedies of Distempers :

Κραῖσσον ἔδεν ἀνάγκας
 Εὐφρον' ἔδ'ε τι φάρμακον
 Ὀρχήσσαις ἐν Κανίσι τὰς
 Ὀρεῖα κατήγαγε
 Γίγρυς.—————

Hither are also to be reduc'd enchanted Girdles, and other Things worn about Men's Bodies, to excite Love or any other Passion, in those with whom they conversed : Such was the Κεῖδον in Homer's Iliads, given by Venus to Juno, for the Allurement of Jupiter to her Love, as Eusebathius observes, upon the afore-mention'd Verses in the Odysses. But, concerning these Practices, I shall have Occasion to add something more, when I come to treat of Love-Affairs ^o.

Lastly, To this Place doth also belong βασκανία, Fascination, so call'd, as Grammarians inform us, παρὰ τὸ φάσσει κτείνεν, from killing with the Eyes ; whence also the Latin Word fascinus is said to have been deriv'd. For it was believ'd that some malignant Influence darted from the Eyes of envious and angry Persons, infected the ambient Air, and by that Means penetrated and corrupted the Bodies of Animals and other things ^p. The younger Animals, as being most tender, were thought most easily to receive this sort of Impression. Hence the Shepherd in Virgil ^q complains that his Lambs suffer'd by Fascination :

Nescio quis teneros oculis mihi fascinat agnos.

Plutarch mentions ^r certain Men, whose Eyes were destructive to Infants and Children, by Reason of the weak and tender Constitution of their Bodies, but had not so much Power over Men, whose Bodies were confirm'd and compacted by Age. Yet he adds in the same Place, that the Thebans about Pontus could not only destroy Infants, but Men of ripe Age. Pliny affirms the same concerning the Triballi and Illyrians, whose Eyes had commonly two Pupillæ, which were thought extremely conducive to Fascination ; whence the same Author observes farther from Cicero, scæminas omnes ubiq; nocere, quæ duplices pupillas habent, that in all Places all the Women, who had double Eye-balls, had Power to hurt others on whom they would fix their Eyes ^s. These Influences were thought chiefly to proceed from those, whose Spirits were moved by the Passions of Anger and Envy. Hence the fore-mention'd Triballi and Illyrians are reported to have injur'd those whom they look'd upon iratis oculis, with angry Eyes ^t. And such Men as were bless'd with any singular and uncommon Happiness, were chiefly liable to Fascination : Hence the following Saying of Horace concerning his Country-seat ^u :

*Non isthic obliquo oculo mihi commoda quisquam
Limat.*—————

For the same Reason, they who had been extravagantly commended by others, and more especially by themselves, were in Danger of having their Prosperity blasted ^x. And the Goddess Nemesis was thought to have some Concern in this Matter. Pliny speaks of whole Families in Africa, quarum laudatione intereant probata, ardescant arbores, emorian-tur infantes : Whose Praises were destructive to Things which they commended, dry'd up Trees, and kill'd Infants. Hence, when the Romans praised any Thing or Person, they used to add præfiscini, or præfiscine dixerim, to avert any Fascination which might ensue ; or to intimate that their Commendations were sincerely spoken, and not with any malicious Design to prejudice what they commended. Plautus represents the same Custom at Athens ^y :

*Præfiscini hoc nunc dixerim : nemo etiam me accusavit
Merito meo : neq; me Athenis est alter hodie quisquam, Cui credi recte æque putent.*—————

Some crown'd those, whom they thought to be in Danger, with Garlands of the Herb Baccharis, which had a sovereign Power against Fascinations : Hence the following Verses in Virgil ^z :

*Aut si ultra placitum laudarit, bacchare frontem

Some made use of certain Bracelets or Necklaces compos'd of Shells, Corals and precious Stones, and others apply'd certain Herbs prepar'd with Incantations and Magical Rites to this Use: These also being esteem'd excellent Remedies according to Gratius:

*Nam sic affectus oculiq; venena maligni
Vicit tutela pax impetrata Deorum.*

Sometimes the Figure of a Man's Privities was hung about the Necks of Children ^m, which was also thought a very powerful Amulet against Fascinations, and for that Reason was call'd Fascinum. These or the like Representations, were thought to avert the Eyes of malicious Persons διὰ τὴν ἀτυπῖαν τῆς ὄψεως, by the Oddness of the Sight, from fixing too stedfastly on the Person or Thing, to which they were affixed ⁿ. Hence they were sometimes hung upon the Doors of Houses and Gardens, as we are inform'd by Pliny ^o: and Pollux ^p affirms, that Smiths commonly plac'd them before their Forges. The same Author observes from Aristophanes, that their Name was βασκανία, they are called by Plutarch ^q προιβασκανία, in the old Glossary προιβασκανιον answers the Latin Word Mutinum. But we are inform'd by Phavorinus, that βασκάνιον λέγουσιν οἱ ἀρχαῖοι, the Ancients us'd the Word βασκάνιον, the Moderns προιβασκάνιον. It may farther be observ'd that these Figures were Images of Priapus, who was believ'd to punish such Persons, as did βασκάνειν τι τῶν καλῶν, prejudice good Things by Fascination, as we are informed by Diodorus the Sicilian ^r. The Romans had several other Deities, who averted Fascinations. The God Fascinum is mention'd as one of these by Pliny ^s; and Cunina is said by Lastantius ^t to be worshipped, because she did Infantes in cunis tueri, & fascinum submovere; protect Children in their Cradles, and avert Fascination; it was before observ'd, that some Omens were averted by spitting at them, which is an Action of Detestation and Abhorrence. Hence some, chiefly old Women, averted Fascinations by spitting into their Bosoms. Hence the following Verse of Callimachus, which is cited by the *Scholias*t upon Theocritus, who farther affirms that the same Custom was practis'd in his Time:

Δαίμων, τοὶ κόλποισιν ἐπιπτύεβι θυγαῖς.

It may be farther observed, that this was done thrice, three being a sacred Number, as hath been elsewhere shewn. Hence Damætas, who is introduc'd by Theocritus, representing the Behaviour of Polyphemus, having praised himself, adds, that by the Advice of old Cotyttaris he had thrice spit into his Bosom to prevent Fascinations ^u:

Ὡς μὴ βασκανθῶ δέ, τρις εἰς ἑμὸν ἔπτύσα κόλπον.

Hence it was usual to reprove arrogant Persons, when they assum'd more than their Due, bidding them εἰς κόλπους πύειν, spit into their Bosoms, an Example whereof we find in Lucian ^k. Another Method of averting Fascinations from Infants was this: They tied a Thread of divers Colours about the Neck of the Infant, then spit upon the Ground, and, taking up the Spittle mix'd with Dirt upon their Finger, put it upon the Infant's Forehead and Lips. There is an Allusion to this Custom in Perfius ^l:

*Ecce avia, aut metuens Divum matertera, cunis
 Exemit puerum: frontemq; atq; uda labella
 Infami digito, & lustralibus ante salivis
 Expiat, urentes oculos inhibere perita.*

C H A P. XIX.

Of the Grecian Festivals in General.

FESTIVALS were instituted upon four Accounts: First, in Honour of the Gods, to whom, besides the Worship every Day paid them, some more solemn Times were set apart. Especially if they had conferred any signal Favour upon the Publick, or upon private Persons, had assisted them in defending their Country, had given them Victory over their Enemies, had delivered them out of any apparent Danger, or blessed them with Success in any Undertaking, it was thought but reasonable to set apart some Time for offering Sacrifices and Praises to them, as grateful Acknowledgments for the Benefits receiv'd at their Hands.

Secondly, In order to procure some special Favour of the Gods; for (as you may learn from the following Chapters) several of the Festivals were instituted with a Design to render the Gods propitious, and willing to grant some particular Blessings, as Health, Children, and such like. And in Times of Famine, Pestilence, or other publick Calamities, the Oracles usually advised their Consultants to institute solemn Festivals, as the best Method to appease the angry Gods, and obtain of them Deliverance from the Evils they laboured under.

Thirdly, In Memory of deceased Friends, of those that had done any remarkable Service for their Country, or died valiantly in the Defence of it. This was no small Encouragement of generous and noble Dispositions to enter upon honourable Designs, when they saw that the brave Actions of the virtuous did not perish with them, but their Memories were ever held sacred by succeeding Generations.

Fourthly, Festivals were instituted, as Times of Ease and Rest to

* Πρόσωπον ἢ Εὐχάριον.

^l Sat. ii. ver. 31. Ubi. conf. Interpretes.

Labourers; that amidst all their Toil and Sorrow, and as it were a Recompence thereof, some Days of Refreshment might be allowed them. For some one or more of these Ends, most Festivals seem to have been first instituted.

^m Aristotle reports, that amongst the Ancients they had few, or no Festivals, besides those after Harvest or Vintage; for then they used to meet and make merry with the Fruits they had gathered, Eating and Drinking plentifully; which they esteem'd a sort of Offering their First-fruits to the Gods, whom they thought honour'd by so doing; and therefore Feasts were called Θείναι, q. Δείναι, ὅτι διὰ τὰς θεῶν ἀνέσθαι δεῖν ὑπελάμβανον, i. e. because they thought they were obliged, in Duty to the Gods, to be drunk. And Seleucus, in the same Author tells us, That the Words Σαλία and μέθη were derived from the same Original, Τὸν τε αἶνον ἐπὶ πλείον, καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ἡδοναθεῖαν θεῶν ἕνεκα προσοφροσδαί, διὸ καὶ θείνας, καὶ σαλίας, καὶ μέθας ὠνομασθῆναι. i. e. Banquets were called θείναι, σαλίαι, and μέθαι, from Θεός, or God; because it was usual at those Times to consume great Quantities of Wine, and other Provisions in Honour of the Gods.

In later Ages, when the Gods were increased almost to the Number of Men, and the old frugal Way of living was laid aside, the Number of Festivals were enlarged, and the Manner of them quite altered: For whereas formerly the Solemnities consisted in little or nothing, besides offering a Sacrifice to the Gods, and after that making merry themselves; now a great many Games, Processions, and innumerable Ceremonies, in Imitation of the fabulous Actions of the Gods, were introduced and practised, to the vast Charge of the Publick.

The Athenians, as they exceeded all other People in the Number of their Gods, so they out-did them in the Number of their Festivals; which, as ⁿ Xenophon reports, were twice as many, as any other City observed: Nor did the Number and Frequency of them abate any thing of the Solemnity, Splendor, and Charges at their Observation. The Shops and Courts of Judicature were shut up on most of those Days; the Labourers rested from their Works, the Tradesmen from their Employments, the Mourners intermitted their Sorrows; and nothing but Ease and Pleasure, Mirth and Jollity were to be found amongst them. Indeed κεινὸν τῆτο καὶ τῶν Ἑλλήνων καὶ τῶν βαρβάρων ἐστὶ, this was common both to Greeks and Barbarians, as we are informed by Strabo, to celebrate their religious Solemnities with Mirth and Remission of their Labours.

Most of them were celebrated at the publick Charge; and, lest their Treasury should be exhausted by so frequent Evacuations, several Means were contrived to supply and replenish them. For Instance, after Thrafsybulus had deposed the Tyrants, their Estates were confiscated for this Use, as Harpocratio observes out of Philocorus: And when the State was reduc'd to its old Democracy, if any of the Citizens, though too much Wealth, became formidable to the poorer Sort, and Objects of their Envy, it was customary to compel them to contribute towards the defraying of the Expences at publick Festivals; and so by conferring upon them a great (tho' chargeable and dear-bought) Honour, at once sweeten the Imposition (if not also oblige those on whom it was imposed) and rid themselves of those Fears and Jealousies, which the immoderate Opulency of private Persons might reasonably give to a popular State.

Thus much of Festivals in general: As to the Particulars, I have omitted very little that is material in the Tracts of Meursius and Castellanus upon this Subject; and some things not taken notice of by either of them, and perhaps not unworthy your Observation, I have added. Yet do I not pretend, that this is a complete or entire Collection of the Grecian Festivals; for that would be endless (seeing almost every Man of Repute, and that had done any notable Service for the Publick, had his anniversary Day) and impossible, since Hundreds of them (especially those that were observ'd by the less considerable Cities) are not so much as mention'd in any Author at this Day extant; or but barely mention'd, without any Account of the Persons to whom they belong'd, or the Ceremonies used at their Celebration: However, as much as is necessary to the Understanding of the ancient Greek Writers, the following Chapters will furnish.

C H A P. XX.

Grecian Festivals.

ΑΓΗΤΟΡΕΙΟΝ and ΑΓΗΤΟΡΙΑ,

Mentioned by Hesychius, without any Notice of the Deity, in whose Honour they were observed. It is not improbable they might belong to Apollo, and be (at least the latter of them) the same with the Lacedæmonian Καρνεία. This Conjecture is grounded upon the Words of Hesychius, who tells us, that Αγνής was the Name of the Person consecrated to the God at the Καρνεία and that the Festival itself was term'd Αγνεία, which Name seems to have been deriv'd from ἀγία, that Festival being observ'd in Imitation of εὐσποντικὴν ἀγωγὴν, or, the military Way of Living, as Athenæus^a and Eustathius^b have observ'd. It is not unlikely the former might belong to Venus, whose Priest (as Grammarians inform us) was call'd Αγῆτωρ in Cyprus.

ΑΓΡΑΝΙΑ

Was celebrated at Argos^c in memory of one of Prætus's Daughters; being in all Probability the same with

ΑΓΡΙΑΝΙΑ,

Which (as the same Author tells us) was observ'd at Argos in memory of a deceas'd Person. It was also celebrated at Thebes with solemn Sports.

^a Lib. iv.^b Iliad, α.^c Hesychius.

ΑΓΡΑΥΙΑ,

At Athens, in Honour of Agraulus, or Aglaurus, the Daughter of Cecrops, and the Nymph Aglauris, and the Priestess of Minerva, to whom she gave the Surname of Aglaurus, and was worship'd in a Temple dedicated to her. The Cyprians also (as Pompey ^d reports) honour'd her by the Celebration of an annual Festival in the Month Aphrodifus, at which they offer'd human Victims; and this Custom is said to have continued till the Time of Diomedes.

ΑΓΡΙΩΝΙΑ,

In Honour of Bacchus, surnamed Αγρίων ^e for his Cruelty, as Plutarch ^f is of Opinion; or because he convers'd with, and was attended by Lions, Tigers, and other savage Animals, which procur'd him the other Name of Ὠμνής, which properly denotes an Eater of raw Flesh. This Solemnity was observ'd in the Night after this Manner: The Women ^g being assembled made a strict Search after Bacchus, as if he had fled from them; but after some time, finding their Labour to be in vain, said, that he had retir'd to the Muses, and conceal'd himself amongst them. This being done, and the Ceremony ended, they regaled themselves with an Entertainment; after which, the Time was pass'd away in proposing Riddles and cramp Questions. Large Quantities of Ivy were us'd at this Time ^h, because that Plant was accounted sacred to Bacchus; and so great Excesses were sometimes committed, that once the Daughters of Minya, in a furious Ecstasy of Devotion, slaughter'd Hippasus, the Son of Leucippe, and serv'd him up to the Table: In Memory of which Murder their whole Family was ever after excluded from this Festival upon Pain of Death; which, as Plutarch ^h reports, was inflict'd upon one of them, that had surreptitiously convey'd herself in among the rest of the Worshipers, by Zoilus a Chæroncan Priest.

ΑΓΡΟΤΕΡΑΣΘΥΣΙΑ,

ⁱ An anniversary Sacrifice of five hundred Goats, offer'd at Athens to Minerva, surnam'd Αγροτερα, from Agra in Attica. The Occasion of it was this: When Darius the Emperor of Persia made an Invasion upon Attica, Callimachus, who was at that Time in the Office of a Polemarch, made a solemn Vow to Minerva, that if she would grant them Victory over their Enemies, they would sacrifice to her as many He-goats as should equal the Number of the Slain on their Enemy's side: Minerva granted his Request, but the Number of the Persians that fell in the Battle being so great, that all the He-goats they could procure did not come near it; instead of them they offer'd all the She-goats they could find; and these also falling infinitely short of the Number, they made a Decree, that five hundred Goats should be offer'd every Year, till it should be completed.

Α Γ Ρ Τ Π Ν Ι Σ.

A nocturnal Festival, ^k celebrated in Honour of Bacchus at Arbela, a Place in Sicily; and so call'd, because the Worshipers did ἀγρύπνειν, or watch all Night.

Α Δ Ω Ν Ι Α, Α Δ Ω Ν Ε Ι Α,

Was celebrated in most of the Cities of Greece, in Honour of Venus, and in Memory of her belov'd Adonis. The Solemnity continued two Days; upon the first of which certain Images or Pictures of Adonis and Venus were brought forth with all the Pomp and Ceremonies practis'd at Funerals; the Women tore their Hair, beat their Breasts, and counterfeited all other Postures and Actions usual in lamenting the Dead. This Lamentation was term'd ἀδωνιασμός ^l, or ἀδωνία, whence ἀδωνίαν ἀγειν is interpreted by Suidas Ἀδωνιν κλαίειν, to weep for Adonis. The Songs on this Occasion were call'd ἀδωνίδια. ^m There were also carry'd along with them Shells fill'd with Earth, in which grew several Sorts of Herbs, especially Lettices, in Memory that Adonis was laid out by Venus upon a Bed of Lettices. These were call'd κῆπι, Gardens; whence Ἀδωνιδὸς κῆπι are proverbially apply'd to things unfruitful or fading; because those Herbs were only sown so long before the Festival, as to sprout forth and be green at that Time, and then were presently cast out into the Water. The Flutes us'd upon this Day were call'd Γυγσειά, from Γύγσις, which was the Phœnician Name of Adonis. Hence to play on this Instrument was term'd γυγσαῖν, or γυγσεῖν, the Musick γυγσεσμός, and the Songs γυγσεῖντα. The Sacrifice was term'd Καθίσρα, because (I suppose) the Days of Mourning us'd to be call'd by that Name. The following Day was spent in all possible Expressions of Mirth and Joy; in Memory, that, by the Favour of Proserpina, Venus obtain'd that Adonis should return to Life, and dwell with her one Half of every Year. All this vain Pomp and serious Folly serv'd only to expose the Heathenish Superstition, and gave birth to the Proverb Οὐδέν ἰερόν, by which seem to be meant things that bear a Show of something great or sacred, but are in Reality nothing but sorry and ridiculous Trifles.

Α Θ Η Ν Α Ι Α.

Two Festivals observ'd at Athens in Honour of Minerva; one of them was call'd Παναθήναια, the other Χαλκεία, and both shall be treated of in their proper Places.

Α Ι Α Κ Ε Ι Α,

ΑΙΑΝΤΕΙΑ,

To Ajax in the Isle of Salamis °. Also in Attica, where, in Memory of the Valour of that Hero, a Bier upon set Days was adorn'd with a complete Suit of Armour; and such a pious Care the Athenians took of his Memory, that his Name was continued to Posterity in that of one of their Tribes, which was from him call'd Αιακτῆς.

ΑΙΓΙΝΗΤΩΝ ΕΟΡΤΗ

Was a Festival at Ægina observ'd in Honour of Neptune sixteen Days together; all which were employ'd in Mirth and Jollity, and offering Sacrifices to the Gods. And this was done only by free Denisons of that Island, without the Assistance of Servants, who were for that Reason call'd Μονοδάροι, which Word signifies Persons that eat by themselves: After all, the Solemnity was ended with offering a Sacrifice to Venus. The Occasion and Original of these Observances are accounted for by Plutarch in his Greek Questions.

ΑΙΜΑΚΟΤΡΙΑ,

A Peloponnesian Festival, wherein Boys (ἄρσχοι) were whipt at the Sepulchre of Pelops, till Blood (αἷμα) was drawn, whence this Solemnity deriv'd its Name.

ΑΙΩΡΑ, ΕΩΡΑ, ΕΤΑΕΙΠΝΟΣ, or ΑΛΗΤΙΣ,

A Festival ^p and solemn Sacrifice celebrated by the Athenians with Vocal Musick in Honour of Erigone, sometimes call'd Aletis, the Daughter of Icarius; who, out of an Excess of Grief for the Misfortunes of her Father, hang'd herself: Whence the Solemnity had the Name of Αἰσεία. At her Death she requested the Gods, that if the Athenians did not revenge Icarius's Murder, their Virgins might end their Lives in the same Manner that she did. Her Petition was granted, and a great many of them, without any apparent Cause of Discontent, became their own Executioners; whereupon, to appease Erigone, they instituted this Festival by the Advice of Apollo. Others report ^q, that it was observ'd in Honour of King Temaleus; or of Ægisthus and Clytæmnestra. And some are of Opinion ^r, that it was first observ'd by Command of an Oracle, in Memory of the Daughter of Ægisthus and Clytæmnestra, who in Company of her Grandfather Tyndarus took a Journey to Athens, where she prosecuted Orestes in the Court of Areopagus; and, losing her Cause, hang'd herself for Grief.

ΑΚΤΙΑ,

The Combatants in these Games were not only Men, but Boys; and the Victors were rewarded with a Crown of Poplar.

Others say, this Festival was instituted as a Commemoration of the primitive Greeks, who liv'd ἐν ταῖς ἀλωσι, i. e. in Vine-yards and Corn-fields ^a. Hence Ceres was call'd Ἀλωὰς, Ἀλωῖς, and Ευαλωσία.

Α Ν Α Γ Ω Γ Ι Α,

Solemn Sacrifices ^f to Venus at Eryx in Sicily, where she was honour'd with a magnificent Temple. The Name of this Solemnity was deriv'd ἄπο τῆς ἀνάγαγης. i. e. from returning; because the Goddess was said to leave Sicily, and return to Africk at that Time.

Α Ν Α Κ Ε Ι Α,

An Athenian Festival, in Honour of the Dioscuri, who were call'd Ἀγκαις, and honour'd with a Temple call'd Ἀνάκειον. The Sacrifices offer'd at that Time were nam'd Ξενισμοί, because those Deities were ξένοι, or Strangers ^g; and consisted of three Offerings ^h, which were call'd τεῖπαι. Athenæus ⁱ also makes mention of Plays acted in Honour of these Deities.

ΑΝΑΚΤΩΝ ΠΑΙΔΩΝ,

A Festival ¹ at Amphyssa, the capital City of Locris, in Honour either of the Dioscuri, or Curetes, or Cabiri; for Authors are not agreed in this Matter.

ΑΝΑΞΑΓΟΡΕΙΑ,

Anaxagoras dying at Lampsacus, the Magistrates of that City asked, Whether he desir'd any thing to be done for him: He reply'd, that on the Anniversary of his Death the Boys should have Leave to play. This Custom was observ'd in the Time of Diogenes Laertius ^m.

ΑΝΔΡΟΓΕΩΝΙΑ, or Αγῶνες ὑπὲρ Εὐρυγῆς,

Annual Games ⁿ celebrated in the Ceramicus at Athens, by the Command of Minos King of Crete, in Memory of his Son Androgeos, otherwise call'd Eurygyas, who was barbarously murder'd by some of the Athenians and Megarensians ^o.

ΑΝΘΕΣΤΗΡΙΑ,

An Athenian Festival, observ'd in Honour of Bacchus upon the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth Days of the Month Anthesterion.

The first Day was nam'd Πιδοριζα, ὑπὸ τῶ πιδρος εἶγεω, i. e. because they then tapp'd their Barrels. The same Day was by the Chæroneans call'd Αγαθὴ δαιμονία, i. e. the Day of Good Genius; because it was customary to make merry upon it.

The second Day was call'd Χόες, from the Measure χοῦ, because every Man drunk out of his own Vessel; in Memory of an Accident that happen'd in the Reign of Pandion, or (as others say) of Demophoon, under whom Orestes, having slain his Mother, fled to Athens, before he had undergone the customary Purification for Murder. The Athenians were at that time busy in celebrating the Festival of Bacchus, firnam'd Lenæus, because he had the Care of Wine-presses, which are in Greek call'd Λύκαια. However, he was kindly receiv'd by Demophoon, who, to prevent the Contamination which might adhere to the Company by drinking with a polluted Person, and that Orestes might not take it unkindly to be forced to drink alone, order'd that every Man should have a distinct Vessel of Wine, and drink out of his own Cup. On the foregoing Day they only open'd their Vessels, and tasted the Wine; but now it was customary to drink plentifully, and the longest Liver, in Token of Victory, was rewarded with a Crown of Leaves, or, as some report, ^p a Crown of Gold and a Vessel of Wine. It was usual also to ride in Chariots, out of which they jested upon all that pass'd by. The Professors of Sophistry feasted at home with their Friends upon this Day, and had Presents sent them from all Hands: To which Custom Eubulides alludes in these Verses:

Σοφίᾳς, κἀμῖτε, καὶ Χοῶν δέη
 Ἰῶν μωδοδάρων, καὶ ἀδύπνων ἐν τρυφῇ.

Ah! subtle Knave, you now the Sophist play,
 And wish that bounteous Χοῶν may approach,
 Whose Presents fill your Belly and your Purse.

From this Day it was that Bacchus had the Sirname of Κοοπότης.

The third Day was call'd χῆροι, from χύτρα, i. e. a Pot, which was brought forth full of all Sorts of Seeds, which they accounted sacred to Mercurius χθόνιος, the Infernal, and therefore abstain'd from them. Upon this Day the Comedians used to act; and at Sparta Lycurgus order'd, that such of them as obtain'd the Victory should be enroll'd amongst the free Denisons.

During these Days the Slaves were allow'd to make merry, drink, and revel; and therefore, at the End of the Festival, it was usual to make Proclamation in this Manner: Θύεαζε Κάρηες, ἐκ ἔτ' Ἀνθεστηρία· i. e. Be gone, you Carian Slaves, the Anthesteria are ended.

ΑΝΘΕΣΦΟΡΙΑ,

A Sicilian Festival^p, so nam'd ἀπὸ τῆς φέρειν ἄνθεα, i. e. from carrying Flowers; because it was instituted in Honour of Proserpina, whom Pluto is said to have stolen, as she was gathering Flowers.

Another Solemnity of this Name seems to have been observ'd at Argos in Honour of Juno, to whom a Temple was dedicated in that Place under the Name of Ἀνθία^q.

ΑΝΤΙΓΟΝΕΙΑ,

Sacrifices in Honour of Antigonus^r.

ΑΝΤΙΝΟΕΙΑ,

Annual Sacrifices and Quinquennial Games in Memory of Antinous the Bithynian: They were instituted at the Command of Adrian the Roman Emperor, at Mantineia in Arcadia^s, where Antinous was honour'd with a Temple and divine Worship.

ΑΠΑΤΟΤΡΙΑ,

A Festival^c first instituted at Athens, and from thence deriv'd to the rest of the Ionians, except those of Ephesus and Colophon. It receiv'd its Name from ἀπάτη, which signifies Deceit; because it was first instituted in Memory of a Stratagem, by which Melanthius the Athenian King overcame Xanthus King of Bœotia. For a Controversy happening between the Athenians and Bœotians, about a Piece of Ground situated upon the Confines of Attica and Bœotia; Xanthus made a Propofal, that himfelf and the Athenian King fhould end the Quarrel by a fingle Combat. Thymætes reign'd at that time in Athens, but declining the Fight, was depos'd: His Succelfor was Melanthius a Meffenian, Son of Neleus and Perichlymene, who, having accepted the Challenge, met his Enemy at the appointed Place; where, as they were juft going to begin the Fight, Melanthius thinking or pretending that he faw, at Xanthius's Back, a Perfon habited in a black Goat-fkin, cry'd out, that the Articles were violated; upon this, Xanthius looking back was treacheroufly flain by Melanthius. In Memory of this Succelf, Jupiter was firnam'd Απατήνωρ, i. e. Deceiver; and Bacchus, Μελαγωγίς, i. e. cloathed in a black Goat-fkin, and was farther honour'd with a new Temple, and the Inftitution of this Feftival. Others are of Opinion, that Απατέρια are fo called, γ. ἀπατορία, i. e. δμοπατορία, becaufe upon this Feftival, Children accompanied their Fathers, to have their Names enter'd into the publick Register: After the fame manner ἀλογ is equivalent to ὀμόλεξ and ἀκοίτις to ὀμόκοιτις. Others will have Απατέρια to be fo nam'd, becaufe the Children were till that Time ἀπαπρες, i. e. without Fathers, in a Civil Senfe; for that it was not till then publickly recorded, whofe they were. For a like Reason, Melchifedec is by fome thought to be call'd ἀπάτωρ, ἀμήτωρ, i. e. without Father, without Mother; viz. becaufe his Parentage was omitted in the facred Genealogies. To return: This Feftival was celebrated in the Month Pyaneffion, and lafted three Days.

The firft Day was call'd Δορπία, from δέρπ, i. e. a Supper; becaufe on that Day at Evening, each Tribe had a feparate Meeting, whereat a fumptuous Entertainment was provided.

The fecond Day was nam'd Αναβρύσεις, ἀπό τῆς ἀνω ἐρύσειν, becaufe on this Day Victims were offer'd to Jupiter φραξί, and Απατλίωρ, and to Minerva, in whofe Sacrifices (as in all that were offer'd to Celeftial Gods) it was ufual ἀνω ἐρύσειν τῆς κεφαλᾶς, i. e. to turn the Head of the Victims upwards towards Heaven. At this Sacrifice the Children enroll'd amongst the Citizens were plac'd clofe to the Altar. It was ufual alfo for Perfons richly apparell'd, to take lighted Torches out of the Fire, and to run about, fingng Hymns in Praise of Vulcan, who was the firft that taught Men the Ufe of that Element: Which Custom is by Meurfius refer'd to this Day, tho' Harpocraton, to whom we are indebted for the Mention of it, has left us in the Dark as to its Time.

The third Day was nam'd Κυρεῶπις, from κῦρ, i. e. a Youth; or κερξ, i. e. Shaving; becaufe the young Men, who till that Time remain'd unshaved, had their Hair cut off, before they were prefented to be registered. Their Fathers at this Time were oblig'd to fwear, that both themfelves, and the Mothers of the young Men, were Free-born Athenians. It was alfo ufual to offer two Ewes and a She-goat in Sacrifice to Diana, which they call'd εὐνεν φραξίαν the She-goat was term'd αἰξ φραξί, and the Ewe οἰς φραξήρ. It was to be of a certain Weight; and becaufe it once happen'd, that the Standers-by cry'd out in jeft, Μεῖον, μεῖον, i. e. Too little, too little, it was ever after call'd Μεῖον, and the Perfons that offer'd it, Μειζωροί.

^o Epiftola ad Hebræos.

^w Follux.

To these Hefycbius adds a fourth Day, which he tells us was call'd Ἐπιείδης; but that Name is not peculiar to this Festival, but generally apply'd to any Day, celebrated after the End of another Solemnity; being deriv'd ἀπὸ τῆς ἐπιείδου, i. e. from following; because it was a sort of Appendage to the great Festival.

This Festival was observ'd five Days by the Protenthae, who began it a Day sooner than others. There was also a Decree made when Cephefidorus was chief Archon, whereby the Senate was forbidden to meet for five Days, during the time of this Solemnity *.

Α Π Ο Λ Λ Ω Ν Ι Α.

To Apollo, at Ægialea, upon this Account: Apollo, having obtain'd a Victory over Pytho, went to Ægialea, accompanied with his Sister Diana; but being frighted from thence, fled into Crete. After this, the Ægialeans were infected with an Epidemical Distemper; and being advised by the Prophets to appease the two offended Deities, sent seven Boys and as many Virgins to entreat them to return. Apollo and Diana accepted their Piety, and came with them to the Citadel of Ægialea; in Memory of which, a Temple was dedicated to Pytho, the Goddeffs of Persuasion; and it became a Custom to appoint chosen Boys and Virgins; to make a solemn Proceffion, in shew as if they design'd to bring back Apollo and Diana; which Solemnity was continued till Pausanias's Time †.

Α Π Ο Π Ο Μ Π Α Ι Ο Ι.

Certain Days ‡, in which Sacrifices were offer'd to the Gods call'd Πομπᾶι. Who these were is doubtful. Certain it is, that πομπᾶ denotes any Person that conducts another in his Way; and therefore was apply'd to Mercury, who was believ'd to be Pluto's Gentleman-usher, and to conduct the Souls of the deceased Persons to the Shades below: Whence Ajax, in Sophocles, before he stabb'd himself, pray'd thus:

————— καλῶ δ' ἄμα
Πομπᾶιον Ἑρμῆν χθόνιον εὖ μὲ κομίσει.

————— Infernal Mercury I call
Safe to conduct me to the Shades below.

But I am rather inclined to think, these Days belong'd to the Gods call'd Αποπμπᾶι, i. e. ἄποβοποι, (for ἄποπμπᾶ is by Phavorinus expounded ἄποβοπι) otherwise nam'd Λύττιοι, ἀλεξίχακοι, ἀποβοπαῖοι, φύξιοι, and averrunci, because they were thought to avert Evils; such were Jupiter,

* Athenæus lib. iv.† Pausanias Corinthiacis.‡ Hefycbius.

Α Π Α Τ Ε Ι Α,

A Festival at Sicyon ^a, upon the Birth-day of Aratus, whom they honour'd with a Priest; who, for Distinction's sake, wore a Ribband bespangl'd with white and purple Spots. It was celebrated with Musick; and the Choristers of Bacchus assisted in the Solemnity with Harps. There was also a solemn Procession, in which the Publick School-master, accompanied with his Scholars, went first, and the Senators adorn'd with Garlands, with as many of the other Citizens as had a mind, follow'd.

Α Ρ Γ Ε Ι Ω Ν Ε Ο Ρ Τ Α Ι,

Festivals at Argos, the Names of which are lost. One we find, mention'd in Parthenius ^b, upon which he tells us, there was a Publick Entertainment.

Another is taken notice of in Plutarch ^c, upon which the Boys call'd one another in Jest βαλλαχράδας, i. e. βαλλοντας ἀχράδας, by which Words are signified Persons that throw wild Figs. Which Custom perhaps was intituted in Memory of their ancient Diet in Inachus's Time, when they liv'd upon wild Figs.

A third we read of in Aeneas ^d, in which great Numbers of the Citizens made a solemn Procession out of the City in Armour.

Α Ρ Ι Α Δ Ν Ε Ι Α,

Two Festivals ^e at Naxos, in Honour of two Women, who had one common Name of Ariadne. The former of them was thought to be of a gay and pleasant Temper, and therefore her Festival was observ'd with Musick, and many other Expressions of Joy and Mirth.

The latter being the same that was expos'd big with Child upon that Coast by Theseus, was suppos'd to be of a melancholy Disposition, and therefore the Solemnity dedicated to her had a Shew of Sorrow and Mourning; and in Memory of her being left by Theseus near the Time of Child-birth, it was usual for a young Man to lie down, and counterfeit all the Agonies of Women in Labour. This Festival is said to have been first instituted by Theseus, as a Recompence of his Ingratitude to her.

Α Ρ Η Φ Ο Ρ Ι Α,

At Athens ^f, in the Month Scirophorion, in Honour of Minerva and Ersa, one of Cecrops's Daughters, upon which Account it is sometimes call'd Ερσιφόρεια, or Ερρηφόρεια. Years of Age, and hence called Ἀρρηρόεσι. Their Apparel was white, and set off with Ornaments of Gold: whence ἀρρηρορεῖν is interpreted χρυσὴν ἐδῆτα φορεῖν καὶ χρυσία κ. They had a particular Sort of Bread, which was term'd γασόςⁿ, and Cakes called ἀνάσπιτοιⁱ. There was a certain σωμαεῖσιθειον Ball-Court appropriated for their Use in the Acropolis, wherein stood a brazen Statue of Isocrates on Horse-back^k. Out of these were chosen two, to weave (as the Custom was) a Πέπλος^l, or Garment, for Minerva; which Work they began upon the thirtieth of Pyaneffion.

ΑΡΤΕΜΙΣΙΑ,

A Festival, in Honour of Artemis, or Diana. It was celebrated in several Places of Greece, particularly at Delphi, where they offered a Mullet to the Goddeffs, as being thought to bear some sort of Relation to her; because^l it is said to hunt, and kill the Sea-hare. The Bread offered to the Goddeffs was termed λοχλά^m; and the Women, who performed the sacred Rites, were called λόμεναιⁿ.

Another Solemnity of this Name was observed three Days together, with Banquets and Sports, at Syracuse^o.

ΑΣΚΛΗΠΕΙΑ,

A Festival of Esculapius, observed in several Parts of Greece; but no where with so much Solemnity, as by the Epidaurians^p, whom this God honoured with his more immediate Presence, giving Answers to them in an Oracular Way: Wherefore it was called Μεγίστη Ἰσχυρία, i. e. The great Festival of Æsculapius^q. One great Part of the Solemnity consisted of a Musical Entertainment, wherein the Poets and Musicians contended for Victory, and therefore was called Ἰεγὲς ἀγών, the Sacred Contention.

ΑΣΚΩΛΙΑ,

A Festival celebrated by the Athenian Husbandmen, in Honour of Bacchus^r, to whom they sacrificed a He-goat; because that Animal destroys the Vines, and therefore was supposed to be hated by Bacchus. Out of the Victim's Skin it was customary to make a Bottle, which being filled with Oil and Wine, they endeavoured to leap upon it with one Foot, and he that first fixed himself upon it, was declared Victor, and received the Bottle as a Reward. The doing this they called ἀσκολιάζειν, ὡς τὸ ἐπὶ τῆ ἀσκῶν ἀλλεῖσθαι, i. e. from Leaping upon a Bottle, whence this Festival has its Name.

was that at Cyprus^s first instituted by Cinyras; out of whose Family certain Priests of Venus were elected, and for that Reason nam'd Kinyrædai. At this Solemnity several mysterious Rites were practis'd; all that were initiated into them offer'd a Piece of Money to Venus, as an Harlot, and receiv'd, as a Token of the Goddess's Favour, a Measure of Salt and a φαλλός: The former, because Salt is a Concretion of Sea-water, to which Venus was thought to owe her Birth: The latter, because she was the Goddess of Wantonness.

At Amathus, a City of Cyprus, solemn Sacrifices were offer'd to Venus, and call'd Καρπώσεις^t; which Word is deriv'd from καρπός, i. e. Fruit; perhaps because this Goddess presided over Generation.

At both the Paphi Venus's Festival was observ'd, not only by the Inhabitants of those Places, but multitudes that throng'd to it out of other Cities^u.

At Corinth it was celebrated by Harlots^x.

But Plutarch ^e reports, that it was observ'd in Memory of a Victory obtain'd by Theseus against the Amazons, in the Month Boedromion.

ΒΟΡΕΑΣΜΟΙ,

Another Athenian Festival ^f in Honour of Boreas; who had an Altar in Attica, and was thought to bear some Relation to the Athenians, having married Orithyia, the Daughter of Eretheus; for which Reason, when in a Sea-fight a great many of their Enemies Ships were destroy'd, by a North-wind, the Athenians imputed it to the Kindness Boreas had for his Wife's native Country, as Pausanias reports ^g.

We are inform'd by the same Author ^h that solemn Sacrifices were offer'd to Boreas at Megalopolis in Arcadia, where he had a Temple and divine Honours.

ally about ten Years of Age, (it being unlawful for any of them to be above Ten, or under Five) and therefore to consecrate them was call'd Δεχατεύειν, from δέκα, i. e. Ten : It was also call'd ἀρκεύειν, and the Virgins themselves were nam'd Ἀρκτοι, i. e. Bears, upon this Account : Amongst the Phlaidæ, Inhabitants of a Borough in Attica, there was a Bear, which was so far divested of its natural Fierceness, and become tame and tractable, that they usually admitted it to eat, and to play with them, and received no harm thereby : But a young Maid once un-luckily happening to be too familiar with it, the Beast tore her to pieces, and was afterwards kill'd by the Virgin's Brethren : Upon this en-su'd a dreadful Pestilence, which prov'd very fatal to many of the Inhabitants of Attica ; as a Remedy of which, they were advis'd by an Oracle to appease the Anger of Diana for the Bear by consecrating Virgins to her in Memory of it. The Athenians punctually executed the divine Command, and enacted a Law, that no Virgin should be marry'd till she had undergone this Ceremony.

Δ Α Ι Δ Ι Σ.

A Solemnity, which lasted three Days, during all which Time, Torches, (call'd in Greek δᾶδες) were burnt, which gave Occasion to the Name ^y.

Upon the first Day they commemorated Latona's Labour, and Apollo's Birth.

The second was in Memory of Glycon's, and the God's Nativity.

The third of the Marriage of Podalirius, and the Mother of Alexander.

upon which any of them alighted, and form'd them into Statues, which were by the ancient Greeks call'd Δαίδαλα, from the ingenious Artificer Dædalus.

The other Solemnity was by far the greatest and most remarkable, being celebrated not only by Platæa, but all the Cities of Bœotia, once in sixty Years; in Memory, and, as it were, in Recompence for the Intermission of the lesser Festival the same Number of Years, during which time the Platæans had liv'd in Exile. In order to this Solemnity, there were always prepar'd fourteen Δαίδαλα at the other Festivals, to be distributed by Lots amongst the Platæans, Coroneans, Thespians, Tanagræans, Chæroneans, Orchomenians, Lebadeans, and Thebans; because they promoted a Reconciliation with the Platæans, and were desirous to have them recall'd from Banishment, and contributed Offerings towards the Celebration of the Festival, about the time that Thebes was restor'd by Cassander the Son of Antipater. Nor did the fore-mention'd Cities only, but other Cities of lesser Note, join in this Solemnity; the Manner of which was thus:

A Statue being adorn'd in Woman's Apparel upon the Banks of Asopbus, a Woman in the Habit of a Bride-maid was appointed to accompany it, being follow'd by a long Train of Bœotians, who had Places assign'd them by Lots, to the Top of Mount Cithæron; upon which an Altar of square pieces of Timber, cemented together in the manner of Stones, was erected. Upon this large Quantities of combustible Matter being laid, each of the Cities, and such Men as were possess'd of plentiful Estates, offer'd a Bull to Jupiter, and an Ox, or Heifer, to Juno, with Plenty of Wine and Incense: The poorer sort, and such as were not of Ability to purchase more costly Oblations, contributed small Sheep, all which, together with the Δαίδαλα, being thrown into one common Heap were set on fire, and not extinguish'd, till the whole Fabrick, of which the Altar itself made a Part, was consum'd to Ashes. The first Occasion of these Customs was this: On a time it happen'd that Juno had a Quarrel with Jupiter, whereby the Goddess was exasperated to such a degree, that she departed from him, and retir'd into Eubœa: The God was very much troubled at this Desertion, and endeavour'd by all the Arts of Persuasion to engage her to return; but, finding her obstinate in her Resolution, went to advise with Cithæron, who reign'd at that time over the Platæans, and had the greatest Reputation for Wisdom of any Man in that Age: The Expedient he advis'd to was this; that Jupiter should dress a Statue in Woman's Apparel, and place it in a Chariot, giving out that it was Platæa, the Daughter of Asopbus, and that she was contracted to him in Marriage: The God approv'd his Counsel, and put it in Practice: And the Report had no sooner reach'd Juno, but she posted with all haste to meet the Chariot; where having discover'd the Cheat, she was wonderfully taken with the Contrivance, and return'd into Favour with her Husband.

An entire Treatise was compos'd by Plutarch upon this Festival, some Fragments of which are still preserv'd in *Eusebius*², and confirm the Substance of the Relation now given out of Pausanias; from whom they differ only in this, that in them Cithæron is call'd Alalcomenes; and Platæa, Dædala.

Δ Α Ρ Ο Ν,

A Festival of which nothing remains besides the Name, which is preserv'd by Hesychius. If the Conjecture of Meursius deserves any Credit, it will not be improbable that it belong'd to one Darron, who, as the same Grammmarian informs us, was worshipp'd by the Macedonians, and thought to restore Health to sick Persons.

Δ Α Υ Λ Ι Σ,

A Solemnity at Argos, in which was represented the Combat of Prætus and Acrisius.

Δ Α Φ Ν Η Φ Ο Ρ Ι Α,

A Novennial Festival^a, celebrated by the Bæotians, in Honour of Apollo. The chief Solemnity was thus: They adorn'd an Olive-bough with Garlands of Laurel and various sorts of Flowers: Upon the top of it was plac'd a Globe of Brass, from which hung other lesser Globes: About the Middle were fix'd to it purple Crowns and a Globe of smaller Size than that at the Top: The Bottom was cover'd with a Garment of a Saffron-colour. The uppermost Globe was an Emblem of the Sun, by whom they meant Apollo. That plac'd diametrically under it signify'd the Moon; the lesser Globes represented the Stars; and the Crowns, being sixty-five in Number, were Types of the Sun's annual Revolution, which is compleated in about the same Number of Days. The Bough, thus adorn'd, was carry'd in Procession; the chief in which was a Boy of a beautiful Countenance, and good Parentage, whose Father and Mother were both living: He was apparell'd in a sumptuous Garment, reaching down to his Ancles: His Hair hung loose and dishevell'd; on his Head was a Crown of Gold; and upon his Feet Shoes call'd Iphicratidæ, from Iphicrates an Athenian, the first Inventor of them. It was his Duty to execute at that time the Priest's Office, and he was honour'd with the Title of Δαυνηφόρος, i. e. Laurel-bearer. Before him went one of his nearest Relations, bearing a Rod adorn'd with Garlands: After the Boy follow'd a Choir of Virgins with Branches in their Hands: And in this Order they proceeded as far as the Temple of Apollo, firnam'd Ismenius and Galaxius, where they sung supplicatory Hymns to the God. These Ceremonies were first practis'd upon this Account: The Æolians that inhabited Arne, and the adjacent Territory, being advis'd by an Oracle to relinquish their old Seats, and to seek their Fortunes, made an Invasion upon the Thebans, who at the same time were besieg'd by the Pelasgians: It happened to be near the time of Apollo's Festival, which was religiously observ'd by both Nations; wherefore a Cessation of Arms being granted on both sides, one Party cut down Laurel-boughs in Helicon, the other near the River Melas; and, as the Custom was, carry'd them in their Hands, in Honour of Apollo. On the same Day there appear'd in a Dream to Polematas, General of the Bœotian Forces, a young Man, who presented him with a compleat Suit of Armour, and commanded that every ninth Year the Bœotians should make solemn Prayers to Apollo, with Laurel in their Hands: About three Days after this Vision, he made a Sally on the Besiegers with such Success, that they were forc'd to quit their Enterprize: Whereupon he caus'd this Festival to be instituted.

Δ Η Λ Ι Α,

A Quinquennial Festival in the Isle of Delos ^c instituted by Theseus, at his Return from Crete, in Honour of Venus, whose Statue, given to him by Ariadne, he erected in that Place, having by her Assistance met with Success in his Expedition. The chief Ceremonies were these: They crown'd the Goddess's Statue with Garlands, appointed a Choir of Musick, and Horse-races; and perform'd a remarkable Dance, call'd ΓέγραυϞ, i. e. the Crane; wherein they imitated by their Motions the various Windings of the Cretan Labyrinth, out of which Theseus, who was the Inventor of the Dance, made his Escape.

Another Solemnity was every Year celebrated in this Island, in Honour of Apollo, by the Athenians; but of this I have already given you an Account in one of the foregoing Chapters.

Α Η Μ Η Τ Ρ Ι Α,

A Solemnity in Honour of Ceres, call'd by the Greeks Διμήτηρ ^d, in which it was customary for the Worshipers to lash themselves with Whips, made of the Bark of Trees, and call'd μύροντες.

Another Festival of this Name was observed by the Athenians ^e, in Honour of Demetrius Poliochrates, being the same with that which was before call'd Dionysia, and celebrated upon the thirteenth of Munychion, whose Name was chang'd into Demetrium; as also the Day of this Solemnity was nam'd Demetrias.

Δ Ι Α Μ Α Σ Τ Ι Γ Ω Σ Ι Σ,

A Solemnity at Sparta ^f, in Honour of Diana Orthia, so nam'd ἀπό τῆς μαστιγῆς, i. e. from whipping, because it was usual to whip Boys upon the Goddess's Altar. These Boys were, at first, Free-born Spartans; but, in more delicate Ages, of meaner Birth, being frequently the Off-spring of Slaves: They were call'd Βαιμονεῖκας, from the Exercise they underwent at the Altar, and which was very severe and cruel; and lest the Officer should out of Compassion remit any thing of the Rigour of it, Diana's Priestess stood by all the time, holding in her Hand the Goddess's Image, which of itself was very light and easy to be bornè, but if the Boys were spar'd, became so ponderous, that the Priestess was scarce able to support its Weight. And lest the Boys should faint under Correction, or do any thing unworthy of Laconian Education, their Parents were usually present, to exhort them to bear whatever was inflicted upon them with Patience and Constancy. And so great was the Bravery and Resolution of the Boys, that though they were lash'd till the Blood gush'd out, and sometimes to Death, yet a Cry or Groan was seldom or never heard to proceed from any of them. Those of them that dy'd by this Means were buried with Garlands upon their Heads, in token of Joy or Victory, and had the Honour of a publick Funeral.

Whence this Custom had its Origin is not agreed by ancient Writers. By some it is said to have been one of Lycurgus's Institutions, and design'd for no other End, than to accustom the Youth to endure Pain, thereby to render them fearless and insensible of Wounds. Others will have it done as a Mitigation of an Oracle, whereby it was commanded that human Blood should be shed upon Diana's Altar. By some it is reported to have been as ancient as Orestes, who (they say) transplanted out of Scythia into Laconia the Image of Diana Taurica, to whom the Scythians us'd to offer human Victims: This barbarous sort of Worship the Lacedæmonians detested; but withal, fearing the Anger of the Goddess, made an Order, that every Year a Boy should be whipped upon her Altar till the Blood gushed out; and so, if nothing could satisfy her but human Blood, she might not be altogether destitute of it. Lastly, Some assign this Cause for it; Pausanias, the Spartan General, as he was offering Sacrifices and Prayers before the Fight with Mardonius, was set upon by a Company of Lydians, who plunder'd and scatter'd abroad the Sacrifice; but were at length repell'd with Whips and Staves, which were the only Arms the Lacedæmonians were at that time furnished with: In Memory of this Victory, the Whipping of Boys at the Altar of Sparta, and after that, the Lydian Procession, Plutarch tells us, was perform'd till his Day.

It was so call'd ἀπὸ τοῦ Διὸς, καὶ τῆς ἄσσης, i. e. from Jupiter and Misfortune; because by making Supplications to Jupiter, they obtain'd Protection, and Deliverance from Dangers and Evils. It was celebrated about the latter End of Anthesterion, without the City, where was a great Concourse of all the Athenians, feasting and offering Sacrifices; at the same time there is said to have been a publick Mart, in which all sorts of Vendibles were expos'd to Sale; whence Strepfiades in Aristophanes'^b faith, he bought his Son Phidippides a little Chariot at this Festival:

Ον πρώτον ἔβλεν ἔλασεν Ἡλιασικόν,
Τέτω πριάμην σοὶ Διαστοὺς ἀμαξίδα.

Plutarch'¹ maketh mention of another Festival that belonged to Jupiter, wherein a solemn Procession was made by Men on Horseback.

Δ Ι Ι Π Ο Λ Ε Ι Α,

An Athenian Festival^k celebrated upon the fourteenth of Scirophorion; so nam'd, because it was sacred πρὸς Διὶ Πολιεῖ, i. e. to Jupiter firmam'd Polieus, or Protector of the City. Sometimes it was call'd Βερόνια, from killing an Ox: For it was customary upon this Day to place certain Cakes, of the same sort with those us'd at Sacrifices, upon a Table of Brass; round this they drove a select Number of Oxen, of which he that eat any of the Cakes was presently slaughter'd. The Person that kill'd the Ox was call'd βέτης, or *βετόν*Θ. Porphyry reports, that no less than three Families were employ'd in this Ceremony, and receiv'd different Names from their Offices therein: The Family, whose Duty it was to drive the Oxen, were call'd Κενθιάδαι, from κένθρον, i. e. a Spur: Those that knock'd him down, Βετοπι, being descended from Thaulon: Those that slaughter'd and cut him up, Δαιβοί, Butchers or Cooks. The Original of the Custom was thus: On one of Jupiter's Festivals it happen'd, that a hungry Ox eat one of the consecrated Cakes; whereupon the Priest (some call him Thaulon, others Dionus, or Sopater) mov'd with a pious Zeal, kill'd the profane Beast. In those Days it was look'd upon as a capital Crime to kill an Ox; wherefore the guilty Priest was forced to secure himself by a timely Flight, and the Athenians in his stead took the bloody Ax, arraign'd it, and, according to Pausanias, brought it in not guilty. But Ælian is of another Opinion, and reports, that the Priest and People present at the Solemnity (for they also were accused, as being accessory to the Fact) were acquitted, but the Ax condemn'd, which seems to be most probable. In Memory of these Actions, it became ever after customary for the Priest to fly, and Judgment to be given about the Slaughter of the Ox.

ΔΙΟΝΥΣΙΑ,

Solemnities in Honour of Διόνυσος ^g, or Bacchus, sometimes called by the general Name of Ορμα, which Word, though sometimes apply'd to the Mysteries of other Gods, does more peculiarly belong to those of Bacchus. The Festivals of this God are said to have been instituted in Ægypt, and afterwards taught the Grecians by one Melampus ^p; and by Plutarch ^q we are inform'd, that the Ægyptian Isis was the same with Ceres, and Osiris with Bacchus; and that the Græcian Dionysia were the same with the Ægyptian Pamyli.

They were observ'd at Athens with greater Splendor, and more ceremonious Superstition, than in any other Part of Greece; for the Years were number'd by them ^r, the chief Archon had a Part in the Management of them ^s, and the Priests that officiated therein, were honour'd with the first Seats at publick Shews ^t. But at first they ^u were without Splendor and Ornaments, being Days set apart for publick Mirth, and observ'd only with these Ceremonies: First a Vessel of Wine, adorned with a Vine-branch, was brought forth, after that follow'd a Goat, then was carry'd a Basket of Figs, and, after all, the Phalli.

At some of them it was usual for the Worshippers, in their Garments and Actions, to imitate the poetical Fictions concerning Bac- chus: They put on Fawn-skins, fine Linen, and Mitres; carry'd Thyrſi, Drums, Pipes, Flutes, and Rattles; and crown'd themselves with Garlands of Trees sacred to Bacchus, such were the Ivy, Vine, Fir, &c. Some imitated Silenus, Pan, and the Satyrs, expoſing themselves in comical Dresses and antick Motions; some rode upon Asses, others drove Goats to the Slaughter. In this manner Persons of both Sexes ran about the Hills, Deserts, and other Places, wagging their Heads, dancing in ridiculous Postures, filling the Air with hideous Noises and Yelling, personating Men distracted, and crying aloud, Εὐοὶ οὐβοὶ Εὐοὶ Βακχε, or ὦ Βάκχε, or ὸ Βακχε, or ὦ Βάκχε.

Such were the Rites us'd in most of Bacchus's Festivals throughout Greece, and particularly at Athens, where this frantick Rout was, upon one of the Solemnities of this God, follow'd by Persons carrying certain sacred Vessels; the first of which was fill'd with Water; after these went a select Number of honourable Virgins, call'd Κανφοῦροι, because they carry'd little Baskets of Gold fill'd with all sorts of Fruit: In these consisted the most mysterious Part of the Solemnity; and therefore to amuse the common People, Serpents were put into them, which, sometimes crawling out of their Places, astonish'd the Beholders. Next was the Πειραλλία, being a Company of Men carrying πύ σαλλῆς, which were Poles, to the Ends of which were fix'd things in the Form of a Man's Privities: These Persons were crown'd with Violets and Ivy, and had their Faces cover'd with other Herbs; they were call'd Φαλλοφόροι, and the Songs repeated by them, Φαλλικὰ ᾄσματα. After these follow'd the Ἰθυραλλοὶ in Women's Apparel, with Garments strip'd with White, and reaching to their Ancles, Garlands on their Heads, Gloves compos'd of Flowers on their Hands, and in their Gestures imitating drunken Men. There were also certain Persons call'd Λικνεφόροι, whose Office it was to carry the Δίκνον, or mystical Fan of Bacchus; a thing so essential to this, and other Solemnities and Sacrifices of this God, that few of them could be duly celebrated without it; whence he is sometimes call'd Δικνίτης. At this Time also publick Shews, Plays, and Sports were frequent, and the whole City was fill'd with Revelling and Licentiousness.

The Festivals of Bacchus were almost innumerable; the Names of some of the most remarkable of them are as follow.

Διονύσια ἀρχαῖα^x, celebrated upon the Twelfth of Anthesterion, at Limna in Attica, where was a Temple of Bacchus. The chief Persons that officiated were fourteen Women, appointed by the Βασιλῆς, who was one of the Archons, and provided Necessaries for the Solemnity: They were call'd Γεραίαι, i. e. Venerable, and could not enter upon their Office, till they had taken an Oath in Presence of the Βασιλῆα, or the Wife of the Βασιλῆς, that they were free from all manner of Pollution.

Διονύσια νεώτερα, are mention'd by Thucydides^y; but perhaps are not distinct from some of the following.

Διονύσια μεγάλια^z, or the Greater, sometimes call'd Ἀστικὰ, or τὰ κατ' ἄστυ, as being celebrated within the City, in the Month Elaphebolion:

^x Thucyd. lib. ii. Hesychius, Demosthen. Orat. in Nearam, Pollux lib. viii.

It is sometimes by way of Eminence call'd Διονύσια, without any distinguishing Epithet, because it was the most celebrated of all Bacchus's Festivals at Athens. And it seems to be the same with the Διονύσια ἀρχαϊότερα, and the following to be the same with Διονύσια νεώτερα.

Διονύσια μικρά, or the Less, sometimes call'd τὰ κατ' ἀρχαίς, because it was observ'd in the Country. It was a sort of Preparation to the former and Greater Festival, and was celebrated in Autumn^a: Some place it in the Month Pofideon, others in Gamelion; others will have it to be the same with Διονύσια λωαία, so nam'd from λωὸς, i. e. a Wine-press; and agreeably to this Opinion Hesychius telleth us, it was celebrated in the Month Lenæon.

Διονύσια Βραυρώνια^b, observed at Brauron, a Borough of Attica, where the Votaries gave themselves over to all manner of Excess and Lewdness.

Διονύσια Νυκτήλια^c, Mysteries unlawful to be reveal'd, and observ'd by the Athenians in Honour of Bacchus Nyctelius, to whom also they erected a Temple.

Θείονια, to Bacchus, firnam'd Θείον^d, i. e. the God of Wine.

Ὠμοφαγία, to Bacchus, firnam'd Ὠμοφαγία^e and Ὠμοσῆς, because human Sacrifices were offer'd to him at that Time^d; or from Eating raw Flesh, which Action the Priests used to imitate upon this Solemnity: It was also customary for them to put Serpents in their Hair, and in all their Behaviour to counterfeit Madness and Distraction.

Διονύσια Ἀρχαδικά was an anniversary Day in Arcadia, where the Children having been instructed in the Musick of Philoxenus and Timotheus, were brought yearly to the Theatre, where they celebrated the Feast of Bacchus with Songs, Dances, and Games^e.

Several other Festivals were observ'd in Honour of this God, as the triennial Solemnity, call'd from the Time of its Celebration Διονύσια τελεπεικά^f, which is said to have been first instituted by Bacchus himself, in Memory of his Expedition into India, in which he spent three Years. Another also is mention'd by the Scholiast of Aristophanes^g, and said to be observ'd every fifth Year. And beside these we find frequent Mention of Bacchus's Festivals in most of the ancient Authors, some of which are describ'd in other Places.

Δ Ι Ο Σ Κ Ο Τ Ρ Ι Α,

It was observ'd by the Cyrenæans^h, but more especially by the *Spartans*ⁱ, whose Country was honour'd by the Birth of these Heroes. The Solemnity was full of Mirth, being a Time wherein they shar'd plentifully of the Gifts of Bacchus, and diverted themselves with Sports, of which Wrestling-matches always made a Part.

ΔΙΟΣΒΟΥΣ,

A Melesian Festival, wherein an Ox was offer'd to Jupiter ^k, as the Name imports.

ΑΠΤΟΠΕΙΑ,

An Anniversary Day observ'd in Memory of Dryops, one of Apollo's Sons at Afine, which was a Maritime Town of Argos, and inhabited by the Dryopians ^l.

ΕΒΔΟΜΗ,

On the Seventh Day ⁿ of every Lunar Month, in Honour of Apollo, to whom all Seventh Days were sacred; because one of them was his Birthday, whence he was sometimes call'd Εβδομαχῆος ^o. The Story we have in Hesiod ^p.

————— The Seventh Day is sacred,
'Cause Phæbus then was of Latona born.

At this Solemnity the Athenians sung Hymns to Apollo, and carry'd in their Hands Branches of Laurel, with which also they adorn'd their Dishes.

Another Festival there was of this Name, which private Families observ'd upon the Seventh Day after the Birth of a Child; but of this I shall give an Account in its own Place.

ΕΙΣΗΤΗΡΙΑ,

The Day in which the Magistrates at Athens entered upon their Offices ^q; upon which it was customary for them to offer a solemn Sacrifice, praying for the Preservation and Prosperity of the Commonwealth, in the Temple or Hall of Jupiter ΒελαῖϞ, and Minerva Βελαια, i. e. the Counsellors ^r.

the Borough-Towns of the Leontian Tribe in Attica ^s; or from an old Woman call'd Hecale, by whom he had a Statue erected. This Hecale, (as Plutarch ^t reports) when Theseus was upon his Expedition against the Marathonian Bull, entertain'd him with all possible Expressions of Kindness and Respect, making Prayers and Vows to the Gods for his safe Return. Theseus came off with Victory and Honour; but at his Return, finding old Hecale dead, and being thereby prevented from expressing his Thankfulness to her, he order'd that her Memory should be held sacred, and honour'd at this Solemnity, in which she was call'd, by a Diminution of her Name, Hecalene; because she had accosted Theseus after that Manner, calling him Θεσπίδου, which is a very usual Mode of Speech, when aged Persons design to express their Love and Tenderneſs to the younger Sort: So Strepsiades in Aristophanes ^u calls his Son Phidippides, by the diminutive Name of φειδιππίδου.

ΕΚΑΤΗΣΙΑ.

An Anniversary Solemnity observ'd in Honour of Hecate, by the Stratoniceſians, who were wont to assemble at this Time in great Numbers ^v.

The Athenians also had a great Veneration for this Goddess, believing that she was the Overseer of their Families, and protected their Children; whence it was customary to erect Statues to her before the Doors of their Houses, which from the Goddess's Name were call'd Εκαταῖα ^y. Every New Moon there was a publick (δείπνον) Supper provided at the Charge of the richer Sort, which was no sooner brought to the accustomed Place, but the poor People carry'd all off, giving out that Hecate had devour'd it ^z; whence it was call'd Εκατὸς δείπνον, or Hecate's Supper. This was done in a Place where three Ways met, because this Goddess was supposed to have a threefold Nature, or three Offices, in Allusion to which she was known by Σηλήνη, or the Moon; and upon Earth, Αρtemis, or Diana: Whence it is, that we find a great many Names attributed to her, deriv'd from the Number Three, or bearing some Relation to it; as Τεργύντη [⊕], Τεργύλω [⊕], Τεργυλάθνη, Τεροδίτη, Triviva, Tergemina, Tritonia, with several others. The Reason why Hecate was plac'd in the publick Ways, rather than other Deities, was ὅτι ὄντι τῶν καθαυμάτων καὶ μασμάτων θεῶν, because she presided over piacular Pollutions, as we learn from the Scholiast on Theocritus ^a: And the above-mention'd Sacrifices or Suppers (δείπνα) δοτοεργαίων καὶ καθαρῶν ἐπέχει μῶρεν, were expiatory Offerings to move this Goddess to avert any Evils, which might impend by reason of Piacular Crimes committed in the High-ways, as we are inform'd by Plutarch.

It was so call'd from ἑκατόμωρον, which signifies a Sacrifice consisting of an hundred Oxen; it being usual upon the first Day of this Solemnity to offer so many to Juno, the Reliques of all which were distributed amongst the Citizens. There were also at this Time publick Sports, first instituted by Archibius, one of the Kings of Argos: The Prize was a Brazen Shield and a Crown of Myrtle.

There was also an Anniverfary Sacrifice call'd by this Name in Laconia, and offer'd for the Preservation of the hundred Cities which flourish'd at one time in that Country ^b.

ΕΚΑΤΟΜΩΡΟΝΙΑ,

A solemn Sacrifice to Jupiter, offer'd by the Messenians, when any of them kill'd an hundred Enemies ^c.

ΕΚΑΤΣΙΑ.

A Festival observ'd by the Phæsians, in Honour of Latona, upon this Account, as it is deliver'd by Antoninus Liberalis ^d: Galatea, the Daughter of Eurytius, was married to Lamprus, the Son of Pandion, a Citizen of Phæsius in Crete; who being of an honourable Family, but wanting an Estate answerable to his Birth, and being unable to provide competent Fortunes for his Daughters, had commanded his Wife, that if she was brought to-bed of a Daughter, she should immediately put her to Death. This done, he went to look after his Flock, and, before his Return, Galatea was deliver'd of a Daughter, but being overcome by Maternal Affection, resolv'd to disobey her Husband's cruel Command; wherefore to secure the Infant she call'd it Leucippus, telling her Husband it was a Boy: At length, being no longer able to conceal the Artifice, she fled for Succour to Latona's Temple, where with abundance of Earnestness she entreated the Goddess, that, if it was possible, her Virgin might be transform'd into a Boy; Latona, mov'd with Compassion, granted her Request, and was thence by the Phæsians call'd φύγα, διὰ τὸ φύγειν μήλα τῆς κόρης, i. e. because the Maid chang'd her Sex; and ἐκδοσία, διὰ τὸ παῖδα ἐκδύειν τὸ πέπλον, i. e. because she put off her Woman's Apparel.

ΕΛΛΑΦΟΒΟΛΙΑ,

In Honour of Diana, surnam'd Ελαφεβόλος, i. e. the Huntress, for which Reason a Cake made in the Form of a Deer, and upon that Account call'd ἔλαφος, was offer'd to her ^e. This Festival was instituted upon this Occasion: The Phocensians being reduc'd to the last Extremity by the Thessalians, and disdainful to submit to them, Dæphantus propos'd that a vast Pile of combustible Matter should be erected, upon which they should place their Wives, Children, and their whole Substance; and, in case they were defeated, set all on fire together, that nothing might come into the Hands of their Enemies. But it being judg'd by no means reasonable so to dispose of the Women without their Consent, they summon'd them to the publick Assembly; where being met in a full Body, the Proposal was no sooner offer'd to them, than with unanimous Consent they gave their Approbation of it, applauding Daiphantus, and decreeing him a Crown, in Reward of so generous and noble a Contrivance; the Boys also are said to have met, and consented to it. Things being in this Posture, they went to meet their Enemies, whom they engag'd with such Fury and Resolution, that those, by whom they had just before been reduc'd to extreme Despair, were entirely defeated by them^f. In Memory of which Victory, this Festival was instituted, and observ'd with more Solemnity, and frequented by greater Numbers of Worshippers, than any other in that Country. Here you may take notice of the Proverb Φωκίαν ἀπόνοια, i. e. Phocensian Despair, which is apply'd to Persons lost beyond all Hopes of Recovery, and is said to have taken its Original from this Story.

E A E N I A,

A Festival instituted by the Laconians, in Memory of Helena^g, to whom they gave the Honour of a Temple, and Divine Worship. It was celebrated by Virgins riding upon Mules, or in certain Chariots compos'd of Reeds or Bull-rushes, and call'd Καριόεσι.

E A E T Θ E P I A,

At Plataeæ^h, to Jupiter Eleutherius, or the Assertor of Liberty, by Delegates from almost all the Cities of Greece. It was instituted upon this Account: Mardonius, the Persian General, being defeated in the Territories of Plataeæ, by the Grecians under the Conduct of Pausanias the Spartan, the Plataeans erected an Altar, and a Statue of white Marble to Jupiter Eleutherius, by whose Assistance they suppos'd the Grecians had asserted the Liberties of Greece, against the Force of the Barbarians: And a general Assembly being summon'd from all Parts of Greece, Aristides the Athenian propos'd, that Deputies might be sent every fifth Year from the Cities of Greece, to celebrate Ελευθερία, i. e. the Games of Liberty; which was agreed upon, and great Prizes appointed to be contended for.

The Plataeans also kept an Anniversary Solemnity, in Memory of those that had valiantly lost their Lives in Defence of their Country's Liberty, of which the Manner was thus: On the sixteenth of the Month Mæmæsterion, which with the Bœotians is Alalcomenius, a Procession was made, beginning about Break of Day; it was led by a Trumpeter sounding a Point of War; then follow'd certain Chariots loaden with Myrrh, Garlands, and a black Bull; after these came young Men Free-born, it not being permitted any People of servile Condition to assist at any Part of this Solemnity, because the Men, in whose Memory it was instituted, dy'd in Defence of the Liberty of Greece; these carried Libations of Wine and Milk, in large two-ear'd Vessels and Jars of Oil and precious Ointments: Last of all came the chief Magistrate, for whom though it was unlawful at other Times to touch any Thing of Iron, or wear Garments of any Colour but white, yet he was then clad in a Purple Robe, and taking a Water-pot out of the City-Chamber, proceeded with a Sword in his Hand through the Middle of the Town to the Sepulchres: Then he drew Water out of a neighbouring Spring, and wash'd, and anointed the Monuments; then sacrificed the Bull upon a Pile of Wood, making Supplication to Infernal Mercury, and Jupiter, and invited the Souls of those valiant Heroes that lost their Lives in Defence of their Country, to the Entertainment; then filling a Bowl with Wine, said, I drink to those that lost their Lives for the Liberty of Greece. These Solemnities, Plutarch telleth us, were observ'd till his Days.

Another Festival of this Name was observ'd by the Samians, in Honour of the God of Love i.

It was also customary for Slaves to keep a Holy-day call'd by this Name, when they obtain'd Liberty. To which Custom there is an Allusion in *Plautus, who introduces a Slave nam'd Toxilus, rejoicing that his Master was gone from Home, and promising himself as much Pleasure as if he had obtain'd his Freedom; whence he makes him to say,

Basilice agito Eleutheria————

E L E T Σ I N I A.

This Solemnity was observ'd by the Celeans and Phliasiens every fourth Year; by the Pheneatæ also, the Lacedæmonians, Parrhasians and Cretans; but more especially by the Athenians every fifth Year, at Eleusis a Borough-Town in Attica, from whence it was translated to Rome by Adrian the Emperor, and never totally abolish'd till the Reign of the Elder Theodosius. It was the most celebrated and mysterious Solemnity of any in Greece, whence it is often call'd, by way of Eminence, Μυσήσια, i. e. the Mysteries, without any other Note of Distinction; and so superstitiously careful were they to conceal the sacred Rites, that if any Person divulg'd any Part of them, he was thought to have call'd down some divine Judgment upon his Head, and it was accounted unsafe to abide in the same House with him; wherefore he was apprehended as a publick Offender, and suffered Death. Every Thing contain'd a Mystery; Ceres herself (to whom with her Daughter Proserpina this Solemnity was sacred) was not call'd by her own Name, but by the unusual Title of Αχθία, which seems to be deriv'd from ἀχθία, i. e. Grief or Heaviness, because of her Sorrow for the Loss of her Daughter, when she was stolen by Pluto. This Secrecy was strictly enjoin'd, not only in Attica, but in all other Places of Greece where this Festival was observ'd, except Crete; in-somuch that if any Person, that was not lawfully initiated, did but through Ignorance or Mistake chance to be present at the mysterious

Rites, he was put to Death. It is said by some to have been first instituted by Ceres herself, when she had supply'd the Athenians with Corn in a Time of Famine. Others attribute both those Facts to King Eretheus: Some will have it to have been instituted by Musæus, the Father of Eumolpus; others by Eumolpus himself.

Persons of both Sexes and all Ages were initiated at this Solemnity. Nor was it a thing indifferent whether they would be so or not, for the Neglect of it was looked upon as a Crime of a very heinous Nature; insomuch that it was one Part of the Accusation, for which Socrates was condemn'd to Death. All Persons initiated were thought to live in a State of greater Happiness and Security than other Men, being under the more immediate Care and Protection of the Goddesses: Nor did the Benefit of it extend only to this Life, but after Death too they enjoy'd (as was believ'd) far greater Degrees of Felicity than others, and were honoured with the first Places in the Elysian Shades; whereas others were forc'd to wallow in perpetual Dirt, Stink, and Nastiness.

But since the Benefits of Initiation were so vastly great, no Wonder if they were very cautious what Persons they admitted to it: Therefore such as were convicted of Witchcraft, or any other heinous Crime, or had committed Murder, though against their Wills, were debarr'd from these Mysteries; and though in latter Ages all Persons, Barbarians excepted, were admitted to them, yet in the primitive Times the Athenians excluded all Strangers, that is, all that were not Members of their own Commonwealth. Hence when Hercules, Castor and Pollux desir'd to be initiated, they were first made Citizens of Athens, as we learn from *Plutarch*¹. Nor were they admitted to the Mυστήρια ἄνωγα, or Greater Mysteries, but only to the μικρά, or Less, which are sacred to Proserpina, and first instituted on this Account: On a Time when the Athenians were celebrating the accustom'd Solemnity, Hercules, happening to go that Way, desir'd he might be initiated; but it being unlawful for any Stranger to enjoy that Privilege, and yet Hercules being a Person, who, by reason of his great Power, and the extraordinary Services he had done for them, could not be deny'd; Eumolpus thought of an Expedient, whereby to satisfy the Hero's Request, without violating the Laws; which he did, by instituting another Solemnity, which was call'd Μικρά μυστήρια, or the Lesser Mysteries; which were afterwards solemnly observ'd in the Month Anthesterion, at Agræ, a Place near the River Ilissus; whereas the Greater were celebrated in the Month Boedromion at Eleufis, an Attick Borough, from which Ceres was call'd Eleufinia. In latter Times the Lesser Festival was us'd as a Preparative to the Greater; for no Persons were initiated in the Greater, unless they had been purified at the Lesser; the Manner of which Purification was thus: Having kept themselves chaste and unpolluted nine Days, they came and offer'd Sacrifices and Prayers, wearing Crowns and Garlands of Flowers, which were call'd Ἰουσσον, or Iussæ; they had also under their Feet Διδὸς κωσίων, i. e. Jupiter's Skin, which was the Skin of a Victim offer'd to that

God. The Person that assisted them herein, was call'd $\tau\delta\epsilon\gamma\upsilon\delta\epsilon$, from $\tau\delta\upsilon\pi$, i. e. Water, which was used at most Purifications: Themselves were nam'd $\mu\upsilon\sigma\alpha\iota$, i. e. Persons initiated.

About a Year after, having sacrificed a Sow to Ceres, they were admitted to the greater Mysteries, the secret Rites of which (some few excepted, to which none but Priests were conscious) were frankly reveal'd to them; whence they were call'd $\epsilon\phi\omicron\epsilon\gamma\iota$, and $\epsilon\pi\omicron\sigma\tau\iota\alpha$, i. e. Inspectors. The Manner of Initiation was thus: The Candidates, being crown'd with Myrtle, had Admittance by Night into a Place call'd $\mu\upsilon\sigma\iota\kappa\omicron\varsigma\ \sigma\alpha\kappa\omicron\varsigma$, i. e. the Mystical Temple, which was an Edifice so vast and capacious, that the most ample Theatre did scarce exceed it. At their Entrance, they purify'd themselves by washing their Hands in Holy-water, and at the same Time were admonished, to present themselves with Minds pure and undefiled, without which the external Cleanness of the Body would by no Means be accepted. After this the Holy Mysteries were read to them out of a Book, call'd $\mu\iota\sigma\tau\epsilon\rho\omicron\mu\alpha$, which Word is deriv'd from $\pi\iota\tau\epsilon\sigma$, i. e. a Stone, because the Book was nothing else but two Stones fitly cemented together. Then the Priest that initiated them, call'd $\iota\epsilon\epsilon\sigma\phi\alpha\upsilon\tau\iota\varsigma$, propos'd certain Questions, as, Whether they were fasting, &c. to which they return'd Answers in a set Form, as may be seen in Meursius's Treatise on this Festival, to which I refer the Reader. This done, strange and amazing Objects presented themselves; sometimes the Place they were in seem'd to shake round them, sometimes appear'd bright and resplendent with Light and radiant Fire, and then again cover'd with black Darkness and Horror; sometimes Thunder and Lightning, sometimes frightful Noises and Bellowings, sometimes terrible Apparitions astonished the trembling Spectators: The being present at these Sights was call'd $\alpha\upsilon\tau\omicron\sigma\iota\alpha$, i. e. Intuition. After this, they were dismiss'd in these Words, $\kappa\omicron\gamma\epsilon$, $\omicron\mu\iota\alpha\zeta$. The Garments in which they were initiated were accounted sacred, and of no less Efficacy to avert Evils than Charms and Incantations: And therefore were never cast off, till they were torn and tatter'd; nor was it then usual to throw them away, but they made Swaddling-clothes of them for their Children, or consecrated them to Ceres and Proserpina.

The same Person that attended at the Initiation was call'd $\iota\epsilon\epsilon\phi\phi\alpha\upsilon\tau\iota\varsigma$, i. e. a Revealer of Holy Things: He was a Citizen of Athens, and held his Office during Life (tho' amongst the Celeans and Pbliansians it was necessary for him to resign his Place every fourth Year, which was the Time of this Festival) he was farther obliged to devote himself wholly to Divine Service, and to live a chaste and single Life; to which End, it was usual for him to anoint himself with the Juice of Hemlock, which by its extreme Coldness is said to extinguish, in a great Measure, the natural Heat. The Hierophantes had three Assistants, the first of which was call'd from his Office $\lambda\alpha\delta\delta\epsilon\chi\epsilon\tau\iota$, i. e. Torch-bearer, and to him it was permitted to marry. The second was called $\kappa\upsilon\pi\upsilon\zeta$, of whose Office I have already given an Account. The third ministr'd at the Altar, and was for that Reason nam'd $\omicron\ \epsilon\pi\iota\ \beta\alpha\upsilon\mu\phi$. Hierophantes is said to have been a Type of the great Creator of all Things; $\Delta\alpha\delta\delta\epsilon\chi\epsilon\tau\iota$, of the Sun; $\kappa\upsilon\pi\upsilon\zeta$, of Mercury; and $\omicron\ \epsilon\pi\iota\ \tau\phi\ \beta\alpha\upsilon\mu\phi$, of the Moon.

There were also certain publick Officers, whose Business it was to take care that all Things were perform'd according to Custom. First, Βασιλεύς, i. e. the King, who was one of the Archons, and was oblig'd at this Solemnity to offer Prayers and Sacrifices, to see that no Indecency or Irregularity was committed, and the Day following the Mysteries, to assemble the Senate to take Cognizance of all Offenders in that Kind. Beside the King, there were four Επιμεληταὶ, i. e. Curators, elected by the People; one of them was appointed out of the sacred Family of the Eumolpidae, another out of Ceryces, and the remaining two out of the other Citizens. There were also ten Persons that assisted at this, and some other Solemnities, who were called Ιεροποιοί, because it was their Business to offer Sacrifices.

This Festival was celebrated in the Month Boedromion, and continu'd nine Days, beginning upon the fifteenth, and ending upon the twenty-third Day of that Month; during which Time, it was unlawful to arrest any Man, or present any Petition; and such as were found guilty of these Practices were fin'd a thousand Drachms, or (as others report) put to Death. It was also unlawful for those that were initiated to sit upon the Covering of a Well, or to eat Beans, Mullets, or Weazles. If any Woman rode in a Chariot to Eleusis, she was by an Edict of Lycurgus oblig'd to pay six thousand Drachms. The Design of which Order was to prevent the richer Women from distinguishing themselves from those which were poor.

1. The first Day was call'd Αγρευμὸς, i. e. an Assembly; because, it may be, then the Worshippers first met together.

2. The second was nam'd Αλα ἡ Μύσαι, i. e. to the Sea, you that are initiated; because (I suppose) they were commanded to purify themselves by washing in the Sea.

3. Upon the third they offer'd Sacrifices, which consisted chiefly of an Æxonian Mullet, in Greek τεγλην, and Barley out of Rbarium, a Field of Eleusis, in which that sort of Corn was first sown. These Oblations were call'd Θυσια, and accounted so sacred, that the Priests themselves were not (as was usual in other Offerings) allow'd to partake of them.

4. Upon the fourth they made a solemn Procession, wherein the Καλάδιον, or holy Basket of Ceres, was carry'd in a consecrated Cart; Crowds of People shouting, as they went along, Χαῖρε Δημήτερ, i. e. Hail to Ceres. After these follow'd certain Women call'd Κισοφόροι, who (as the Name implies) carry'd certain Baskets: In these were contain'd Sesamin, carded Wool, some Grains of Salt, a Serpent, Pomegranates, Reeds, Ivy-boughs, a Sort of Cakes call'd φθοῖς, Poppies, &c.

5. The fifth was call'd Η τῶν λυμπάδων ἡμέρα, i. e. the Torch-day; because the Night following it, the Men and Women ran about with Torches in their Hands. It was also customary to dedicate Torches to Ceres, and to contend who should present the biggest; which was done in Memory of Ceres's Journey, wherein she sought Proserpina, being conducted by the Light of a Torch, kindled in the Flames of Ætna.

6. The sixth was call'd Ιακχ from Iacchus, the Son of Jupiter and Ceres, who accompanied the Goddess in her Search after Proserpina, with a Torch in his Hand; whence it is, that his Statue held a Torch. This Statue was carry'd from the Ceramicus to Eleusis in a solemn Iemn Proceſſion, call'd, after the Hero's Name, $\text{Iακχ} \ominus$. The Statue and the Perſons that accompanied it had their Heads crown'd with Myrtle: Theſe were nam'd Iακχαγωγοί , and all the Way danc'd and fung, and beat brazen Kettles. The Way by which they iſſu'd out of the City, was call'd Iερα ἑδῆς , i. e. the Sacred Way: The Reſting-place Iερα πυκῆ , from a Fig-tree, which grew there, and was (like all other Things concern'd in this Solemnity) accounted Sacred. It was alſo cuſtomary to reſt upon a Bridge built over the River Cephiſſus, where they made themſelves merry by jeſting on thoſe that paſſ'd by; whence μωρίζαν being deriv'd from γέφυρα , i. e. a Bridge, is by Suidas expounded χλευάζων , i. e. mocking or jeering; and γυφισαί are by Helychius interpreted σκῶπῆλαι , i. e. Scoffers. Having paſſ'd this Bridge, they went to Eleuſis, the Way into which was call'd $\text{Μυſικὴ εἰς ἑδῆς} \ominus$, i. e. the Myytical Entrance.

7. Upon the ſeventh Day were Sports, in which the Victors were rewarded with a Meaſure of Barley, that Grain being firſt ſown in Eleuſis.

8. The eighth was call'd Επιδαυρίων ἡμέρα , becauſe it once happen'd that Æſculapius, coming from Epidaurus to Athens, and deſiring to be initiated, had the Leſſer Myſteries repeated: Whence it became cuſtomary to celebrate them a ſecond Time upon this Day, and admit to Initiation ſuch Perſons as had not before enjoy'd that Privilege.

9. The ninth and laſt Day of the Feſtival was call'd Πληρωχῆαι , i. e. Earthen Veſſels: Becauſe it was uſual to fill two ſuch Veſſels with Wine, one of which being plac'd towards the Eaſt, and the other towards the Weſt, after the Repetition of certain myſtical Words, they were both thrown down, and the Wine, being ſpilt upon the Ground, was offer'd as a Libation.

ΕΛΕΝΟΦΟΡΙΑ,

An Athenian Feſtival \circ , ſo call'd from Ελένας , i. e. Veſſels made of Bull-ruſhes, with Ears of Willow, in which certain myſterious Things were carry'd upon this Day.

ΕΛΛΩΤΙΑ,

Two Feſtivals ρ , one of which was celebrated in Crete, in Honour of Euroſa, call'd Ελλωτία , which was either a Phœnician Name, or deriv'd $\text{ἀπὸ τῆς ἑλεως αὐτῆς ὑπὸ τὰς ῥα}$, i. e. from Euroſa's Raviſhment by Jupiter in the Form of a Bull. At this Time Euroſa's Bones were carry'd in Proceſſion, with a Myrtle Garland call'd Ελλωτίς , or Ελλώτις , which was no leſs than twenty Cubits in Circumference.

The other Feſtival was celebrated by the Corinthians with ſolemn Games and Races, wherein young Men contended, running with lighted Torches in their Hands. It was inſtituted in Honour of Minerva, ſurnam'd $\text{Ελλωτίς ἀπὸ τῆς ἐν Μαραθῶνι ἑλεως}$, i. e. from a certain Pond in Marathon, where one of her Statues was erected: Or, $\text{ἀπὸ τῆς ἑλεως τῆς ἐν Μαραθῶνι ἑλεως}$.

ἵππον τὸν Πήγασον, i. e. because by her Assistance Bellerophon caught Pegasus, the wing'd Horse, and brought him under Command, which some take to be the first Reason of the Celebration of this Festival. Others are of Opinion, that this Name was given to the Goddess from one Hellotis, a Corinthian Woman; the Story runs thus: The Dorians, being assisted by the Posterity of Hercules, made an Invasion upon Peloponnesus, where they took and burned Corinth; most of the Women took care to secure themselves by an early Flight, only some few, amongst whom were Hellotis and Eurytione, betook themselves to Minerva's Temple, hoping that the Sanctity of the Place would be a sufficient Protection for them. No sooner had this reach'd the Dorians Ears, but they set Fire to the Temple, and all the rest making a Shift to escape, Hellotis and Eurytione perish'd in the Flames. Upon this ensu'd a dreadful Plague, which prov'd very fatal to the Dorians; and the Remedy prescrib'd by the Goddess, was to appease the Ghosts of the two deceas'd Sisters; whereupon they instituted this Festival in Memory of them, and erected a Temple to Minerva, firnam'd, from one of them, Hellotis.

E P M A I A,

A Festival observ'd in Honour of Ερμης, i. e. Mercury, by the Pheneatæ in Arcadia^m, and the Cyllenians in *Elis*ⁿ.

Another we find observ'd by the Tanagræans in Bæotia^o, where Mercury was call'd Κρισφόρος, i. e. the Ram-bearer, and represented with a Ram upon his Shoulder, because he is said in a Time of Plague to have walk'd about the City in that Posture, and cur'd the Sick; in Memory of which Action, it was customary for one of the most beautiful Youths in the City to walk round the City Walls with a Lamb or Ram upon his Shoulders.

A Festival of the same Name was also observ'd in Crete, where it was usual for the Servants to sit down to the Table, while their Masters stood by and waited^p; which Custom was also practis'd at the Roman Saturnalia.

Another of Mercury's Festivals was observ'd by Boys in the Schools of Exercise at Athens^q; at which no adult Persons were allow'd to be present, beside the Gymnasiarch; who, if convicted of having admitted any, underwent the same Punishment with those that corrupted free-born Youth: The Occasion of this Law seems to have been the foul and not to be nam'd Lust and Wantonnefs, which were practis'd in former Times at this Solemnity.

This Festival was observ'd once every Year with Sacrifices, wherein pregnant Ewes, Cakes made by the most eminent of the young Men, and a Libation of Honey and Wine were offer'd to the Goddesses, the Worshippers being deck'd with Flowers. At Athens none had Admission to these Solemnities but Free-born Denizens; and of them, those only that were of known Virtue and Integrity, for such alone could be acceptable to these Deities, whose peculiar Office it was to revenge and punish all Sorts of Wickedness.

ΗΛΑΚΑΤΑΙΑ,

ΗΡΑΙΑ,

A Festival at Argos, in Honour of Juno, who was the Protectress of that City, and call'd in Greek Ηην. The same was kept by the Colonies from Argos, which inhabited the Islands Ægina and Samos. There were two Processions to the Goddess's Temple without the City: One by the Men in Armour: Another, in which Juno's Priestess, who was always a Matron of the first Quality, was drawn in a Chariot by white Oxen: From her Priesthood the Argians accounted their Years, as the Athenians did by the Government of their Archons. Being arriv'd at the Temple, they offer'd an Hecatomb of Oxen, whence this Festival is named Ἑκατομβοια; that Sacrifice is also sometimes called Λεχεύειν which Name may, perhaps, be derived from λεχέ, i. e. a Bed, because it was Juno's Care to preside over Marriages, Births, &c. There were also certain Games, wherein the Victory consisted in pulling down a Shield, that was strongly fix'd upon the Theatre: The Reward was a Crown of Myrtle, and a brazen Shield; whence the Game was sometimes call'd Χαλκεῖον ἀγών, i. e. the Brazen Contention. See Ἑκατομβοια.

Another Festival of this Name we find celebrated every fifth Year in Elis, where sixteen Matrons were appointed to weave a Garment for the Goddess. There were Games also, which are said to have been first instituted by Hippodamia in Honour of Juno, by whose Assistance she was marry'd to Pelops. The Prefidents were sixteen Matrons, every one of which was attended by a Maid: The Contenders were Virgins, who being distinguish'd into several Classes, according to their Ages, ran Races in their Order, beginning from the youngest. The Habit of all was the same; their Hair was dishevell'd, their Right Shoulders bare to their Breasts, and their Coats reach'd no lower than their Knees. They had a second Race in the Olympic Stadium, which was at that Time shorten'd about a sixth Part. Such as obtain'd a Victory were rewarded with Crowns of Olive, a Share of the Ox that was offer'd in Sacrifice, and were permitted to dedicate their own Pictures to the Goddesses.

This Name was also given to a solemn Day of Mourning at Corinth for Medea's Children, who were buried in the Temple of Juno Acræa in that Place, and, as some say, slain by the Corinthians, who, to remove the Scandal of so barbarous a Murder from themselves, are said to have given Euripides a large Sum to invent the Fable, wherein it is attributed to Medea, which before that Time no Man ever dream'd of.^z

Another Festival of this Name was celebrated by the Pellenæans with Games, wherein the Victor was rewarded with a rich Garment, call'd from the Place's Name Πελλωνική χλαῖνα.

ΗΡΑΚΛΕΙΑ,

An Athenian Festival, celebrated every fifth Year in Honour of Hercules.^z

The Thisbians also, and Thebans in Boeotia, observ'd a solemn Festival in Honour of Hercules, firnam'd Μήλων, because τὰ μήλα, i. e. Apples, were offer'd to him^b: The Original of which Custom was thus: It being usual in former Times to offer a Sheep at this Solemnity, it happen'd once that the River Asopus had so far overflow'd its Banks, that it could not be forded, whereby the Coming of the Victim was hindered: The Word μήλον is ambiguous in Greek, signifying sometimes a Sheep, sometimes an Apple; which some of the Boys being aware of, for want of other Employment, perform'd the holy Rites in Sport, offering instead of the Ram an Apple, which they supported with four Sticks, in Imitation of Feet, placing two more upon the Top of it, to branch out like Horns: Hercules was mightily taken with the Jest, and the Custom was continu'd from that Time to my Author's Age, who flourish'd under Commodus the Roman Emperor.

And Sicyon Hercules was honour'd with a Festival, which lasted two Days, the former of which was call'd Ολοματίας, the latter Ηρακλεια.

At Lindus there was a Solemnity in Honour of Hercules, at which nothing was heard but Execrations, and ill-boding Words; insomuch that if any Person happen'd to let fall a lucky Speech, he was thought to have profan'd the holy Rites; the Original of which Custom is accounted for by Lactantius.

There was another Festival of Hercules at Coos, wherein the Priest officiated with a Mitre on his Head, and in Woman's Apparel.

ΗΦΑΙΣΤΕΙΑ,

An Athenian Festival in Honour of Hæus^e, i. e. Vulcan. At this Time there was a Race with Torches, called Ἀγών λαμπιδ᾽ ἔχ^e, in the Academy; the Manner of which was thus^e: The Antagonists were three young Men, one of which, being appointed by Lots to take his Turn first, took a lighted Torch in his Hand, and began his Course; he deliver'd it to the second, and he in like Manner to the third: The Victory was his, that carry'd the Torch lighted to the Race's End, who was call'd Ἀμπαδηφόρ^e, or πυροφόρ^e: But if none could perform that, the Victory was not adjudg'd to any of them. If any of the Contenders, for fear of extinguishing the Torch by too violent a Motion, slacken'd his Course, the Spectators us'd to strike him with the Palms of their Hands; for which Reason those Blows were call'd Πληγαὶ πλατείω, broad Stripes; as also Κεραμειχαί, because they were inflicted in the Ceramicus^f, of which the Academy was a Part. To the successive Delivering of the Torches from one to another, there are frequent Allusions in Authors, who usually compare it to the Turns and Vicissitudes of human Affairs, and the various Changes and Successions that happen in the World; of which I will only mention one Instance out of Lucretius^g.

Θ Α Λ Τ Σ Ι Α,

A Sacrifice offer'd to the Husbandmen after Harvest ὑπὲρ τῆς ἐυλείας τῶν καρπῶν, i. e. in Gratitude to the Gods, by whose Blessing they enjoy'd the Fruits of the Ground. The whole Festival was call'd Αλωῶα, of which in another Place, as also Συσκομισήρια, ἀπὸ τῆς Συσκομιδῆς τῶν καρπῶν, i. e. from the Gathering of Fruits. Some will have it to be observ'd in Honour of Ceres and Bacchus^b; they being the two Deities, who had a peculiar Care of the Fruits of the Earth. But Euseb. i. telleth us, that there was also a solemn Procession at this Time in Honour of Neptune; and addeth farther, that all the Gods had a Share in the Offerings at this Festival; as appears also from Homer's own Words, who tells us, that Diana's Anger against Oeneus was caus'd by his Neglect of sacrificing to her at this Festival wherein all the rest of the Gods had been feasted by him;

Καὶ γὰρ τίσι κακὸν χρυσόθρονος Ἀρτεμις ἄρσε
Χάσσε μὲν' ὅτ' οἱ ἔτι θαλύσια γενῶ ἀλαῶς
Οἰνὸς βῆξ', ἄλλοι δ' ἑοὶ δαίνυνθ' ἐκατόμβας,
Οἷη δ' ἔκ' ἔρριξε Διὸς κέρη μεγάλοιο.

Diana, much incens'd, that Oeneus had
To all the other Gods Oblations made,
And not to her his grateful First-fruits paid,
Sent down this Evil to revenge his Crime.

H. H.

Hence comes Θαλύσι⊕ ἄρῃ⊕, sometimes call'd Θάργυλλ⊕^c, which was the first Bread made of the new Corn. Some there are, that will have θαλύσια to be a general Name for all the Festivals, wherein they carry'd τὰς θαλλὰς, i. e. green Boughs.

Θ Α Ρ Γ Η Α Ι Α,

An Athenian Festival in Honour of the Sun, and his Attendants the Hours; or, as others think, of Delian Apollo, and Diana. It was celebrated upon the sixth and seventh Days of Thargelion; and receiv'd its Name from Θαργῆλια, which is a general Word for all the Fruits of the Earth, because one of the chief Ceremonies was the carrying about their First-fruits in Pots call'd Θάργυλλοι, which Name was also apply'd to the Εἰρεσιῶναι, which were carry'd about the City at this Time, and shall be describ'd in the Festival call'd Πυανέψια. The chief Solemnity was upon the latter Day, the former being wholly taken up in making Preparations for it; at which Time it was customary to lustrate the City, which was done by two Persons, call'd by the general Name of Φαρμακοί, which is apply'd to all that purify'd Cities; or the more pecular one of Σύμβακχι. They were both Men; or, according to others, a Man and Woman; one of which represented the Male, the other the Female Sex, and offer'd a Sacrifice for each of them: It was usual for the Man to carry about his Neck Figs, call'd ἰσχαδες, of a blackish Colour; and the Woman white. The ordinary Rites in purifying Cities are thus describ'd by *John Tzetzes*¹;

Ο φαρμακός, τὸ καθαρχα, τοῖσ'τον ἦν τὸ πάλαι
 Ἀν συμφορὰ κατέλαβε πόλιν θείωνία,
 Εἶπεν λαίμας, εἶπε λιμός, εἶπε κ' ἑλκός ἄλλο
 Τῶν πάντων ἀμορφότερον, ἦγον ἄς πρὸς θυσίαν,
 Εἰς καθαρχὸν κ' φαρμακὸν πόλιος τῆς νοσῆσης,
 Εἰς τόπον ἢ τὸν πρόσφορον σῆσαντες τὴν θυσίαν,
 Τυρὸν τε δόντες τῇ χυρὶ κ' μάζαν, κ' ἰσχαδας,
 Ἐπτάκις κ' ῥαπίσαντες ἐκίνον εἰς τὸ τότε
 Σκύλλαις, συκαῖς ἀγρίαις τε, κ' ἄλλοις τῶν ἀγρίων,
 Τέλος πυρὶ κατίκων ἐν ξύλοις τοῖς ἀγρίαις,
 Καὶ τὸν σποδὸν εἰς θάλατταν ἔβρανον εἰς ἀνέμους,
 Εἰς καθαρχὸν τῆς πόλιος, ὡς ἐφ' ἡμῶν, τῆς νοσῆσης

Thus was in ancient Times Lustration made:
 When any City groan'd beneath the Weight
 Of Famine, Plague, or worse Calamity,
 Forthwith a grateful Victim is prepar'd,
 Which at the holy Altar when they've plac'd,
 They cast upon the Pile, Cheefe, Cakes and Figs;
 Then striking seven times its Privities
 With Sea-leeks, and Wild Figs, and other Fruits, Rude Nature's Product without Help of Art,
 Burn it with Wood cut from unplanted Trees,
 Then tow'rd's the Wind the sportive Ashes cast
 Upon the Sea: Thus they the dreadful Ills,
 With which the City labour'd, drive away.

H. H.

Poetical Fictions tell us, that the φαρμακός was so call'd from one Pharmacus, that stole some of the consecrated Vessels of Apollo, and being apprehended in the Fact by Achilles's Soldiers, suffer'd Death; of which Crime and Punishment the Athenians had always a Representation at this Festival. The φαρμακός was call'd Κεχρησῆσις, from a sort of Figs, call'd κεχρησαι, and us'd in Lustrations; whence also κεχρησῆσις νόμος was a Tune upon the Flute, which was play'd as he went to perform his Office. It was farther customary for a Choir of Singing-men to contend for Victory, and the Conqueror to dedicate a Tripos in the Pytheum, a Temple of Apollo, built by Pisistratus. At this Festival the Athenians enroll'd their adopted Sons in the publick Register, as they did their Natural at Apaturia. During the Solemnity, it was un-

Θ Ε Σ Μ Ο Φ Ο Ρ Ι Α ,

A Festival in Honour of Ceres, firnam'd Θεσιμοφόρος, i. e. *Legifera, the Lawgiver, because she was the first that taught Mankind the Use of Laws. The first Institution of it is by some attributed to Triptolemus, by others to Orpheus, and by others to the Daughters of Danaüs. It was celebrated in many of the Grecian Cities; by the Spartans and Milesians, amongst whom the Solemnity lasted three Days: By the Drymeans in Phocis, the Thebans in Bœotia, the Megarians: By the Syracusians, where, towards the End of the Solemnity, they carried in Procession the Secrets of a Woman, compos'd of Jasmin and Honey, and called in Sicily μυλλοί: By the Eretrians in Eubœa, where it was customary on this Occasion to roast their Meat by the Heat of the Sun: By the Delians, who used to bake Loaves of a large Size, called Αχάϊνοι, which they usher'd in with great Solemnity, the Bearers of them crying, Αχάϊνω σέπτ' ἔμπλεον τρέζον.

Hence the Festival is sometimes called Μεγαλήρεια.

But the Athenians observed this Festival with the greatest Shew of Devotion: The Worshippers were free-born Women, (it being unlawful for any of servile Condition to be present) whose Husbands were wont to defray the Charges of the Solemnity; and were obliged to do so, if their Wives Portion amounted to three Talents. These Women were assisted by a Priest, called Στεφανοφόρος, because his Head was adorned with a Crown, whilst he executed his Office; as also by certain Virgins, who were strictly confined, and kept under severe Discipline, being maintained at the publick Charge, in a Place called Θεσιμοφορεῖον. The Women were clad in white Apparel, to intimate their spotless Innocence, and were obliged to the strictest Chastity for five or three Days before, and during the whole Time of the Solemnity, which lasted four Days: For which End they used to strew upon their Beds such Herbs, as were thought to destroy all Appetite to Venercal Pleasures: such were Agnus-castus, Flea-bane, and (which were made use of by the Milesian Women) Vine-branches, &c. It was held unlawful to eat the Kernels of Pomegranates, or to adorn themselves with Garlands; every thing being carry'd on with the greatest Appearance of Seriousness and Gravity, and nothing tolerated, that bore the least Shew of Wantonness and Immodesty, or even of Mirth and Jollity, the Custom of jesting upon one another excepted, which was constantly done in Memory of Iambe, that by a taunting jest extorted a Smile from Ceres, when she was in a pensive and melancholy Humour. Three Days, at least, were spent in making Preparations for the Festival: Upon the eleventh of Pyanepson, the Women carrying Books upon their Heads, wherein the Laws were contain'd in Memory of Ceres's Invention, went to Eleusis, where the Solemnity was kept; whence this Day was call'd Ἀνοδος, i. e. the Ascent. Upon the fourteenth the Festival began, and lasted till the seventeenth:

* Virgilius Æneid. iv.

Upon the sixteenth they kept a Fast, sitting upon the Ground, in token of Humiliation; whence the Day was call'd Νηστεία, i. e. a Fast. It was usual at this Solemnity to pray to Ceres, Proserpina, Pluto, and Calligenia: This Calligenia some will have to have been Ceres's Nurse, others her Priestess, others her Waiting-maid; and some there are who make her the same with Ceres; but these seem to be sufficiently refuted by the Testimony of Aristophanes, who mentions her as distinct from that Goddess *;

Εὐχέσθε τῶν Θεσμοφόρων,
 Τῇ Δήμητρει, καὶ τῇ Κόρῃ,
 Τῷ Πλούτῳ, καὶ τῇ Καλλιγυείᾳ.

To the two Legislators make your Prayers,
 To Ceres, and to Goddess Proserpine;
 To Pluto too, and Calligenia.

And this Custom was omitted by the Eretrians alone of all the Grecians. There was likewise a mysterious Sacrifice, call'd Δίωσμα, or Απεδίωσμα, ἀπὸ τῆς θιακείης ἐκείθεν τῶν ἀνδρῶν, i. e. because all Men were excluded, and banish'd from it; or, ἀπὸ τῆς δουχθλιῶν τῶν πολέμων, i. e. because in a dangerous War, the Women's Prayers were so prevalent with the Gods, that their Enemies were defeated, and put to Flight as far as Chalcis; whence it is sometimes call'd Χαλκιδικὸν Δίωσμα. There was another Sacrifice call'd Ζημία, i. e. a Mulct, which was offer'd as an Expiation of any Irregularities which happen'd during the Solemnity. At the Beginning of all this Festival, Prisoners committed to Gaol for smaller Faults, that is, such as did make them incapable of communicating in the Sacrifices, and other Parts of Divine Worship, were releas'd †.

Θ Η Σ Ε Ι Α,

An Athenian Festival in Memory of Theseus: It was celebrated upon the eighth Day of every Month, because he was the reputed Son of Neptune, to whom those Days were held sacred; or because in his first Journey from Træzen, he arriv'd at Athens upon the eighth of Hecatombæon; or in Memory of his safe Return from Crete †, which happen'd upon the eighth of Pyanepson, for which reason the Festival was observ'd with greater Solemnity upon that Day, than at any other Times. Some also there are, that will have it to have been first instituted in Memory of Theseus's uniting the Athenians into one Body, who before lay dispers'd in little Hamlets up and down in Attica. It was celebrated with Sports and Games, with Mirth and Banquets, and such as were poor and unable to contribute to them were entertain'd upon free Cost at the publick Tables, as we learn from Aristophanes †. The Sacrifices were call'd Ογδόσια, from Ογδοῦ, i. e. the Eighth, as being offer'd upon the eighth Day of the Month †.

A Theban Festival, the very same with Ἡρακλεία ⁿ. It was instituted in Honour of Hercules, and his Companion Iolaüs, who assisted him against Hydra. It lasted several Days, on the first of which were offer'd solemn Sacrifices: On the next Day Horse-races, and the Exercises of the παντοθλα ^o were perform'd: The following Day was set apart for Wrestling. The Victors were crown'd with Garlands of Myrtle, which were us'd as Funeral Solemnities, of which sort this Festival was one. They were also sometimes rewarded with Tripods of Brass. The Place of these Exercises was call'd Ιολαεῖον from Iolaüs. In the same Place stood the Sepulchre of Amphitryon, and the Cenotaphium, or honorary Monument of Iolaüs, who was buried in Sardinia: Both these at this Solemnity were bestrew'd with Garlands and Flowers ^o.

All that were initiated into these Mysteries were thought effectually secur'd from Storms at Sea, and all other Dangers ¹. The chief Ceremony was thus: The Person that offer'd himself being crown'd with Olive-branches, and girded about his Loins with a Purple Ribband, was plac'd upon a Throne, around which the Priests and Persons before initiated danced and sported: This was call'd Ἐγώνως, or Ἐγώνιας, i. e. Enthronization ².

Κ Α Ρ Ν Ε Ι Α,

A Festival observ'd in most of the Cities of Greece; but especially at Sparta, where it was first instituted about the Time of the XXVith Olympiad, in Honour, not of Jupiter, as some are of Opinion, but of Apollo, firnam'd Carneus, either from one Carneus a Trojan^a; or from a beautiful Youth call'd Carnus, who was the Son of Jupiter and Europa^b, and below'd by Apollo^c: Or from Carnus an Acarnian, who was instructed by this God in the Art of Divination, but afterwards murder'd by the Dorians: This Fact Apollo reveng'd upon them by a dreadful Plague; to avert which, they instituted this Festival, as Pausanias reports: ἀπὸ τῆς κερναΐας, i. e. from the Cornel-Tree, by transposing the Letter ρ, as the same Author intimates: For 'tis reported by some, that the Festival was instituted by the Græcians, who had incurr'd Apollo's Displeasure by cutting down a Number of Cornel-Trees in a Grove consecrated to him upon Mount Ida, which they used in building the Wooden-horse: Or, ἐπὶ τῆς κερναΐας, i. e. from accomplishing the Request of Mene-laus^d, who, when he undertook his Expedition against Troy, made a Vow to Apollo, wherein he promis'd to pay him some signal Honour, if his Undertaking met with Success. This Festival lasted nine Days, beginning upon the thirteenth of the Month Carneus, which answer'd to the Athenian Metagitnion^e: It was an Imitation of the Method of living, and Discipline us'd in Camps; for nine σκιάσεις, i. e. Tents, were erected, in every one of which nine Men of three different Tribes, three being chosen out of a Tribe, liv'd for the space of nine Days, during which Time they were obedient to a publick Cryer, and did nothing without express Order from him^f. Hesychius tells us, that the Priest, whose Office it was to attend at this Solemnity, was nam'd Αγνῆς, and adds in another Place, that out of every Tribe five other Ministers were elected, and call'd Καρνεῖσθαι, and obliged to continue in their Function four Years, during which Time they remain'd Batchelors. At this Festival the Musical Numbers, call'd Καρνεῖοι νόμοι, were sung by Musicians, who contended for Victory. The first Prize was won by Terpander.

Κ Α Ρ Τ Α, or Κ Α Ρ Τ Α Τ Ι Σ,

A Festival in Honour of Diana^g, firnamed Caryathis, from Caryum in Laconia, where this Solemnity was kept. It was usual for Virgins to meet at the Celebration, and join in a certain Dance, said to be invented by Castor and Pollux, which they call'd καρνατίζειν^h. In the Time of Xerxes's Invasion, when the Laconians durst not shew their Heads for fear of the Enemy, lest the Goddess's Anger should be incurr'd by the Intermission of this Solemnity, the neighbouring Swains assembled in the accusom'd Place, and sung Pastorals, which were call'd βουκολισμοὶ, from βουκόλος, i. e. a Neat-herd. Hence some are of Opinion that Bucolicks came first to be in Use.

ΚΟΤΥΤΤΙΑ, or ΚΟΤΥΤΤΙΣ,

A Nocturnal Festival in Honour of Cotys, or Cotyto, the Goddess of Wantonness †: It was observ'd by the Athenians, Corinthians, Cibians, Thracians, with others, and celebrated with such Rites as were most acceptable to the Goddess, who was thought to be delighted with nothing so much, as Lewdness and Debauchery. Her Priests were call'd Βαπταί, which Name we find in Juvenal; it seems to have been deriv'd από τῆς βάπτεω, i. e. from Dying or Painting themselves; for they were wont to practise all sorts of effeminate and meretricious Arts; whence Κόπη & Διασώτης, i. e. the Votary of Cotys, is proverbially apply'd to Men that spend their Time in Dressing and Perfuming themselves.

Λ Α Κ Ε Δ Α Ι Μ Ο Ν Ι Ω Ν Ε Ο Ρ Τ Α Ι,

Some Festivals there were at Lacedæmon, the Names whereof are forgotten: One of these is mention'd by Plutarch in his Love-Stories, at which the Marry'd Women, Maidens, Children, and Servants, feasted all together promiscuously; only the Ladies, whose Husbands were Magistrates, watch'd all Night in a large Room by themselves.

Another we find in Athenæus[†] at which the Women took all the old Batchelors, and dragg'd them round an Altar, beating them all the time with their Fists; to the End, that if no other Motives would induce them to marry, the Shame and Ignominy they were expos'd to at these Times might compel them to it.

Λ Α Φ Ρ Ι Α,

An Anniversary Festival at Patræ in Achaia, in Honour of Diana * firmam'd Laphria, either Ἐπὶ τῶν λαούρων, i. e. from Spoils, which she took from Wild Beasts, because she was the Goddess of Hunting, and her Statue, which was compos'd of Gold and Ivory, represented her in an hunting Posture: Or because she desisted from her Anger, and became every Year ἐλασσοτέρα, i. e. more favourable and propitious to Oeneus, King of the Calydonians: Or, from one Laphrius a Phocensian, by whom her Statue was erected in Calydonia; for this Title was first given to Diana in Calydonia, and thence, together with her Statue, translated to Patræ. The Customs at this Festival are thus described by Pausanias: At the Approach of the Festival, they made an Ascent to the Altar, heaping up soft Earth in the manner of Stairs; round the Altar they plac'd in order Pieces of green Wood, every one of which was in length sixteen Cubits; upon it was laid the driest Wood they could get. The Solemnity lasted two Days; on the former of which there was a solemn Procession follow'd by Diana's Priests, who was a Virgin, and rode in a Chariot drawn by Bucks. On the Day following they assembled to offer Sacrifices, which consisted of Birds, Bears, Bucks, Lions, Wolves, with all sorts of Animals, and Garden-Fruits, which were cast upon the Altar, in part by private Persons, and partly at the publick Charge; then the Fire being kindled, it sometimes happen'd, that the Wild Beasts, having their Fetters loos'd by the Flames, leaped off the Altar, which fell out when my Author was present, yet neither then, nor at any time before, did any Person receive the least Harm thereby.

Upon this there was an Oration pronounc'd on that Hero, and Sports, in which none were allow'd to contend, but Free-born Spartans.

A Festival of Bacchus ^d firnam'd Lenæus, from ληνός, i. e. Wine-press. It was celebrated in the Month Lenæon with several Ceremonies used at other Festivals of this God; but what more especially recommended it, was the poetical Contention, wherein Poets strove for Victory, and the Tragedies acted at this Time.

Α Τ Κ Ε Ι Α,

A Festival held at Argos to Apollo Λύκειο. This Name, as also that other Λυκοκτονο, was deriv'd from his delivering the Argives from Wolves (λύκοι) which wasted their Country. In Memory of which Benefit they dedicated a Temple to Apollo Lycæus, and call'd one of their publick Fora, ἀγορὰ Λύκειο, the Lycean Forum. Several other Reasons are assign'd, why the foremention'd Names were given to Apollo: As that he defended the Flock of Admetus King of Thessaly from Wolves: or that he was born in Lycia, whence he is call'd Λυκηνγενής by Homer; to mention no more¹.

Solemn Sacrifices offer'd by the Athenians in Mæmæsterion, which was a Winter-month, to Jupiter Μαιμακτής, to induce him to send mild and temperate Weather, because he was usually taken for the Air or Heavens, and therefore thought to preside over the Seasons. There are various Reasons assign'd for his Surname, for μαιμακτής is by Harpocration expounded ἐνθουσιώδης ἢ παρακτικός, i. e. outrageous, and furious; being deriv'd from μαμάσσει, which is, according to Suidas, κλονεῖ δαι, κυματίζουσα, i. e. to trouble, or raise Commotions. But Hesychius affixeth a quite different Signification to it, for, according to him, μαιμακτής is the same with μελιχίος, i. e. favourable and propitious; and herein Plutarch agrees with him, who tells us^m, “ That 'twas his Opinion, “ that by the Name of Μαιμακτής, which was given by the Athenians “ to the King of the Gods, was meant μελιχίος.” Neither of these Significations are at all disagreeable to the Design of this Festival; for, since it was to procure good Weather, it might either be instituted as ertainments, which were made by the richer Sort, to whose Tables the Poor flock'd in great Numbers. The Athenians at these Times offer'd solemn Prayers and Sacrifices for the Prosperity of their Commonwealth the ensuing Month, in Erechtheus's Temple in the Citadel, which was kept by a Dragon, to which they gave (as was usual also in Trophonius's Cave) a Honey-cake call'd $\mu\alpha\lambda\iota\tau\eta\tilde{\nu}\sigma\tau\alpha$. Neither were the Gods only worshipp'd at this Solemnity, but also the Demi-Gods and Heroes: Plutarch^b relates that the Greeks on their New Moons first worshipp'd ($\Theta\epsilon\tilde{\nu}\sigma\iota$) the Gods, afterwards ($\text{\textit{\textit{H}\textit{r}\textit{w}\textit{a}\textit{s}}}$ χ $\text{D}\textit{a}\textit{i}\textit{m}\textit{o}\textit{n}\textit{a}\textit{s}$) the Heroes and Dæmons. These Sacrifices, because they were offer'd every Month, were call'd $\tilde{\kappa}\mu\mu\lambda\omega\ \text{i}\tilde{\epsilon}\sigma\theta\acute{\iota}$, or $\delta\tilde{\eta}\mu\lambda\omega\iota\alpha$, and those that perform'd them $\tilde{\epsilon}\tilde{\tau}\mu\lambda\omega\iota\sigma\iota$, as also $\alpha\tilde{\gamma}\chi\epsilon\mu\acute{o}\nu\epsilon\varsigma$.

Σ

ΞΑΝΘΙΚΑ,

A Macedonian Festival; so call'd because it was observ'd in the Month Xanthus, which, as Suidas tells us, was the same with April. At this Time the Army was purify'd by a solemn Lustration, the Manner of which was thus: They divided a Bitch into two Halves, one of which, together with the Entrails, was plac'd upon the Right-hand, the other upon the Left; between these the Army march'd in this Order: After the Arms of the Macedonian Kings, came the first Part of the Army, consisting (I suppose) of Horse; these were followed by the King and his Children, after whom went the Life-guards; then follow'd the rest of the Army: This done, the Army was divided into two Parts, one of which being set in Array against the other, then follow'd a short Encounter in Imitation of a Fight.

Ο Μ Ο Λ Ι Α.

A Theban Festival in Honour of Jupiter Homolœus, or Ceres Homolœia^m, who were so call'd from Homole in Bœotia, or the Prophets Homolœia, or from $\delta\mu\omicron\lambda\theta$, which in the Æolian Dialect signifies peaceable.

Ο Σ Χ Ο Φ Ο Ρ Ι Α, or Ω Σ Χ Ο Φ Ο Ρ Ι Α,

An Athenian Festival, so call'd $\alpha\pi\omicron\ \tau\epsilon\ \phi\acute{\epsilon}\rho\epsilon\iota\nu\ \tau\alpha\varsigma\ \delta\omicron\gamma\alpha\iota$, i. e. from carrying Boughs hung with Grapes, which were term'd $\delta\omicron\gamma\alpha\iota$ ⁿ. The Institution and Manner of it are describ'd at large by Plutarch in the Life of Theseus. His Words run thus: "Theseus at his Return from Crete forgot to hang out the white Sail, which should have been the Token of their Safety to Ægeus, who, knowing nothing of their Success, for Grief threw himself headlong from a Rock, and perish'd in the Sea. But Theseus, being arriv'd at the Port Phalerus, paid there the Sacrifices which he had vow'd to the Gods at his setting out to Sea, and sent a Herald to the City to carry the News of his safe Return. At his Entrance into the City, the Herald found the People for the most part full of Grief for the Loss of their King; others, as may be well believ'd, as full of Joy for the Message that he had brought, and wholly bent to make much of him, and crown him with Garlands for so acceptable News; these indeed he accepted of, but hung them upon his Herald's Staff, and thus returning to the Sea-side, before Theseus had finish'd his Libation to the Gods, stay'd without for fear of disturbing the holy Rites; but as soon as the Sacrifice was ended, he entered and related the whole Story of the King's Death; upon the hearing of which, with great Lamentations, and a confus'd Tumult of Grief, they run with all Haste to the City: Whence, they say, it comes that at this Feast Oschophoria, not the Herald, but his Staff is crown'd; and that the People then present still break out at the Sacrifice into this Shout, $\epsilon\lambda\epsilon\lambda\theta\epsilon\ \iota\delta\epsilon\ \iota\delta\epsilon$, of which confus'd Sounds the first was wont to be us'd by Men in Haste, or at Triumph; the others are proper to Men in any Trouble or Consternation." It is probable that these are the $\delta\omicron\gamma\omicron\sigma\sigma\omicron\epsilon\iota\kappa\acute{\alpha}\ \mu\acute{\epsilon}\lambda\lambda\eta$, which are mention'd by Proclus^o.

A little after my Author proceeds thus: "The Festival call'd Oschophoria, which to this Day the Athenians celebrate, was then first instituted by Theseus; for he took not with him the full Number of Virgins, which were chosen by Lots to be carried away, but selected two Youths, with whom he had an intimate Familiarity, of fair and womanish Faces, but of manly and courageous Spirits, and having by frequent Bathings, and avoiding the Heat and Scorching of the Sun, with a constant Use of the Ointments, Washes and Dresses, that serve to adorn the Head, smoothe the Skin, or improve the Complexion; chang'd them, in a manner, from what they were be“ fore ; and having taught them farther to counterfeit the very Voice, Gesture, and Gait of Virgins, so that there could not be the least Difference perceiv'd ; he, undiscover'd by any, put them into the Number of the Athenian Maids design'd for Crete. At his Return, he and these two Youths led up a solemn Procession with Boughs and Vine-branches in their Hands, in the same Habit that is now worn at the Celebration of the Oschophoria : These Branches they carry'd in Honour of Bacchus and Ariadne, in Memory of the Fable related of them ; or rather, because they happen'd to return in Autumn, the Time of gathering Grapes. The Women call'd Δειπνοφόροι, i. e. Supper-Carriers, were taken into these Ceremonies, and assisted at the Sacrifice in Remembrance and Imitation of the Mothers of the young Men and Virgins, upon whom the Lot fell ; for thus busily did they run about, bringing Banquets and Refreshments to their Children : And because the good Women then told their Sons and Daughters a great many fine Tales and Stories, to comfort and encourage them under the Danger they were going upon, it has therefore still continu'd a Custom, that at this Festival old Tales and Fables should be the chief Discourse. For all these Particularities we are beholden to the History of Demon.” Besides the Rites already described out of Plutarch, there was always a Race at this Festival^p ; the Contenders were young Men elected out of every Tribe, whose Parents were both living ; they ran from Bacchus's Temple to that of Minerva Sciras in the Phalerian Haven ; the Place where the Race ended was called Ωροζόειον, from the ὄραι, Boughs, which the Runners carried in their Hands, and deposited there. The Conqueror's Reward was a Cup call'd Πενταπλόα, or Πενταπλῆ, i. e. Five-fold, because it contain'd a Mixture of five things, viz. Wine, Honey, Cheefe, Meal, and a little Oil.

Θήναια. Some are of Opinion, that it was much the same with the Roman Quinquatria, whence it is usual to call it by that Name in Latin. At the first it continued only one Day, but afterwards was prolong'd several Days, and celebrated with greater Preparations, and Magnificence than was usual in the primitive Times.

There were two Solemnities of this Name, one of which was call'd Μεγάλα Παναθήναια, i. e. the great Panathenæa, and was celebrated once in five Years, beginning upon the XXII^d of Hecatombæon. The other was call'd Μικρά Παναθήναια, i. e. the lesser Panathenæa, and was kept every third Year; or rather, as some think, every Year, beginning upon the XXIst, or XXth of Thargelion. In the latter of these there were three Games manag'd by ten Presidents, elected out of all the ten Tribes of Athens, who continu'd in Office four Years. On the first Day at Athen, there was a Race with Torches, wherein first Footmen, and afterwards Horsemen contended: The same Custom was likewise observ'd in the greater Festival. The second Contention was ἐκαστήριον ἀγών, i. e. a Gymnical Exercise, so call'd because the Combatants therein gave a Proof of their Strength, or Manhood. The Place of these Games was near the River, and call'd from this Festival παναθηναϊκόν: The Stadium being decay'd by Time, was rebuilt of white Pentelick Marble by Herodes, a Native of Athens, with such Splendor and Magnificence, that the most stately Theatres could not compare with it. The last was a Musical Contention, first instituted by Pericles: In the Songs us'd at this Time, they rehears'd the generous Undertakings of Harmodius and Aristogiton, who oppos'd the Tyranny of Pisistratus's Sons; as of Thraſybulus also, who deliver'd the Athenians from the thirty Tyrants, imposed on them by the Lacedæmonians. The first that obtained the Victory, by playing upon the Harp, was Phryxis a Mitylænæan: Other musical Instruments were also made use of, especially Flutes, on which they play'd in Concert: There was also a Dance perform'd by a Circular Chorus, of which hereafter: And the Poets contended in four Plays, the last whereof was a Satyr, and all together were nam'd from their Number πενταλογία. Beside these, there was a Contention at Sunium, in Imitation of a Sea-fight: The Conqueror in any of these Games was rewarded with a Vessel of Oil, which he was permitted to dispose of, how, and where he pleas'd, whereas it was unlawful for any other to transport that Commodity: Farther he received a Crown of those Olives which grew in the Academy, and were sacred to Minerva, and call'd Μοεῖαι, from μῆρ ⊕, i. e. Death, in Remembrance of the Misfortune of Halirrothius, the Son of Neptune, who, in a Rage at his Father's Defeat by Minerva, in their Contention about the Name of Athens, offering to cut down the Olive-tree, by the Production of which Minerva obtain'd the Victory, miss'd his Aim, and gave himself a fatal Blow: Others derive the Name from μῆρ ⊕, i. e. a Part, because, according to some, these Olives were given by Contribution, all Persons that possess'd Olive-trees being oblig'd to contribute their Proportions towards the Celebration of this Festival. Beside these, there was a certain Dance call'd Pyrrhichia, perform'd by young Boys in Armour, in Imitation of Minerva, who, in Triumph over the vanquish'd Sons of Titan, danc'd in that Manner. It was usual usual also, when Athens was brought under the Dominion of the Romans, for Gladiators to contend after the Roman Fashion. No Man was permitted to be present at any of these Games in dy'd Garments, and the Punishment of such Offenders was left to the Discretion of the Ἀγωνοδότης, or President of the Game. Lastly, they offer'd a sumptuous Sacrifice, towards which every one of the Athenian Boroughs contributed an Ox; and of the Flesh that remain'd, a publick Entertainment was made for the whole Assembly.

In the greater Festival most of the same Rites and Ceremonies were practis'd, but were (I suppose) perform'd with greater Splendor and Magnificence, and the Addition of some others, not observ'd in the Lesser, as particularly the Procession in which Minerva's sacred πέπλος, or Garment, was carry'd: This πέπλος was woven by a select Number of Virgins call'd Ἐργαστικαί, from ἔργον, i. e. Work; these were superintended by two of the Ἀρχηγοί, (of whom I have spoken before) and enter'd upon their Employment at the Festival Χαλκῆς, which was upon the thirtieth Day of Pyanestion: It was of a white Colour without Sleeves, and embroider'd with Gold: Upon it were describ'd the Achievements of Minerva, especially those against the Giants; Jupiter also, and the Heroes, with all such as were famous for valiant and noble Exploits, had their Effigies in it; whence Men of true Courage and Bravery are said to be ἀξιοί πέπλου, i. e. worthy to be pourtray'd in Minerva's sacred Garment, as in Aristophanes':

Εὐλογοῦνται βελοῦνθα τῶ πατέρας ἡμῶν, ὅπ
 Ἄνδρες ἦσαν εἰ γῆς ἀξιοί, καὶ τὸ πέπλου.

We will our Fathers treat with high Esteem,
 Whose brave Exploits are worthy Attica,
 Fit to be pourtray'd in Minerva's Vest.

With this πέπλος they made a solemn Procession, the Ceremonies of which were thus: In the Ceramicus without the City, there was an Engine built in the Form of a Ship, on purpose for this Solemnity; upon this the πέπλος was hung in the Manner of a Sail, and the whole was convey'd, not by the Beasts, as some have imagin'd, but by subterraneous Machines, to the Temple of Ceres Eleusinia, and from thence to the Citadel, where the πέπλος was put upon Minerva's Statue, which seems to have been laid upon a Bed strew'd with, or rather compos'd of Flowers, and call'd πλακίς. This Procession was made by Persons of all Ages, Sexes, and Qualities: It was led up by old Men together (as some say) with old Women, carrying Olive-branches in their Hands; whence they are call'd ἑλαιοφόροι, i. e. Bearers of Green Boughs: After these came the Men of full Age with Shields and Spears, being attended by the Μετοικοί, or Sojourners, who carry'd little Boats as a Token of their being Foreigners, and were upon that Account call'd Σκαυνοφόροι, i. e. Boat-bearers: Then follow'd the Women, attended by the Sojourners Wives, who were nam'd Υδροφόροι, from bearing Water-pots: These were follow'd by young Men singing Hymns to the Goddesses; they were crown'd with Millet: Next to these came select Virgins of the first Quality, call'd Κανηφόροι, i. e. Basket-bearers, because they carry'd certain Baskets which contain'd some Necessaries for the Celebration of the holy Rites, which (as also other Utensils requir'd at the Solemnity) were in the Custody of one, who, because he was chief Manager of the publick Poms, Processions, or Embassies to the Gods, was call'd Ἀρχιδέωρος, and were distributed by him as Occasion requir'd; these Virgins were attended by the Sojourners Daughters, who carry'd Umbrellas and little Seats, whence they were call'd Διορηφόροι, i. e. Seat-carriers: Lastly, it is probable that the Boys bore up the Rear; they walk'd in a sort of Coats worn at Processions, and call'd Πανδαμκοί. The Necessaries for this, as for all other Processions, were prepar'd in a publick Hall erected for that Use between the Piræan Gate and Ceres's Temple; and the Management and Care of the whole Business belong'd to the Νομοζύλακες, which Name denotes Officers appointed to see that the Laws, ancient Rites, and Customs be observ'd. It was farther usual at this Solemnity to make a Gaol-delivery, to present golden Crowns to such as had done any remarkable Service for the Commonwealth, and to appoint Men to sing some of Homer's Poems, which Custom was first introduc'd by Hipparchus, the Son of Pisistratus. Lastly, in the Sacrifices at this, and other Quinquennial Solemnities, it was customary to pray for the Prosperity of the Platæans, on Account of the Service they had done the Athenians at the Battle of Marathon, wherein they behav'd themselves with extraordinary Courage and Resolution.

* Equitibus.

ΠΑΝΔΙΑ,

An Athenian Festival * so called from Pandion, by whom it was first instituted; or because it was celebrated in Honour of Jupiter, who does τὰ πάντα δινδεν, i. e. move and turn all things which Way he pleaseth. Others are of Opinion, that it belong'd to the Moon, and received its Name, because she does παντοτε ἵεναι, i. e. move incessantly, for that the Moon appears both in the Night and Day; whereas the Sun shews himself by Day only, and was suppos'd to rest all Night. It was celebrated after the Διονυσια, or Festival of Bacchus, because that God is sometimes put for the Sun, or Apollo, and was by some reputed to be the Brother, by others the Son of the Moon.

ΠΑΝΙΩΝΙΑ,

A Festival celebrated (as the Name signifies) by a Concourse of People from all the Cities of Ionia ^b. The Place or Temple in which it was kept, was call'd Πανιώνιον. It was instituted in Honour of Neptune, firnam'd Heliconius, from Helice a City of Achaia, which afterwards perish'd by an Earthquake. One thing there was remarkable in this Festival, viz. That, if the Bull offer'd in Sacrifice happen'd to bellow, it was accounted an Omen of divine Favour, because that Sound was thought to be acceptable to Neptune: To this Homer is thought to allude in these Verses ^c.

Αὐτὰρ ὁ θυμὸν δ' ἰσθεῖ κ' ἤρην, ὡς ὅτι παῖρος

ΠΑΝΟΣ ΕΟΡΤΗ,

An anniversary Solemnity ^d in Honour of Pan at Athens, where he had a Temple near the Acropolis, the Dedication of which and the Institution of this Festival were upon this Account: When Darius the Persian invaded Attica, one Phidippides was dispatch'd on an Embassy to the Spartans, to desire their Assistance; and, as he was in his Journey about Mount Parthenius near Tegea, Pan met him, and calling him by his Name, bid him to ask the Athenians, What was the Reason why they had no Regard of him, who was their Friend, and had often been serviceable to them, and should continue so to be? Phidippides, at his Return to Athens, related this Vision, which obtain'd so great Credit with the Athenians, that they made a Decree that divine Honours should be paid to that God also.

Pan had likewise a Festival in Arcadia e, the Country he was believ'd most to frequent and delight in, at which they us'd to beat his Statue with Σκίλλαι, i. e. Sea-onions: The same was done when they mis'd of their Prey in Hunting, in Anger (as should seem) at the God, whom they reputed to be President of that Sport; to which Custom Theocritus seems to allude in these Verses,

Καὶ ἦν ταῦτ' ἔρδεις, ὦ Πᾶν φίλε, μὴ τί τι παῖδες
 Ἀρκάδιοι σκίλλαισιν ὑπὸ πλευρᾶς τε, καὶ ὤμων

Farther, it was customary to offer a scanty Sacrifice, the Reliques of which were not sufficient to entertain those that were present; because, perhaps, they thought the God had frustrated their Hopes of Prey in Hunting; on the contrary, when they had good Success, they were more liberal in paying Honours to him.

therefore the Temples (as upon all such Days) were surrounded with Ropes, so that no Man could have Admission: The Reason of which Custom, with a farther Account of this Solemnity, we have in Plutarch's Alcibiades; "The Festival (saith he) of the Goddesses Minerva, call'd Πλουτήσια, was celebrated on the twenty-sixth of Thargelion, with certain mysterious Observances unlawful to be reveal'd, which were perform'd by Persons call'd Περαξιεργίδαι, who divested the Goddess's Image of all its Ornaments, and kept it close cover'd: Whence it is, that the Athenians esteem this Day most inauspicious, and never go about any thing of Importance upon it: And therefore, it falling out that Alcibiades's Return from Exile happening upon this Day, many were much concern'd at it, looking upon the Time of his Arrival to be a dangerous Omen, and imagining that the Goddesses did not graciously receive him, but, in Token of Displeasure, hid her Face from him: But, for all this, Things went on prosperously and succeeded according to his Wish." Farther, it was customary at this Festival, to bear in Procession a Cluster of Figs, which was call'd Ηγυρία or Ηγύτρια, from ηγύομαι, which signifies to lead the Way, because Figs were ηγέμονες τῆς κλάδου βίβ, i. e. Leaders to Humanity, and a civil Course of Life: For when Men left off their ancient and barbarous Diet of Acorns, the next Thing they us'd for Food was Figs.

The first Institution of these Sacrifices was by the Command of one Autbias a Prophet, who gave out that this was the only Method to appease the incens'd Goddesses, who had at that Time afflicted not Athens only, where this Solemnity was observ'd, but all the other Parts of Greece, with a grievous Famine.

Π Τ Α Ν Ε Ψ Ι Α,

An Athenian^a Festival, sometimes call'd πειροψία, or πειροψία, ὅπ' πάντας εἶδ' ὄν καρπὸς τῆ ὄψει, i. e. because Theseus and his Companions were entertain'd with all Manner of Fruits; the former and more usual Name is deriv'd ἀπὸ τῆ ἔλειν πύρα, i. e. from boiling Pulse, as was usual upon that Day; the Reason of which Custom, with a farther Account of this Solemnity, I will give you in the Words of Plutarch:
 “ Theseus, after the Funeral of his Father, pay'd his Vows to Apollo upon the seventh of Pyaneftion; for, on that Day, the Youths that return'd with him safe from Crete, made their Entry into the City.
 “ They say also, that the Custom of boiling Pulse was deriv'd from hence, because the young Men that escap'd, put all that was left of their Provision together, and boiling it in one common Pot, feasted themselves with it, and with great Rejoicing did eat all together.
 “ Hence also they carry about an Olive-branch bound about with Wool (such as they then made use of in their Supplications) which was call'd Εἰρεπώνη, (from εἶρη, i. e. Wool) and crown'd with all Sorts of First-fruits, to signify that Scarcity and Barrenness were ceas'd, singing in their Procession this Song:

Εἰρεσιῶν, σῦκα φέρων, ἢ πόντος ἄρτους,
 Καὶ μέλι ἐν κοτύλῃ, ἢ ἔλαιον ἀναψύσσεται,
 Καὶ κίρκ' εὐζωρον, ὡς ἀν' μεθύουσα καθύδης.

Eiresone, Figs produce,
 And wholesome Bread, and chearful Oil,
 And Honey, labouring Bees sweet Toil,
 But above all Wine's noble Juice;
 Then Cares thou in the Cup shalt steep,
 And full of Joy receive soft Sleep.

Mr. Duke.

“ Tho' some are of Opinion, that this Custom is retain'd in Memory of the Heraclidæ, who were thus entertain'd, and brought up by the Athenians: But the former Account is more generally receiv'd.” It may be added farther, that the Εἰρεπώνη, when it was carried about in Honour of Apollo, was of Laurel; when of Minerva, of Olive; because those Trees were believ'd to be most acceptable to these Deities: When the Solemnity was ended, it was customary for them to erect it before their House-doors, thinking it an Amulet, whereby Scarcity and Want were prevented.

Others^h are of Opinion, that this Solemnity was in Honour of Bacchus firnam'd Sabazius, from the Sabæ, who were a People of Thrace; and 'tis probable this Festival was not first instituted by the Grecians, but deriv'd to them from the Barbarians (such were the Thracians reputed) amongst whom, Suidas tells us, σαβαζον was the same with εβαζον, i. e. to shout, εβοει, as was usual in the Festival of Bacchus: Add to this, that Bacchus's Priests were by the Thracians call'd σαβαί.

An anniversary Solemnity at Athens^o, upon the twelfth Day of Scirophorion, in Honour of Minerva, or, as some say, of Ceres and Proserpina. The Name is derived from Sciras, a Borough between Athens and Eleusis, where there was a Temple dedicated to Minerva, firnam'd Sciras, from that Place: Or from one Scirus, an Inhabitant of Eleusis; or from Sciron of Salamis; or from σκίον, i. e. Chalk, or white Plaster, of which the Statue dedicated to Minerva by Theseus, when he return'd from Crete, was compos'd: Or from σκίον, i. e. an Umbrella, which was at this Time carry'd in Procession by Erecheus's Priest, or some of the sacred Family of Butas, who, to distinguish them from others that made false Pretensions to that Kindred, were call'd Ετεροεπίδααι, i. e. the genuine Off-spring of Butas: Those that order'd this Procession were wont to make use of Διός κώδια, i. e. the Skins of Beasts sacrific'd to Jupiter, firnam'd Μελίχιον, and Κτήσιον, of which Titles I have spoken before. Farther, there was at this Festival a Race call'd Οσχορβεία, because the young Men that contended therein, did φέρειν τὰς ὄσχας, i. e. carry in their Hands Vine-branches full of Grapes.

TONEIA,

The Institution and Manner of this Solemnity are describ'd in Athenæus, who tells us it was kept at Samos: The chief Ceremony consisted in carrying Juno's Image to the Sea-shore, and offering Cakes to it, and then restoring it to its former Place; which was done in Memory of its being stolen by the Tyrrhenians, and (when their Ships were stay'd in the Haven by an invisible Force, which hinder'd them from making away) expos'd upon the Shore. A Festival at Rhodes ⁿ in the Month Boedromion, wherein the Boys went from Door to Door begging, and singing a certain Song, the doing which was call'd χελιδνίζεν, and the Song itself was nam'd Χελιδνίσμα, because it was begun with an Invocation of the Χελιδών, or Swallow:
 It is set down at large in ^o Athenæus, and begins thus:

Ωρας ἀγύσσα, &c.

It's said to have been compos'd by Cleobulus the Lindian, as an Artifice to get Money in a Time of publick Calamity. In like manner, to sing the Song wherein a Raven, in Greek Κορῶν, was invoc'd, they call'd κρορνίζεν. And it seems to have been customary for Beggars to go about and sing for Wages; so Homer is said to have done, earning his Living by finging a Song call'd Εἰρεσιῶν.

An anniversary Day kept by the Hermionians, in Honour of Ceres, surnam'd Chthonia, either because she was Goddess of the Earth, which is call'd in Greek Χθών, or from a Damsel of that Name, whom Ceres carry'd from Argolis to Hermione, where she dedicated a Temple to the Goddess. The manner of this Festival is thus described by Pausanias^m:
 " Ceres herself is nam'd Chthonia, and under that Title is honour'd with " a Festival, celebrated every Summer in this Method: A Proceffion " is led up by the Priests of the Gods, and the Magistrates that Year in " Office, who are follow'd by a Crowd of Men and Women; the Boys
 " also make a solemn Proceffion in Honour of the Goddess, being in " white Apparel, and having upon their Heads Crowns compos'd of a " Flower, which is by them call'd Κομοσάνδαλον, but seems to be the " same with Hyacinth, as appears as well by the Bigness and Colour, as
 " from the Letters inscrib'd upon it in Memory of the untimely Death " of Hyacinthus. This Proceffion is follow'd by Persons that drag an " Heifer untam'd, and newly taken from the Herd, fast bound to the " Temple, where they let her loose; which being done, the Door-
 " keepers, who till then had kept the Temple-gates open, make all fast,
 " and four old Women being left within, and arm'd with Scithes, they " pursue the Heifer and dispatch her, as soon as they are able, by cut" ting her Throat. Then the Doors being open'd, certain appointed " Persons put a second Heifer into the Temple, afterwards a third, and " then a fourth, all which the old Women kill in the fore-mention'd
 " manner; and, 'tis observable, that all fall on the same Side."

Sports and Mirth, sacrificing a Ram to Ceres, worshipp'd in a Temple in or near the Acropolis of Athens, under the Title of $\chi\lambda\acute{o}\eta$, which Name, tho' Pausanias thought to bear a hidden and mystical Sense, understood by none but the Priests themselves, yet perhaps it may be derived from $\chi\lambda\acute{o}\nu$, i. e. Grass, because Ceres was Goddess of the Earth, and all the Fruits thereof; and is the same with the Epithet of $\epsilon\upsilon\chi\lambda\acute{o}\theta$, or fertile, which is apply'd to her by Sophocles 9.

Where this Conjecture seems to be approv'd by the Scholiast, who tells us, that Ceres, firnam'd $\epsilon\upsilon\chi\lambda\acute{o}\theta$, was worshipp'd in a Temple near the Acropolis, which can be no other than that already mention'd. Add to this, that Gyraldus is of Opinion that Ceres is call'd $\chi\lambda\acute{o}\eta$ amongst the Greeks, for the same Reason that amongst the Latins she is nam'd Flava, the Cause of which Title is too well known to be accounted for in this Place.

A Festival 2 in Honour of Bacchus, $\Omega\mu\phi\acute{\alpha}\gamma\theta$, i. e. Eater of raw Flesh, of which I have spoken in the former part of this Chapter. This Solemnity was celebrated in the same manner with the other Festivals of Bacchus, wherein they counterfeited Phrenzy and Madness; what was peculiar to it was, that the Worshippers us'd to eat the Entrails of Goats raw and bloody, which was done in Imitation of the God, to whom the Surname by which he was ador'd at this Solemnity was given for the like Actions.

C H A P. XXI.

Of the Publick Games in Greece, and the Principal Exercises used in them.

I COME in the next place to the four publick and solemn Games, which were peculiarly term'd ιεργα, i. e. sacred; partly from the Esteem they had all over Greece, from every part of which vast Multitudes of Spectators flock'd to them; and partly because they were instituted in Honour of the Gods or deify'd Heroes, and always begun with sacrificing to them, and concluded in the same religious manner.

Their Names, together with the Persons to whom they were dedicated, and the Prizes in each of them, are elegantly compriz'd by Archias in the two following Distichs,

*Τίσσαρες εἰσὶν ἀγῶνες ἀν' Ἑλλάδα, τέσσαρες ἴσοι, Οἱ δύο μὲν Σπυριῶν οἱ δύο δ' ἀθανάτων,
 Ζῆδος, Ἀνταΐδας, Παλαίμνος, Ἀρχεμέροιο,
 Ἄθλα δ' ἕκαστος, μῦθα, στίβια, πύτους.*

Such as obtain'd Victories in any of these Games, especially the Olympick ^x, were universally honour'd, nay, almost ador'd: At their Return home they rode in a triumphal Chariot into the City, the Walls being broken down to give them Entrance; which was done (as Plutarch is of Opinion) to signify, that Walls are of small Use to a City that is inhabited by Men of Courage and Ability to defend it. At Sparta they had an honourable Post in the Army, being plac'd near the King's Person. At some Places they had Presents made to them by their native City, were honour'd with first Places at all Shews and Games, and ever after maintain'd at the publick Charge ^y. Cicero ^z reports, that a Victory in the Olympick Games was not much less honourable than a Triumph at Rome. Happy was that Man thought, that could but obtain a single Victory: If any Person merited repeated Rewards, he was thought to have attain'd to the utmost Felicity that human Nature is capable of: But if he came off Conqueror in all the Exercises, he was elevated above the Condition of Men, and his Actions styl'd wonderful Victories ^a. Nor did their Honours terminate in themselves, but were extended to all about them; the City that gave them Birth and Education was esteem'd more honourable and august; happy were their Relations, and thrice happy their Parents. It is a remarkable Story, which Plutarch ^b relates of a Spartan, who meeting Diagoras, that had himself been crown'd in the Olympian Games, and seen his Sons and Grand-children Victors, embrac'd him and said, Die, Diagoras, for thou canst not be a God. By the Laws of Solon a hundred Drachms were allow'd from the publick Treasury to every Athenian, who obtain'd a Prize in the Isthmian Games; and five-hundred Drachms to such as were Victors in the Olympian ^c. Afterwards the latter of these had their Maintenance in the Prytaneum, or publick Hall of Athens. At the same Place it was forbidden by the Laws to give Slaves or Harlots their Names from any of these Games, which was accounted a Dishonour to the Solemnities, as hath been elsewhere observ'd ^d. Hence there is a Dispute in Athenæus ^e, how it came to pass, that Nemea the Minstrel was so call'd from the Nemean Games.

There were certain Persons appointed to take care that all things were perform'd according to Custom, to decide Controversies that happen'd amongst the Antagonists, and adjudge the Prizes to those that merited them: These were call'd αἰσυμνήται, βραβύται, ἀγωνάρχαι, ἀγωνοδίκαι, ἀγωνογέται, ἀθλοθέται, though betwixt these two Phavorinus makes a Distinction, for ἀθλοθέται, he tells us, was peculiar to Gymnical Exercises; whereas the former was sometimes apply'd to Musical Contentions. They were likewise call'd ῥαβδῶχοι, and ῥαβδονόμοι, from ῥαβδος, i. e. a Rod, or Scepter, which these Judges, and, in general, all Kings and great Magistrates, carry'd in their Hands.

After the Judges had pass'd Sentence, a publick Herald proclaim'd the Name of the Victor, whence κηρύσσειν in Greek, and prædicare in Latin, signify to commend or proclaim any Man's Praises. The Token of Victory was in most Places a Palm-branch, which was presented to the Conquerors, and carry'd by them in their Hands; which Custom was first introduc'd by Theseus, at the Institution of the Delian Games ^f, tho' others will have it to be much antienter: Hence palmas dare, to yield the Victory; and plurimum palmarum homo, in Tully, a Man that has won a great many Prizes.

Before I proceed to give a particular Description of the Grecian Games, it will be necessary to present you with a brief Account of the principal Exercises us'd in them, which were as follow:

Πένταθλον, or Quinquetium, which consisted of the five Exercises contain'd in this Verie.

Ἀλμα, ποδοκείμεν, δισκον, ἀκονία, πάλην.

i. e. Leaping, Running, Throwing, Darting, and Wrestling. Instead of Darting, some mention Boxing, and others may speak of other Exercises different from those, which have been mention'd. For πέταθλον seems to have been a common Name for any Five Sorts of Exercise perform'd at the same time. In all of them there were some Customs that deserve our Observation.

Δέμη, or the Exercise of Running, was in great Esteem amongst the ancient Grecians, infomuch, that such as prepar'd themselves for it, thought it worth their while to use Means to burn or parch their Spleen, because it was believ'd to be an Hindrance to them, and retard them in their Course. Homer tells us, that Swiftnes is one of the most excellent Endowments a Man can be blest'd withal ^g.

Οὐ μὲν γὰρ μείζον κλέος ἀνέρος ὄφρα κεν ἦσιν.
 Ἡ δ', τι πρῶσιν τε βέξει, καὶ χερσὶν ἔησιν.

No greater Honour has e'er been attain'd,
 Than what strong Hands, or nimble Feet have gain'd.

Indeed, all those Exercises, that conduc'd to fit Men for War, were more especially valued: Now Swiftnes was look'd upon as an excellent Qualification in a Warrior, both because it serves for a sudden Assault and Onset, and likewise for a nimble Retreat; and therefore it is not to be wonder'd that the constant Character which Homer gives of Achilles, is, that he was πῶδας ὠκύς, or swift of Foot: And in the holy Scripture, David, in his poetical Lamentation over those two great Captains, Saul and Jonathan, takes particular Notice of this warlike Quality of theirs; They were (says he) swifter than Eagles, stronger than Lions. To return; the Course was call'd στάδιον, being of the same Extent with the Measure of that Name, which contains CXXV Paces, whence the Runners were term'd σταδιοδρόμοι. Sometimes the length of it was enlarg'd, and then it was nam'd δολιχὸς ^g, and the Contenders δολιχοδρόμοι, whence comes the Proverb Μὴ ζήτηε ἐν στάδιῳ δολιχόν, i. e. Search not for a greater thing in a less. Suidas assigns twenty-four Stadia to the δολιχὸς ^g, and others only twelve. But the Measure of it seems not to have been fix'd or determinate, but variable at Pleasure. Sometimes they ran back again to the Place whence they had first set out, and then the Course was call'd δίαιυλον ^g, and the Runners δίαιυλοδρόμοι, for ὠλός was the old Term for Stadium. Sometimes they ran in Armour, and were term'd ὀπλιτοδρόμοι.

Άλμα, or the Exercise of Leaping, they sometimes perform'd with Weights upon their Heads or Shoulders, sometimes carrying them in their Hands; these were call'd ἀλτῆρες, which, tho' now and then of different Figures, yet, as Pausanias reports, were usually of an oval Form, and made with Holes, or else cover'd with Thongs, thro' which the Contenders put their Fingers. Άλτῆρες were also sometimes used in throwing. The Place from which they leap'd was call'd βατήρ ^h; that to which they leap'd, τὰ ἐσκαμμένα, because it was mark'd by digging up the Earth; whence πιδᾶν ὑπὲρ τὰ ἐσκαμμένα is apply'd to Persons that over-leap, or exceed their Bounds. The Mark on the Exercise of throwing Quoits was also, sometimes, for the same Reason term'd σκαίμμα.

Πίσις, or the Exercise of Throwing or Darting, was perform'd several Ways; sometimes with a Javelin, Rod, or other Instrument of a large Size, which they threw out of their naked Hands, or by the Help of a Thong tied about the Middle of it; the doing of it was term'd ακόντισμα; sometimes with an Arrow, or little Javelin, which was either shot out of a Bow, or cast out of a Sling; and the Art of doing this was call'd πικκική.

Δίσκος, was a Quoit of Stone, Brass, or Iron, which they threw by the Help of a Thong put through a Hole in the Middle of it ⁱ, but in a manner quite different from that of throwing Darts; for there the Hands were lifted up, and extended, whereas the Discus was hurl'd in the manner of a Bowl. It was of different Figures and Sizes, being sometimes four-square, but usually broad and like a Lentil, whence that Herb is, by Dioscorides, call'd δίσκος. The same Exercise was sometimes perform'd with an Instrument call'd Σάλος, which some will have to be distinguish'd from δίσκος, because that was of Iron, this of Stone: But others with more Reason report, that the Difference consisted in this, viz. That σάλος was of a spherical Figure, whereas δίσκος was broad.

Πυγμακή, or the Exercise of Boxing, was sometimes perform'd by Combatants having in their Hands Balls of Stone or Lead, call'd σφαίραι, and then it was term'd σπαιρομαχία. At first their Hands and Arms were naked and unguarded, but afterwards surrounded with Thongs of Leather call'd Cestus, which at the first were short, reaching no higher than the Wrists, but were afterwards enlarg'd, and carry'd up to the Elbow, and sometimes as high as the Shoulder; and, in time they came to be us'd not only as defensive Arms, but to annoy the Enemy, being fill'd with Plummets of Lead and Iron to add Force to the Blows. The Cestus was very ancient, being invented by Amycus King of the Babylonians, who was contemporary with the Argonauts, as we are inform'd by Clemens of Alexandria ^k. Those, that prepar'd themselves for this Exercise, us'd all the Means they could contrive to render themselves fat and fleshy, that so they might be better able to endure Blows, whence corpulent Men or Women were usually call'd pugiles, according to Terence ^l:

Siqua est habitior paullo, pugilem esse aiunt.—

Παλή, or the Exercise of Wrestling, was sometimes call'd παιταβλητική, because the Combatants endeavour'd to throw each other δοκων, to do which they call'd ῥήξαι. At first they contended only with Strength of Body, but Theseus invented the Art of Wrestling, whereby Men were enabled to throw down those, who were far superior to them in Strength ^m. In later Ages they never encountered till all their Joints and Members had been soundly rubb'd, fomented and suppled with Oil, whereby all Strains were prevented. The Victory was adjudg'd to him that gave his Antagonist three Falls; whence τειαζαι and ἀπτριχθαι signify to conquer; τριχθῆναι, or ἀποτριχθῆναι, to be conquered, and by ἀτρίαχία ⁿ ἄτα in Aeschylus is meant an insuperable Evil; others make the proper Signification of these Words to belong only to Victors, in all the Exercises of the Πένταθλον ^o; however, the fore-mentioned Custom is sufficiently attested by the Epi- gram upon Milo, who having challeng'd the whole Assembly, and finding none that durst encounter him, claim'd the Crown, but, as he was going to receive it, unfortunately fell down; whereat the People cry'd out, that he had forfeited the Prize; then Milo °

Λιγὸς εἴ' ἐν μίσσοσιν ἀνέκραγεν, Οὐχὶ τριῖ ἔστιν,
 Ἐν κῆμας κιντὸν τ' ἄλλα με τίς βαλέτω;

Arose, and standing in the midst, thus cry'd,
 One single Fall cannot the Prize decide,
 And who is here can throw me th' other two?

But of Wrestling there were two Sorts, viz. one call'd Ορθία πάλη, and Ορθοπάλιν, which is that already describ'd; and another call'd Ἀνακλινοπάλη, because the Combatants us'd voluntarily to throw themselves down, and continue the Fight upon the Ground, by pinching, biting, scratching, and all manner of Ways annoying their Adversary; whereby it often came to pass, that the weaker Combatant, and who would never have been able to throw his Antagonist, obtain'd the Victory, and forc'd him to yield; for, in this Exercise, as in Boxing also, the Victory was never adjudg'd till one Party had fairly yielded; this was sometimes done by Words, and often by lifting up a Finger, whence δακτύλον ἀναλείνασθαι signifies to yield the Victory; for which Reason we are told by Plutarch, that the Lacedæmonians would not permit any of those Exercises to be practis'd in their City wherein those that were conquer'd did δακτύλον ἀναλείνασθαι, i. e. confess themselves overcome by holding up their Finger, because they thought it would derogate from the Temper and Spirit of the Spartans, to have any of them tamely yield to any Adversary; though that Place has been hitherto mistaken by most Interpreters. Martial hath taken notice of this Exercise:

*Hunc amo, qui vincit, sed qui succumbere novit,
 Et Melius didicit τλω ἀνακλινοπαλην.*

It is the very same with what is more commonly call'd Πασχεράτιον, which consists of the two Exercises of Wrestling and Boxing; from the former it borrows the Custom of throwing down; from the latter, that of beating Adversaries; for Wrestlers never struck, nor did Boxers ever attempt to throw down one another; but the Πασχερατιοὶ were permitted to do both; and it was customary for the weaker Party, when he found himself fore press'd by his Adversary, to fall down, and fight rolling on the Ground, whence these Combatants were called κολιστικοί, which gave Occasion to the Mistake of Hieronymus Mercarialis, who fancy'd there were two Pancratia, one in which the Combatants stood erect; the other, in which they roll'd in the Gravel. This Exercise is sometimes call'd Παιμμαχον, and the Combatants Παιμμαχοί ♪.

Horse-races were either perform'd by single Horses, which were call'd κίλητες, or μονάμπυκες : Or by two Horses, on one of which they perform'd the Race, and leap'd upon the other at the Goal ; these Men were call'd ἀναβάται, and if it was a Mare they leap'd upon, she was nam'd κάλη : Or by Horses coupled together in Chariots, which were sometimes drawn by two, three, four, &c. Horses ; whence we read of δῶροιοι, τῖδειπκοι, τέτραωροι, &c. How great soever the number of Horses might be, they were all plac'd not as now, but in one Front, being coupled together by Pairs : Afterwards Clisbenes the Sicyonian brought up a Custom of coupling the two middle Horses only, which are for that Reason call'd ζυγιοι, and governing the rest by Reins, whence they are usually term'd σεραφόροι, σεεγίαι, ἀδφαιροι, ἀδσοροι, ἀορτήρις, &c. Sometimes we find Mules us'd instead of Horses, and the Chariots drawn by them call'd ἀπῖνα. The principal Part of the Charioteer's Art and Skill consisted in avoiding the νύσσα, or Goals, in which if he fail'd the over-turning of his Chariot, which was a necessary Consequence of it, brought him into great Danger, as well as Disgrace.

Beside the Exercises already described there were others of a quite different Nature : Such were those wherein Musicians, Poets, and other Artists contended for Victory. Thus in the XCIst Olympiad, Euripides and Xenocles contended, who should be accounted the best Tragedian. Another time Cleomenes recommended himself by repeating some Collections of Empedocles's Verses, which he had compil'd. Another time Gorgias of Leontium, who was the first that invented the Art of discoursing on any Subject without Premeditation, as we learn from Philostratus, made a publick Offer to all the Greeks, who were present at the Solemnity, to discourse Extempore upon whatever Argument any of them should propound. Lastly, to mention only one Example more, Herodotus is said to have gained very great Applause, and to have fir'd young Thucydides with an early Emulation of him, by repeating his History at the Olympian Games.

C H A P. XXII.

Of the Olympian Games.

THE Olympian Games were so call'd from Olympian Jupiter, to whom they were dedicated, or from Olympia, a City in the Territory of the Pisæans ; or, according to Stephanus, the same with Pisa. The first Institution of them is by some referr'd to Jupiter, after his Victory over the Sons of Titan ; at which time Mars is said to have been crown'd for Boxing, and Apollo to have been superior to Mercury at Running. Phlegon the Author of the Olympiades reports, they were first instituted by Pisus, from whom the City Pisa was nam'd.

⁴ Suidas, &c.

Others will have the first Author of them to be one of the Daëtyli, nam'd Hercules, not the Son of Alcmena, but another of far greater Antiquity, that with his four Brethren, Pæoneus, Ida, Jafus, and Epi-medes, left their ancient Seat in Ida, a Mountain of Crete, and settled in Elis, where he instituted this Solemnity; the Original of which was only a Race, wherein the four younger Brothers contending for Diversion, the Victor was crown'd by Hercules with an Olive-garland, which was not compos'd of the common Olive-branches, nor the natural Product of that Country, but brought by Hercules (so Fables will have it) from the Hyperborean Scythians, and planted in the Pantæum near Olympia, where it flourish'd, though not after the manner of other Olive-trees, but spreading out its Boughs more like a Myrtle; it was call'd καλλισεβαστή, i. e. fit for Crowns, and Garlands given to Victors in these Games, were always compos'd of it, and it was forbidden under a great Penalty to cut it for any other Use: These Daëtyli were five in Number, whence it is that the Olympian Games were celebrated once in five Years, though others make them to be solemniz'd once in four; wherefore, according to the former, an Olympiad must consist of five; according to the latter of, of four Years: But neither of these Accounts are exact, for this Solemnity was held indeed every fifth Year, yet not after the Term of five Years was quite past, but every fiftieth Month, which is the second Month after the Completion of four Years*: And, as these Games were celebrated every fifth Year, so they lasted five Days, for they begun upon the eleventh, and ended upon the fifteenth Day of the Lunar Month, when the Moon was at the Full.

Others (if we may believe Julius Scaliger) report, that these Games were instituted by Pelops to the Honour of Neptune, by whose Assistance he had vanquish'd Oenomaüs, and marry'd his Daughter Hippodamia.

Others say, they were first celebrated by Hercules, the Son of Alcmena, to the Honour of Pelops, from whom he was descended by the Mother's Side; but, being after that discontinu'd for some Time, they were reviv'd by Iphitus or Iphiclus, one of Hercules's Sons.

The most common Opinion is, that the Olympian Games were first instituted by this Hercules, to the Honour of Olympian Jupiter, out of the Spoils taken from Auges King of Elis, whom he had dethron'd and plunder'd, being defrauded of the Reward he had promis'd him for cleansing his Stables, as Pindar reports: Diodorus the Sicilian gives the same Relation, and adds, that Hercules propos'd no other Reward to the Victors, but a Crown, in Memory of his own Labours, all which he accomplish'd for the Benefit of Mankind, without designing any Reward to himself, beside the Praise of doing well: At this Institution, it is reported, that Hercules himself came off Conqueror in all the Exercises except Wrestling, to which when he had challeng'd all the Field, and could find no Man that durst grapple with him, at length Jupiter, having assum'd an human Shape, enter'd the Lifts; and when the Contention had remained doubtful for a considerable Time, neither Party having the Advantage, or being willing to submit, the God discovered himself to his Son, and from this Action got the Surname of Πάλαιστος or Wrestler, by which he is known in Lycophron ^b.

All these Stories are rejected by Strabo, in his Description of Elis, where he reports, than an Ætolian Colony, together with some of Hercules's Posterity, subdued a great many of the Pisæan Towns, and amongst them Olympia, where they first instituted, or, at least, revived, enlarged, and augmented these Games, which (as my Author thinks) could not have been omitted by Homer, who takes every Opportunity to adorn his Poems with Descriptions of such Solemnities, had they been of any Note before the Trojan War. Whatever becomes of the first Author of the Olympian Games, it is certain, they were either wholly laid aside, or very little frequented till the Time of Iphitus, who was contemporary with Lycurgus the Spartan Lawgiver ^c. He re-instituted this Solemnity about four hundred and eight Years after the Trojan War, from which Time, according to Solinus, the Number of the Olympiads are reckoned ^d. After this Time they were again neglected till the Time of Choræbus, who, according to Phlegon's Computation, lived in the twenty-eighth Olympiad after Iphitus, and then instituted again the Olympian Games, which after this Time were constantly celebrated. And this really fell out in the CCCCVIIIth Year after the Destruction of Troy; or two Years sooner by Eusebius's Account, who reckons four hundred and six Years from the taking of Troy to the first Olympiad. By the first Olympiad meaning that which was first in the common Computation of Olympiads, which was begun at this Time.

The Care and Management of these Games belong'd sometimes to the Pisæans, but for the most part to the Eleans, by whom the Pisæans were destroy'd, and their very Name extinguished. Polybius in the fourth Book of his History reports, that the Eleans by the General Consent of the Greeks, enjoy'd their Possessions without any Molestation, or fear of Want, or Violence, in consideration of the Olympian Games, which were there celebrated. And this he assigns as a Reason, why they chiefly delighted in a Country Life, and did not flock together into Towns like other States of Greece. Nevertheless we find, that the CIVth Olympiad was celebrated by Order of the Arcadians, by whom the Eleans were at that Time reduced to a very low Condition; but this, and all those managed by the Inhabitants of Pisa, the Eleans call'd Ανολυμπίασα, i. e. unlawful Olympiads, and left them out of their Annals, wherein the Names of the Victors, and all Occurrences at these Games were recorded. Till the fiftieth Olympiad, a single Person superintended, but then two were appointed to perform that Office. In the CIIId Olympiad that Number was increased to twelve, according to the Number of the Elean Tribes, out of every one of which one President was elected: But in the following Olympiad, the Eleans, having suffer'd great Losses by War with the Arcadians, and being reduc'd to eight Tribes, the Presidents were also reduc'd to that Number: In the CVth Olympiad they were increas'd by the Addition of one more; and in the CVIth another was join'd to them, whereby they were made Ten; which Number continued till the Reign of Adrian, the Roman Emperor. These Persons were called Ελληνοδίκαι, and assembled together in a Place nam'd Ελληνοδικαίον, in the Elean Forum, where they were oblig'd to reside ten Months before the Celebration of the Games, to take care that such as offer'd themselves to contend perform'd their προγυμνασματο, or preparatory Exercises, and to be instructed in all the Laws of the Games, by certain Men call'd Νουνοαυλακας, i. e. Keepers of the Laws: Farther, to prevent all unjust Practices, they were oblig'd to take an Oath, that they would act impartially, would take no Bribes, nor discover the Reason, for which they dislik'd or approv'd of any of the Contenders: At the Solemnity they sat naked, having before them the Victoral Crown till the Exercises were finished, and then it was presented to whomsoever they adjudged it. Nevertheless there lay an Appeal from the Hellanodicae to the Olympian Senate. Thus, when two of the Hellanodicae adjudged the Prize to Eupolemus the Elean, and the third (they being then only three in Number) to Leon the Ambracian, the latter of these appealed to the Olympian Senate, who condemned the two Judges to pay a considerable Fine.

To preserve Peace and good Order, there were certain Officers appointed to correct such as were unruly. These were by the Eleans term'd άλυται, which Word signifies the same Person with those, who by the rest of the Greeks were call'd θαλασσοβόροι, or μασιγροφεί, and Lictors by the Romans. Over these there was a President, to whom the rest were subject, call'd άλυτάρχος.

Women were not allow'd to be present at these Games; nay, so severely were the Elean Laws, that if any Woman was found so much as to have pass'd the River Alpheus during the time of the Solemnity, she was to be tumbled headlong from a Rock: But it is reported, that none was ever taken thus offending, except Callipatera, whom others call Pherenice, who ventur'd to usher her Son Pisidorus, call'd by some Eucleus, into the Exercises, and being discover'd, was apprehended, and brought before the Presidents, who, notwithstanding the Severity of the Laws, acquitted her, out of Respect to her Father, Brethren, and Son, who had all won Prizes in the Olympian Games. But my Author reports in another Place^b, that Cynisca, the Daughter of Archidamus, with manly Courage and Bravery contended in the Olympian Games, and was the first of her Sex that kept Horses, and won a Prize there; and that afterwards several others, especially some of the Macedonian Women imitated her Example, and were crown'd at Olympia. Perhaps neither of these Reports may be altogether groundless, since innumerable Alterations were made in these Games, according to the Exigencies of Times and Change of Circumstances, all which are set down at large in Pausanias, Natalis Comes, and other Mythologists.

All such as design'd to contend were oblig'd to repair to the publick Gymnasium, at Elis, ten Months before the Solemnity, where they prepar'd themselves by continual Exercises; we are told indeed by Plavorinus, that the Preparatory Exercises were only perform'd thirty Days before the Games; but this must be understood of the Performance of the whole and entire Exercises in the same manner they were practis'd at the Games, which seems to have been only enjoin'd in the last Month, whereas the nine antecedent Months were spent in more light and easy Preparations. No Man, that had omitted to present himself in this manner, was allow'd to put in for any of the Prizes; nor were the accustom'd Rewards of Victory given to such Persons, if by any Means they insinuated themselves, and overcame their Antagonists: Nor would any Apology, tho' seemingly ever so reasonable, serve to excuse their Absence. In the CCVIIIth Olympiad Apollonius was rejected, and not suffer'd to contend, because he had not presented himself in due time, tho' he was detain'd by contrary Winds in the Islands call'd Cyclades; and the Crown was given to Heraclides without performing any Exercise, because no just and duly qualify'd Adversary appear'd to oppose him. No Person that was himself a notorious Criminal, or nearly related to any such, was permitted to contend. Farther, to prevent underhand Dealings, if any Person was convicted of bribing his Adversary, a severe Fine was laid upon him: Nor was this alone thought a sufficient Guard against evil and dishonourable Contracts and unjust Practices, but the Contenders were oblig'd to swear, they had spent ten whole Months in preparatory Exercises: And farther yet, both they, their Father and Brethren took a solemn Oath, that they would not, by any sinister or unlawful Means, endeavour to stop the fair and just Proceedings of all Games.

The Order of Wrestlers was appointed by Lots, in this manner: A Silver Urn, call'd υγλας, being plac'd, into it were put little Pellets, in size about the Bigness of Beans, upon every one of which was inscrib'd a Letter, and the same Letter belong'd to every Pair: Now those, whose Fortune it was to have the same Letters, wrestled together; if the Number of the Wrestlers was not even, he that happen'd to light upon the odd Pellet wrestled last of all with him that had the Mastery; wherefore he was call'd υστερος, as coming after the rest: This was accounted the most fortunate Chance that could be, because the Person that obtain'd it was to encounter one already wearied, and spent with conquering his former Antagonist, himself being fresh, and in full Strength.

The most successful in his Undertakings, and magnificent in his Expences, of all that ever contended in these Games, was Alcibiades the Athenian, as Plutarch reports in his Life: "His Expences (saith he) in Horses kept for the publick Games, and in the Number of his Chariots, were very magnificent; for never any one beside, either private Person or King, sent seven Chariots to the Olympian Games. He obtain'd, at one Solemnity, the first, second, and fourth Prizes,

Of the Pythian Games.

THE Pythian Games were celebrated near Delphi, and are by some thought to have been first instituted by Amphictyon, the Son of Deucalion, or by the Council of Amphictyones. Others refer the first Institution of them to Agamemnon^k; Pausanias^l to Diomedes, the Son of Tydeus, who, having escap'd a dangerous Tempest as he returned from Troy, dedicated a Temple at Trazen to Apollo firnam'd ἘπιεαθήεⓄ, and instituted the Pythian Games to his Honour: But the most common Opinion is, that Apollo himself was the first Author of them, when he had overcome Python, a Serpent, or cruel Tyrant: Thus Ovid^m,

*Novæ operis famam possit delere vetustas,
Instituit sacros celebri certamine ludos,
Pythia perdomitæ Serpentis nomine dictos.*

Then to preserve the Fame of such a Deed,
For Python slain, he Pythian Games decreed.

Mr. Dryden.

At their first Institution, they were only celebrated once in nine Years, but afterwards every fifth Year, according to the Number of the Parnassian Nymphs, that came to congratulate Apollo, and brought him Presents after his Victory.

The Rewards were certain Apples consecrated to Apollo, according to *Ister*ⁿ, and the fore-cited Epigram of Archias, in which he thus enumerates the Prizes in this, and the other three sacred Games:

Ἀβλα ᾗ τὸ κόρινθος, μῦλλα, σίλινα, πίτυς.

Where Brodæus will have μῦλλα to signify the Delphian Laurel, which, he tells us, brought forth Berries streak'd with red and green, and almost as large as Apples; but this Interpretation is by no means genuine or natural, since the Word μῦλλα is never us'd in that Sense: However that be, 'tis certain the Victors were rewarded with Garlands of Laurel, as appears from the express Words of Pindar, who tells us, that Aristomenes was crown'd with ποία Παρνασίας, or Laurel that flourish'd upon Mount Parnassus^o: Whence some imagine that the Reward was double, consisting both of the sacred Apples, and Garlands of Laurel. But, at the first Institution of these Games, the Victors were crown'd with Garlands of Palm, or (according to some) of Beech leaves, as Ovid reports, who immediately after the Verses before-cited adds,

*His juvenum quicunque, manu, pedibusve, rotave
Vicerat, esculæ capiebat frondis honorem,
Nondum Laurus erat.*—————

Here noble Youths for Mastership did strive
To Box, to Run, and Steeds and Chariots drive,
The Prize was Fame ; in witness of Renown,
A Beechen Garland did the Victor crown,
The Laurel was not yet for Triumph born.

Others^p report, that in the first Pythian Solemnity the Gods contended ; Cæstor obtain'd the Victory by Race-horses, Pollux at Boxing, Calais at Running, Zetes at Fighting in Armour, Peleus at throwing the Discus, Telamon at Wrestling, Hercules in the Pancratium ; and that all of them were honour'd by Apollo with Crowns of Laurel. But others again are of a different Opinion^q, and tell us, that at the first there was nothing but a musical Contention, wherein he, that sung best the Praises of Apollo, obtain'd the Prize, which at first was either Silver or Gold, or something of Value, but afterwards chang'd into a Garland. Here may be observ'd the different Names given to Games from the Diversity of the Prizes ; for where the Prize was Money, the Games were call'd ἀγῶνες ἀργυρίται ; where only a Garland ἀγῶνες στεφανίται, οὐλίνας, &c. The first that obtain'd the Victory by Singing, was Chrysothemis a Cretan, by whom Apollo was purify'd, after he had kill'd Python : The next Prize was won by Philamon ; the next after that, by his Son Thamyris. Orpheus having rais'd himself to a Pitch of Honour almost equal to the Gods, by instructing the profane and ignorant World in all the Mysteries of Religion, and Ceremonies of divine Worship, and Musæus, who took Orpheus for his Example, thought it too great a Condescension and inconsistent with the high Characters they bore, to enter into the Contention. Elcutherus is reported to have gain'd a Victory purely upon the Account of his Voice, his Song being the Composition of another Person : Hesiod was repuls'd, because he could not play upon the Harp, which all the Candidates were oblig'd to do.

There was likewise another Song, call'd Πυθικός νόμος ; to which a Dance was perform'd : It consisted of these five Parts, wherein the Fight of Apollo and Python was represented ; 1. Ἀνέλευσις, which contain'd the Preparation to the Field. 2. Ἐμπειροί, or the first Essay towards it. 3. Κατακλιδοσμός, which was the Action itself, and the God's Exhortation to himself to stand out with Courage. 4. Ἰαμβοὶ καὶ σατυροὶ, or the insulting Sarcasms of Apollo over vanquish'd Python. 5. Σειρήνες, which was an Imitation of the Serpent's Hissing, when he ended his Life. Others make this Song to consist of the six following Parts: 1. Πείρα, or the Preparation. 2. Ιαμβικός, wherein Apollo dar'd Python to engage him by Reproaches, for ιαμβίζειν signifies to Reproach, Iambick Verses being the common Form of Investives. 3. Δάκτυλα, which was sung to the Honour of Bacchus, to whom those Numbers were thought most acceptable: This part belong'd to him, because he had (as some say) a Share in the Delphian Oracle, or possess'd it before Apollo. 4. Κρητικός, to the Honour of Jupiter, because he was Apollo's Father, and thought to delight most in such Feet, as being educated in Crete, where they were us'd. 5. Μητρῶον, to the Honour of Mother Earth, because the Delphian Oracle belong'd to her, before it came into Apollo's Hands. 6. Σερπεντικός, or the Serpent's Hissing.

But by others it is thus describ'd: 1. Πείρα, an Imitation of Apollo, preparing himself for the Fight with all the Circumspection of a prudent and cautious Warrior. 2. Κατακλιδοσμός, a Challenge given to the Enemy. 3. Ιαμβικός, a Representation of the Fight, during which the Trumpets sounded a Point of War: It was so call'd from Iambick Verses, which are the most proper to express Passion and Rage. 4. Σπονδαίος, so call'd from the Feet of that Name, or from σπένδειν, i. e. to offer a Libation, because it was the Celebration of Victory; after which, it was always customary to return Thanks to the Gods, and offer Sacrifices. 5. Καλαχόρασις, a Representation of Apollo's Dancing after his Victory.

Afterwards, in the third Year of the XLVIIIth Olympiad, the Amphictyones, who were Presidents of these Games, introduc'd Flutes, which till that time had not been us'd at this Solemnity; the first that won the Prize was Sacadas of Argos: But because they were more proper for Funeral Songs and Lamentations, than the merry and jocund Airs at Festivals, they were in a short time laid aside. They added likewise all the Gymnical Exercises us'd in the Olympian Games, and made a Law, that none should contend in Running but Boys. At, or near the same Time, they chang'd the Prizes, which had before been of Value, into Crowns or Garlands; and gave these Games the Name of Pythia, from Pythian Apollo, whereas till that time (as some say) they had either another Name, or no peculiar Name at all. Horse-races also, or Chariot-races, were introduc'd about the Time of Clisthenes, King of Argos, who obtain'd the first Victory in them, riding in a Chariot drawn by four Horses; and several other Changes were by degrees made in these Games, which I shall not trouble you with.

Of the Nemean Games.

THE Nemean Games were so call'd from Nemea, a Village and Grove between the Cities Cleonæ and Phlius, where they were celebrated every third Year, upon the twelfth of the Corinthian Month Πάνηϳ, call'd sometimes Ιεορτυνία, which is the same with the Athenian Boedromion. The Exercises were Chariot-races, and all the Parts of the Pentatblum. The Presidents were elected out of Corinth, Argos, and Cleonæ, and apparel'd in black Cloaths, the Habit of Mourners, because these Games were a Funeral Solemnity instituted in Memory of Opheltes, otherwise call'd Archemorus, from ἀρχή, i. e. a beginning, and μορϳ, i. e. Fate or Death, because Amphiaraus foretold his Death soon after he began to live: Or, according to Statius ^u, because that Misfortune was a Prelude to all the bad Success that befel the Theban Champions; for Archemorus was the Son of Euphetes and Creusa, or Lycurgus, a King of Nemea or Thrace, and Eurydice, and nurs'd by Hypsipyle, who leaving the Child in a Meadow, whilst she went to shew the Besiegers of Thebes a Fountain, at her return found him dead, and a Serpent folded about his Neck; whence the Fountain before call'd Langia, was nam'd Archemorus; and the Captains to comfort Hypsipyle for her Loss, instituted these Games ^x,

*Una tamen tacitas, sed jussu Numinis, undas
Hæc quoque secreta nutrit Langia sub umbra,
Nondum illi raptus dederat lacrymabile nomen
Archemorus, nec fama Deæ; tamen avia servat

Cum tristem Hypsipylem ducibus sudatus Achæis Ludus, & atra sacrum recolit Trieteris Opheltes.*

Langia alone, and she securely hid,
Lurk'd in a dark, and unfrequented shade,
Her silent Streams, by some Divine Command,
To feed the circumjacent Pools retain'd.
Before Hypsipyle was known to Fame,
Before the Serpent had Archem'rus slain,
And to the Spring bequeath'd his dreadful Name;
Yet in the lonesome Desert tho' it lies,
A Grove, and Riv'let it alone supplies;
Whilst endless Glory on the Nymph shall wait,
And Græcian Chiefs shall eternize her Fate,

Others are of Opinion, that these Games were instituted by Hercules after his Victory over the Nemean Lion ¹, in Honour of Jupiter, who, as Pausanias tells us, had a magnificent Temple at Nemea, where he was honour'd with solemn Games, in which Men ran Races in Armour; but perhaps these might be distinct from the Solemnity 'I am now speaking of. Lastly, others grant indeed, they were first instituted in Memory of Archemorus, but will have them to have been intermitted and reviv'd by Hercules, and consecrated to Jupiter.

The Victors were crown'd with Parsly, which was an Herb us'd at Funerals, and feign'd to have sprung out of Archemorus's Blood: Concerning it Plutarch relates a remarkable Story ², with which it will not be improper to conclude this Chapter; "As Timoleon (saith he) "was marching up an Ascent, from the Top of which they might take "a View of the Army and Strength of the Carthaginians, there met "him by chance a Company of Mules loaden with Parsly, which his "Soldiers conceiv'd to be an ill-boding Omèn, because this is the very "Herb wherewith we adorn the Sepulchres of the Dead, which Custom "gave Birth to that despairing Proverb, when we pronounce of one "that is dangerously sick, that he does Νίδαι σελινυ, i. e. want no- "thing but Parsly, which is in effect to say, he is a dead Man, just "dropping into the Grave: Now, that Timoleon might ease their "Minds, and free them from those superstitious Thoughts, and such "a fearful Expectation, he put a Stop to his March, and, having al- "ledg'd many other things in a Discourse suitable to the Occasion, he "concluded it by saying, that a Garland of Triumph had luckily fallen "into their Hands of its own Accord, as an anticipation of Victory, in- "asmuch as the Corinthians do crown those that get the better in their "Isthmian Games with Chaplets of Parsly, accounting it a sacred "Wreath, and proper to their Country; for Parsly was ever the con- "quering Ornament of the Isthmian Sports, as it is now also of the Ne- "mean; it is not very long since Branches of the Pine-tree came to suc- "ceed, and to be made use of for that purpose; Timoleon therefore, "having thus bespoke his Soldiers, took part of the Parsly, wherewith "he first made himself a Chaplet, and then his Captains with their "Companies did all crown themselves with it in Imitation of their "General."

Of the Isthmian Games.

TH E Isthmian Games were so call'd from the Place where they were celebrated, viz. the Corinthian Isthmus, a Neck of Land by which Peloponnesus is join'd to the Continent: They were instituted in Honour of Palæmon, or Melicertes, the Son of Athamus King of Thebes; and Ino, who, for fear of her Husband (who had killed her other Son Learchus in a Fit of Madnæs) cast herself with Melicertes in her Arms into the Sea, where they were receiv'd by Neptune into the Number of the Divinities of his Train, out of a Compliment to Bacchus nurs'd by Ino. At the change of their Condition, they alter'd their Names; Ino was call'd Leucothea, and her Son Palæmon; however Palæmon's Divinity could not preserve his Body from being toss'd about the Sea, till at length it was taken up by a Dolphin, and carried to the Corinthian Shore, where it was found by Sisyphus at that time King of Corinth, who gave it an honourable Interment, and instituted these funeral Games to his Memory; thus *Pausanias*¹. Others report, that Melicertes's Body was cast upon the Isthmus, and lay there some time unburied, whereupon a grievous Pestilence began to rage in those Parts, and the Oracles gave out, that the only Remedy for it was to inter the Body with the usual Solemnities, and celebrate Games in Memory of the Body; upon the Performance of these Commands the Distemper ceas'd; but afterwards, when the Games were neglected, broke out again, and the Oracles, being consulted, gave Answer, that they must pay perpetual Honours to Melicertes's Memory; which they did accordingly, erecting an Altar to him, and enacting a Law for the perpetual Celebration of these Games.

Others report, that they were instituted by Theseus in Honour of Neptune; others are of Opinion, that there were two distinct Solemnities observ'd in the Isthmus, one to Melicertes, and another to Neptune; which Report is grounded upon the Authority of Museus, who wrote a Treatise about the Isthmian Games. Phavorinus reports, that these Games were first instituted in Honour of Neptune, and afterwards celebrated in Memory of Palæmon. Plutarch on the contrary tells us, that the first Institution of them was in Honour of Melicertes, but afterwards they were alter'd, enlarg'd, and re-instituted to Neptune by Theseus: He gives also several other Opinions concerning the Original of them: His Words are these in the Life of Theseus; "Theseus instituted Games in Emulation of Hercules, being ambitious, that as the Greeks, by that Hero's Appointment, celebrated the Olympian Games to the Honour of Jupiter, so by his Institution they should celebrate the Isthmian Games to the Honour of Neptune; for those that were before dedicated to Melicertes were celebrated privately in the “ Night, and consisted rather of religious Ceremonies, than of any open Spectacle, or publick Festival. But some there are, who say that the Isthmian Games were first instituted in Memory of Sciron, at the Expiation which Theseus made for his Murther, upon the Account of the nearness of Kindred between them, Sciron being the Son of Canethus and Heniocha, the Daughter of Pitheus, tho’ others write that Siunis, and not Sciron, was their Son, and that to his Honour, and not to Sciron’s, these Games were ordain’d by Theseus. Hellanicus and Andro of Halicarnassus write, that at the same time he made an Agreement with the Corinthians, that they should allow them, that came from Athens to the Celebration of the Isthmian Games, as much Space to behold the Spectacle in, as the Sail of the Ship that brought them thither stretch’d to its full Extent could cover, and that in the first and most honourable Place :” Thus Plutarch.

The Eleans were the only Nation of Greece, that absented themselves from this Solemnity, which they did for this Reason, Pausanias^a relates ; the Corinthians having appointed the Isthmian Games, the Sons of Actor came to the Celebration of them, but were surpriz’d and slain by Hercules, near the City Cleonæ : The Author of the Murder was at the first unknown, but being at length discover’d by the Industry of Molione the Wife of Actor, the Eleans went to Argos and demanded Satisfaction, because Hercules at that time dwelt at Tiryns, a Village in the Argian Territories. Being repuls’d at Argos, they apply’d themselves to the Corinthians, desiring of them that all the Inhabitants and Subjects of Argos might be forbidden the Isthmian Games, as Disturbers of the publick Peace ; but meeting with no better Success in this Place, than they had done at Argos, Molione forbid them to go to the Isthmian Games, and denounc’d a dreadful Execration against any of the Eleans that should ever be present at the Celebration of them ; which Command was so religiously observ’d, that none of the Eleans dare venture to go the Isthmian Games to this Day, (saith my Author) for fear Molione’s Curses should fall heavy upon them.

These Games^c were observ’d every third, or rather every fifth Year, and held so sacred and inviolable, that when they had been intermitted for some time, through the Oppression and Tyranny of Cypselas, King of Corinth ; after the Tyrant’s Death the Corinthians, to renew the Memory of them, which was almost decay’d, employ’d the utmost Power and Industry they were able in reviving them, and celebrated them with such Splendor and Magnificence as was never practis’d in former Ages. When Corinth was sack’d and totally demolish’d by Mummius the Roman General, these Games were not discontinu’d, but the Care of them was committed to the Sicyonians till the rebuilding of Corinth, and then restor’d to the Inhabitants of that City, as Pausanias reports^d.

The Victors were rewarded with Garlands of Pine-leaves ; afterwards Parsly was given them, which was also the Reward of the Nemean Conquerors, but with this difference, that there it was fresh and green, whereas in the Isthmian Games it was dry and wither'd. Afterwards the use of Parsly was left off, and the Pine-tree came again into request, which Alterations Plutarch has accounted for in the fifth Book of his Symposiacks c.

Of the Greek Year.

THE Writers of antient Fables report, that Oûgavds, whom the Latins call Cælus, King of the Atlantick Islands, was reputed the Father of all the Gods, and gave his Name to the Heavens, which from him were by the Greeks term'd έγγυds, and by the Latins, Cælum, because he invented Astrology, which was unknown till his Time ε. Others ascribe the Invention both of Astrology, and the whole λογοςσφαιριδος, Science of the Celestial Bodies, to Atlas: From him these Discoveries were communicated to Hercules, who first imparted them to the Greeks. Whence the Authors of Fables took occasion to report, that both these Heroes supported the Heavens with their Shoulders ε. The Cretans pretended that Hyperion first observ'd the Motions of the Sun, Moon, and Stars δ. He was Son to the primitive God Uranus, and, from his Knowledge of the Celestial Motions, is sometimes taken by the Poets and other fabulous Authors for the Father of the Sun, sometimes for the Sun himself. The Arcadians reported, that their Countryman Endymion first discover'd the Motion of the Moon ι: Which gave occasion to those early Ages to feign, that he was belov'd by that Goddess. Lastly, others reported that Aëtis, by some call'd Aëtæus, who flourish'd in the Isle of Rhodes about the time of Cecrops King of Athens, invented the Science of Astrology, which he communicated to the Egyptians κ.

But to pass from fabulous to more authentick Histories, the first improvement and study of Astronomy is generally ascrib'd to the Grecian Colonies, which inhabited Asia. And it is thought to have been first learnt from the Babylonians or Egyptians, and communicated to the Grecians either by Tbales of Miletus, Pythagoras of Samos, Anaximander of Miletus, Anaximenes the Scholar and Fellow-Citizen of Anaximander, Cleostratus of Tenedos, Oenopidas of Chios, or Anaxagoras of Clazomenæ, the Master of Pericles, who was the first that taught the Ionick Philosophy at Athens, where he open'd his School in the same Year that Xerxes invaded Greece. have cultivated and improv'd this Science, and on that Account by different Men to have been reputed the Inventor, or first Master of it in Greece¹. Before the time of these Philosophers, it is certain that the Greeks were entirely ignorant of the Motions of the heavenly Bodies; insomuch that Thales first observ'd a solar Eclipse in the fourth Year of the forty-eighth Olympiad. A long time after that, in the fourth Year of the ninetieth Olympiad, an Eclipse of the Moon prov'd fatal to Nicias the Athenian General, and the Army under his Command, chiefly because the reason of it was not understood^m. And Herodotus seems to have been wholly unacquainted with this part of Learning; whence he describes the Solar Eclipses after the Poetical Manner, by the Disappearance of the Sun, and his leaving his accustomed Seat in the Heavenⁿ, never mentioning the Moon's Interposition.

From the fore-mention'd Instances it appears, that the Greeks had no Knowledge of Astronomy, and by consequence no certain Measure of Time, till they began to converse with the Babylonians, Ægyptians, Persians, or other Eastern Nations. For tho' it be easy from the returns of the several Seasons of Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter, to discover that a Year is already past; yet to determine the exact Number of Days, wherein these Vicissitudes happen, and again, to divide them into Months, answering the Motion of the Moon, requires much Study and Observation. Hence, in the heroical Ages, the Years were numbered by the return of Seed-time and Harvest, and the several Seasons of labouring and resting. The Day itself was not then distinguish'd into certain and equal Portions, but measur'd τῆ τῶ ἡλίου ἄλλως ἀπλῆσερον κινήσει, rudely and unaccurately by the Access and Recess of the Sun, as Eusebius has observ'd in his Comment upon those Verses of Homer, wherein that Poet describes the time of a certain Battle agreeably to the way of reckoning, which was us'd in the antient Times^o:

Ὅττα μὲν ἰὼς ἦν ἢ ἀίξετο ἱερὸν ἡμαρ,
 Τόττα μάλ' ἀμφοτέρων βελὲ ἤπτετο, πίπτε ὃ λάος.

In another Place ^p Achilles is introduc'd dividing the Day, not into Hours, which were the Invention of more polish'd Ages, but into the more obvious Parts of Morning, Noon, and Afternoon :

Neither were they more accurate in distinguishing the several Parts of Time, till, Πόλον, καὶ γνώμονα, καὶ τὰ δωδεκά μέρη τῆς ἡμέρας ὡς Βαβυλωνίων ἔμαθον, they learnt the Use of the Sun-Dial, and the Pole, and the twelve Parts of the Day from the Babylonians, as we are inform'd by Herodotus ⁹.

Yet in Homer's time Lunar Months seem to have been in use, as also a certain Form of Years comprehending several Months: Which appears from the following Verses, wherein it is foretold that Ulysses should return to Ithaca in one of the Months of the then present Year ^r:

Τὸ δὲ αὐτῆς θυλάκτου ἐλεύσεται ἐνθάδ' Ὀδυσσεύς,
Τὸ μὲν φθίνοντος μηνός, τὸ δὲ ἰσαμείνου.

But that the Grecians had then no settled form of Years and Months, wherein the Solar and Lunar Revolutions were regularly fitted to each other, appears from what is reported concerning Thales the Milesian. That having spent a considerable Time in the Observation of the Celestial Bodies, and observing that the Lunar Revolutions never exceeded thirty Days, he appointed twelve Months of thirty Days each, whereby the Year was made to consist of CCCLX Days. Then, in order to reduce these Months to an Agreement with the Revolution of the Sun, he intercalated thirty Days at the End of every two Years, of the abovefaid Months. Whence id tempus trιστηνίδεα appellabant, quod tertio quoque anno intercalabatur, quamvis biennii circuitus, & re vera διετηγίς esset: That space of Time was term'd a Period of Three, because the Intercalation was not made till after the Expiration of full two Years, tho' really it was only a Period of two Years; as we are inform'd by Censorinus ^s. So that this Period of two Years contain'd no less than DCCL Days, and exceeded the same Number of Years as measur'd by the true Motion of the Sun, twenty Days, which difference is so very great, that Scaliger was of Opinion this Cycle was never receiv'd in any Town of Greece.

Afterwards Solon observing that the Course of the Moon was not finish'd in thirty Days, as Thales had computed it, but in twenty-nine Days and half a Day; he appointed that the Months should in their Turns consist of twenty-nine and of thirty Days, so that a Month of twenty-nine Days should constantly succeed one of thirty Days; whereby an entire Year of twelve Months was reduc'd to CCCLIV Days, which fell short of the Solar Year, that is the Time of the Sun's Revolution, Eleven Days, and one fourth Part of a Day, or thereabouts. In order therefore to reconcile this Difference, τριετηγίς, that is, a Cycle of four Years, was invented. Herein after the first two Years, they seem to have added an intercalated Month of twenty-two Days: And again, after the Expiration of two Years more, another Month was intercalated, which consisted of twenty-three Days, the fourth Part of one Day in every Year arising to a whole Day in a Period of four Years. And thus Solon prevented the Lunar Years from exceeding those which are measur'd by the Revolution of the Sun, and so avoided the Mistake so manifest in the Cycle of Thales.

But afterwards it was consider'd, that the forty-five Days added by Solon to his Period of four Years, and containing a ($\pi\lambda\upsilon\gamma\eta\varsigma$) full Lunar Month and an half, would occasion this Cycle to end in the Midst of a Lunar Month; to remedy which Inconvenience, $\delta\upsilon\kappa\tau\omicron\tau\eta\rho\iota\varsigma$, a Term of eight Years, was instituted instead of the former Cycle of four Years, to which three entire Lunar Months were added at several Times ^r.

After the Cycle of eight Years, no change was made in the Kalendar till the Time of Meton, who, having observ'd that the Motions of the Sun and Moon fell short of one another by some Hours, which Disagreement, tho' at first scarce perceivable, would quite invert the Seasons in the Compass of a few Ages, invented the Cycle of nineteen Years, term'd $\epsilon\nu\upsilon\epsilon\alpha\kappa\alpha\iota\sigma\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\alpha\tau\eta\rho\iota\varsigma$, in which Term the Sun having finish'd XIX Periods, and the Moon CCXXXV, both return'd to the same Place of the Heavens, in which they had been nineteen Years before.

Afterwards it was observ'd, that in the Revolution of every Cycle the Moon out-went the Sun about seven Hours; to prevent this Inconvenience, Calippus contriv'd a new Cycle, which contain'd four of Meton's, that is, LXXVI Years. And upon the Observation of some small Disagreement between the Sun and Moon at the End of this Term. Hipparchus devis'd another Cycle, which contain'd four of those instituted by Calippus. According to other Accounts, one of Meton's Cycles contain'd eight $\epsilon\nu\upsilon\epsilon\alpha\kappa\alpha\iota\delta\epsilon\kappa\epsilon\alpha\tau\eta\rho\iota\varsigma$, i. e. CLII Years. This was afterwards divided into two equal Parts, and from each Part one Day, which was found to be superfluous in Meton's Cycle, was taken away ^u.

From the Grecian Years let us now proceed to their Months. In the Computation of these, they seem neither to have agreed with other Nations, nor amongst themselves. In the Authors of those Times, we find different Months often set against, and made to answer one another: And learn'd Men have hitherto in vain attempted to reconcile these Contradictions. Plutarch in his Life of Romulus owns, that no Agreement was to be found between the Grecian and Roman New Moons. And in the Life of Aristides, discoursing of the Day upon which the Persians were vanquish'd at Platæa, he professeth, that even in his own Time, when the Celestial Motions were far better understood than they had been in former Ages, the Beginnings of their

Months could not be adjusted. These Disagreements seem to have been occasion'd by some of these, or the like Causes :

1. That the Years of different Nations were not begun at the same time. The Roman January, which was their first Month, fell in the Depth of Winter. The Arabians and others began their Year in the Spring *. The Macedonians reckon'd Dius their first Month, from the Autumnal Æquinox. The antient Athenian Year began after the Winter Solstice ; the more modern Athenians computed their Years from the first New Moon after the Summer Solstice. Hence those Men will be exceedingly mistaken, who make the Roman January to answer the Attick Gamelion, or the Macedonian Dius, which are the first Months of those Nations ; or that measure the primitive Attick Year by that, which was us'd after the Time of Meton.

2. That the Number of Months was not the same in all Places. The Romans had at first only ten Months, the last of which was for that Reason term'd December. Afterwards they were increas'd to twelve by Numa Pompilius. The Ægyptians had at first only one Month, which was afterwards divided into four, according to the Seasons of the Year : Some of the barbarous Nations divided their Year into three Months. The same Number of Months was receiv'd by the antient Arcadians. Afterwards the Arcadians parted their Year into four Months ; the Acar-nanians reckon'd six Months to their Year ; but most of the Greeks of later Ages, when the Science of Astronomy had been brought to some Perfection, gave twelve Months to every Year, besides those which were intercalated to adjust the Solar and Lunar Periods.

3. That the Months were not constantly of the same length. Some contain'd thirty Days, others a different Number. Some Nations computed their Months by the Lunar Motions, others by the Motion of the Sun. The Athenians and πλείσαι τῶν νῦν Ἑλληνίδων πόλεων, most of the present Grecian Cities (saith Galen) make use of Lunar Months : But the Macedonians, and all the ἀρχαίοι, antient Greeks, or as some rather choose to read, Ἀνατολῆς, the Asiaticks, with many other Nations, measure their Months by the Motion of the Sun †.

4. That the Months of the same Nations, partly through their Ignorance of the Celestial Motions, and partly by reason of the intercalated Days, Weeks, and Months, did not constantly maintain the same Places, but happen'd at very different Seasons of the Year.

However that be, the Athenians, whose Year is chiefly follow'd by the antient Authors, after their Kalendar was reform'd by Meton, began their Year upon the first New Moon after the Summer Solstice †. Hence the following Verses of Festus Avienus :

Sed primæva Meton exordia sumsit ab anno, Torreret rutilo Phæbus cum fidere Cancrum.

* Conf. Simplicius in lib. v. Physicæ Aristotelis. † Galenus Primo ad i. Epidemiorum Hippocratis librum commentario.

Simplicius in lib. v. Physicæ Aristotelis. † Conf. Plato initio lib. vi. de Legibus.

Their Year was divided into twelve Months, which contain'd thirty and twenty-nine Days alternately; so as the Months of thirty Days always went before those of twenty-nine. The Months which contain'd thirty Days were term'd πλήρεις, full, and δεκαφθινοί, as ending upon the tenth Day; Those which consisted of twenty-nine Days were call'd κοῖλοι, hollow, and from their concluding upon the ninth Day ἐναφθινοί^a.

Every Month was divided into τρία δεκάμηρες, three Decads of Days: The first was μηνὸς ἀρχομένους, or ἰσαμένους. The second, μηνὸς μεσῶντος^b. The third, μηνὸς φθίνοντος, παυομένους, or λήγοντος^b.

I. The first Day of the first Decad was term'd νεομηνία, as falling upon the New Moon. The second, δευτέρη ἰσαμένη. The third τρίτη ἰσαμένη and so forward to the δεκάτη ἰσαμένη.

II. The first Day of the second Decad, which was the eleventh Day of the Month, was call'd αφετη μεσῶντος, or αφετη ἐπὶ δέκα. The second, δευτέρη μεσῶντος, or τρίτη ἐπὶ δέκα. and so forward to the (εἰκάς) twentieth, which was the last of the second Decad.

III. The first Day of the third Decad was term'd πρώτη ἐπ' εἰκάσι. The second, δευτέρη ἐπ' εἰκάσι. The third τρίτη ἐπ' εἰκάσι and so forward. Sometimes they inverted the Numbers in this manner: The first of the last Decad was φθίνοντος δεκάτη. The second φθίνοντος ἑνάτη. The third φθίνοντος ὀγδόη and so forward to the last Day of the Month, which was term'd Δεμετρίου, from Demetrius Poliocertes^c. Before the time of Demetrius it was call'd, by Solon's Order, ἔτη κ' νέα, the Old and New; because the New Moon fell out on some part of that Day; whereby it came to pass that the former Part belong'd to the Old Moon, the latter to the New^d. The same was also nam'd τρεῖςκαθῆς, the thirtieth: and that not only in the Months which consisted of thirty Days; but in the rest of twenty-nine: For, in these, according to some Accounts, the twenty-second Day was omitted; according to others, the twenty-ninth^e. But which Day soever was omitted in the Computation, the thirtieth was constantly retain'd. Hence, according to Thales's first Scheme, all the Months were call'd Months of thirty Days, tho' by Solon's Regulation half of them contain'd only twenty-nine - And the Lunar Year of Athens was call'd a Year of CCCLX Days; tho' really, after the Time of Solon, it consisted of no more than CCCLIV Days. Whence the Athenians erected three Hundred and Sixty of Demetrius the Phalerean's Statues, designing for every Day in the Year one, as we are inform'd by Pliny^f, and the following Verses cited by Nonius from Varro's Hebdomades:

Hic Demetrius æneis tot aptus est,
Quos lucas habet annus absolutus.

The Names and Order of the Athenian Months were these which follow:

1. Ἑκατομβαιῶν, which was πλείους, or δεκαθινός, a Month of thirty Days. It began upon the first new Moon after the Summer Solstice; and so answer'd the latter Part of the Roman June, and the first Part of July. The Name was deriv'd ὑπὸ τῆς πλείους ἑκατόμβαις θύεσσι τῷ μηνὶ τούτῳ, from the greater Number of Hecatombs, which were usually sacrific'd in this Month. But the ancient Name was Κρόνιου or Κρονίων, which was deriv'd from Κρόνια, the Festival of Cronus or Saturn, which was kept in this Month.
